Di-Phi Passes Bill To Limit Legislature

The Di-Phi passed a resolution Wednesday night recommending that the student legislature confine itself to the discussion and passage of legislation which directly concerns the student body and the University campus.

The formation of a second house of the student legislature was recommended in an amendment to the resolution. The amendment submitted by Norwood Pratt advocated an upper house that would concern itself solely with national and international issues that do not concern the student body as a whole.

The first vote among members of the Di-Phi was five to three in favor of the bill. The chamber vote including all those in the hall was 8 to 7 in favor of the bill.

The main arguments against assigning the responsibility of debating off campus issues to the Di-Phi exclusively was that the Di-Phi besides being un-representative of the student body, no longer swung the weight that the legislature possesses.

Norwood Pratt claimed that his idea of forming a second house would remedy that problem by both relieving the regular legislature of the loss of time spent in debating matters which did not directly concern it and by providing representatives elected by the student Body to do the debating.

Representative Randall pointed out that it was asking a lot to expect those people most interested in issues to come to both the legislature, the Di-Phi and another House. He said that there was no question that the upper house idea would detract from the Di-Phi.

Randall then said that the legislature had debated off campus issues since 1947 and that it was about time that the Student Body realized that the student legislature does handle issues which do not directly affect the student body.

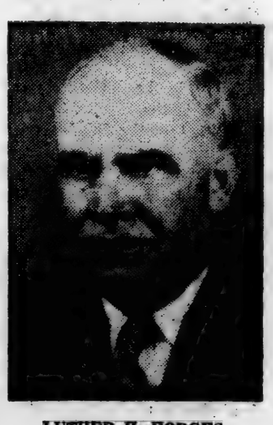
UNC Press To Publish Book By Ex-Governor



LUTHER H. HODGES

A new book by Luther H. Hodges, titled "Businessman in the Statehouse; My Six Years As Governor of North Carolina" has just been completed and will be published in September by the UNC Press, it was announced here today by Lambert Davis, director of the Press.

Gov. Hodges, now U. S. Secretary of Commerce, wrote the book at odd times in the past six months, mainly by means of tape recorder. Preparation of the final manuscript was performed by Charles Dunn, special writer for the Durham Morning Herald and formerly of Ahoskie..

Davis said the book contains the personal recollections of Gov. Hodges and includes conversation and hitherto undisclosed background regarding some of the major developments and controversial issues in North Carolina during his six-year tenure as Governor.

Hodges presents behind-the-scenes details relating to industrial development; the segregation-intergration problem in the state folowing the Supreme Court decisions; the Henderson textile strikes; growing complexities in public and higher education; politics in highway construction; and development of plans for the new Statehouse in Aaleigh, trips to Europe in search for new industry, and a trip to Russia which included a talk with Khrushchev.

He also divulges some of his views as to the future for North Carolina, particularly the Governorship as a position for leadership in shaping the state's destiny.

Davis revealed that he got the idea of the book when he read Gov. Hodges' reports of his Russian trip, and was struck by the Governor's plain-spoken and human-interest revelations. He wrote the Governor and suggested a book.

The Governor disclosed that his Russian trip reports were written after being dictated on a tape recording machine. Davis suggested that he do the same thing in a book.

"When he became Secretary of Commerce, I thought we might have to table the idea," said Davis. "But I found that he was still interested in going ahead with it. So, he has dictated or written out the body of the book, and with an outline and arrangements of categories, Charlie Dunn and the rest of us have worked on the editing."

Miss Harriet Herring of the Institute for Research in Social Science at Chapel Hill also assisted and Ed L. Rankin Jr., Gov., Hodges' former press secretary, checked accounts and made additions.

INFIRMARY

Student Government

Where will student government at Carolina find itself in 10 years? Will it grow to keep pace with the new responsibilities that students must shoulder, or will it continue to confine itself to busy-work projects whose chief merit is citizen's apprentice training.

* * *

Long regarded as one of the most powerful and flourishing in the nation, Carolina's system of student government is living on a reputation that is partly unearned. It is powerful and flourishing only in comparison with other student governments about the country. And the competition isn't very stiff.

* * *

True, student government, even at it new exists, it is an important part of campus life. The core of activity at its center is vital. Yet this core comprises only a small percentage of its scope. The remainder is sound and fury. Most student government's myriad of committees and councils serve only as an afternoon diversion for tomorrow's PTA members and Rotarians. Not that this is either unnecessary or silly; any governmental system must have its petty bureaus to handle trivia.

Most of the work of student government goes into revising and improving old institutions: the Judicial system, publications, and so forth.

* * *

The honor system movie, for instance, was an imaginative and exciting idea. Yet it was new only in that it was a fresh approach to an old problem.

In recent years the number of programs and projects of real scope to come from student government could be counted on the fingers of one hand. The spirit that spawns new ideas has been conspicuously lacking. Hack work, perpetuation of the old order, manipulations by those with vested interests—these have been too much in evidence.

* * *

The last major project undertaken by student government came some years ago with the purchase of dormitory television sets and washing machines. Since that time, the Student Legislature has been consistently wary of any truly new project of importance.

As the enrollment at Carolina grows, the Student Legislature will find itself with more and more money. This fact in itself calls for undertaking more programs of a truly significant nature.

* * *

The strength of youth lies in daring and imagination. Yet most of student government's programs are characterized by the lack of both.

We do not suggest that caution should be thrown to the winds. But imagination need not breed recklessness, nor courage foolhardiness. But in every really worthwhile project there is an element of risk. As long as student government refuses to put its ability and courage on the line, it will continue to be outstanding only in reputation.

Who Is Superior?

The three-man City Commission of Birmingham, Ala., appears to have figured out a way to settle once and for all the ancient controversy as to which is the superior race. It has chosen an interesting way to demonstrate to the world that the white people of its city excel the colored people in magnanimity, kindness, chivalry and general sensibility.

* * *

The word got around Birmingham recently, you see, that Negroes were not patronizing those downtown stores which refused to hire any members of their race as clerks or sales personnel and refused to serve any of them at lunch counters. There was no open boycott, of course; Alabama law forbids two or more persons to conspire or act in concert for the purpose of boycotting a lawful business. It amounts to nothing more than what some Negroes call "selective buying." It has hurt enough, however, to impel the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce to express a hope, unparalleled in piety, that "thinking citizens" would not "seek to punish business concerns for community practices beyond their control."

* * *

Some of the colored citizens were evidently not "thinking," and in order to teach them how to think the Commission, led by that exceptionally thoughtful Alabamian, the former police chief of Birmingham, Eugene (Bull) Connor, voted to withdraw its support from the county program of surplus food for the needy. It is estimated that 95 per cent of the persons receiving surplus food were Negroes. It is hardly likely, of course, that these Negroes on relief were the same as those whose "selective buying" was aimed at diminishing discrimination in the downtown stores.

* * *

Well, it remains to be seen which group in Birmingham will be regarded as superior by the civilized world—those who seek to force fellow human beings into subservience by starvation or those who refuse to patronize stores where members of the group are not treated as human beings.

Indonesia Impatient For Primitive Land

By GERT VANLONKHUYZEN

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — The dispute over West New Guinea is getting hotter, with three conflicting ideas on the political future of the territory, generally considered the most backward place in creation.

Indonesia claims it outright, native leaders demand it as their own, and Holland hangs on to it as a reluctant administrator waiting for a chance to bow out gracefully.

When the colony of the Netherlands East Indies became the sovereign republic of Indonesia in 1949, West New Guinea was excluded from the deal pending a separate agreement between the Dutch government and Javanese revolutionaries.

So many documents relating to the early Dutch-Indonesian independence talks still are secret so that nobody knows precisely for what reasons the territory remained under Dutch administration.

The Dutch argued, however, that the New Guinea papuans had nothing in common with the Indonesians, ethnically or economically.

In later years New Guinea's separation from Indonesia, in the Dutch view, was voted by the U.N.-endorsed principle of self-determination.

Indonesia Threatens Force

Indonesia, after initially agreeing to forego New Guinea for the time being, increased demands for the territory until last year President Sukarno threatened to annex the territory by force.

Meanwhile, the Papuans were being educated towards voicing their own opinion. A legislative council was established a year ago as New Guinea's first "parliament." A two way fight thus became three-cornered.

With an armed conflict threatening in their last remaining Pacific outpost the Dutch often wonder: How did we acquire this area? Why did we decide to occupy a territory which is costing us some 100 million guilders a year?

Naval Commander Jan Carstensz had his first look at New Guinea in 1623 when he glimpsed some "very high mountains, white with snow" and remarked this was unusual for mountains so near the equator.

The first Dutch flag was planted at the west coast 50 years later and another two centuries passed before New Guinea officially became an extension of the Dutch East Indian Empire.

Gets A Capital

New Guinea got a capital fifty odd years ago when a small party of Dutch explorers planted a red-white-and-blue flag in a jungle area on the north coast and christened it Hollandia.

Hollandia first became widely known when American forces landed there and used it as a repair base for their warships and a recreation center for troops prior to Wold War II.

Hollandia still shows traces of Americanization."

A hill still bears the name "MacArthur Hill." The former destroyer repair base is still the main harbor facility, with the old quonset huts and the pier still in use.

In the past years a few modern facilities were added. But the government could not afford to replace the obsolete wartime installations.

Three airstrips, built by the Japanese and improved by the Americans, are still in use today.

The Papuans still remember the days that "Tuan Amerika" Tuan for mister was there. Those were days of incredible splendor.

Shipshape Administration

The Dutch set out to put the entire coastal area under a shipshape administration. Officials started to interrogate Papuans, to duly register them. As far as "name" was concerned, things went smoothly. "Age" proved to be a problem. Even such time-measuring as "last full moon" known to most primitive tribes was unknown in many parts of New Guinea.

Today slightly more than half of West New Guinea's population is "put on paper."

No matter how primitive certain tribes are and how much their economy still depends on hunting swine, kangaroos and birds, spearfishing at sea as well as an the lakes and some agriculture, bananas, sweet potatoes, sago, a good many Papuans are firmly settled as civilized people: Teachers, clerks, technicians, gardeners, patrolmen, businessmen and even a number of them holding a university degree.

The Papuans have no patriotic aspiration. They admit this. But they are anxious to take on their shoulders the burden of leading their country, once independence is won.

They reason that an independent West New Guinea will be able to get whatever kind of help it needs. Many feel it would be stupid to declare themselves either pro-Dutch or pro-Indonesian because that would only limit much needed aid and assistance.

Capital Clubs Are Squirming

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the following dispatch United Press International reporter takes a look at the situation caused by the integration issue in the clubs of the nation's capital.

By HARRY FERGUSON

WASHINGTON, (UPI) — There was a time when a Washington club was a snug harbor for a man seeking safety from family strife. No more. Nowadays he can become involved in an argument at his club just as quickly as he can in his own living room.

The integration issue has set member against member, caused a rash of resignations and made membership in clubs a matter of White House concern.

One of the by-laws of the Cosmos Club hear reads: "No person shall be permitted to recline at length in the public rooms of the club." There is no enforcement problem. The conversational buzz is too loud to permit naps in the big building on Massachusetts Avenue. An architect modeled it after the Petit Trianon at Versailles where Queen Marie Antoinette held court. The Queen is best remembered for her reaction when informed that the people of Paris were in an ugly mood because they had no bread. "Let them eat cake," she said.

The Cosmos Club took no such high-handed attitude when it rejected a Negro for membership. He could eat anything he chose, but not on the premises of the club. His name is Carl Rowan, deputy assistant secretary of state for public affairs, a well known newspaperman and author of several books.

Kennedy Withdrew Application

Immediate results of Rowan's rejection: President Kennedy's application for membership in the Cosmos was withdrawn. Resignations were received from Edward R. Murrow, director of the U. S. Information Agency, historian Bruce Catton and U. S. Ambassador to India J. K. Galbraith who had sponsored Kennedy's name.

There are a dozen top-flight clubs in Washington and the heat now is on all of them. This is the city in which the Supreme Court ordered the racial integration of the nation's schools and a President of the United States sent federal troops into Little Rock, Ark., to enforce the decision.

There is no doubt where the Kennedy administration stands. Last fall George Cabot Lodge sounded out fellow members of the Metropolitan Club, the oldest in Washington, about extending a luncheon invitation to L. P. Weaver, a Negro who was going to succeed him as under-secretary of labor for international affairs. He was told that some of the members might consider it offensive.

The next voice head wa sthat of Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy whose letter of resignation contained this sentence: "It is inconceivable to me, in this day and age, that the privileges of this club which holds such a unique position in the nation's capital would be denied to any one because of his race."

Ambassador Duke Resigned

Another resignation came from Ambassador Angier Biddle Duke, the State Department's chief of protocol. His duties involve the entertainment of diplomats, including Africans.

That's the way things stood when the Cosmos rejected Rowan last January. The reaction shook the walls of the Massachusetts Avenue branch of the Petit Trianon.

Of all the exclusive clubs here, the Cosmos would seem to be the least likely to bar a Negro. Its membership is heavily loaded with liberal egg-heads and, in fact, intellectual achievement is a prime test for admittance. Most of the stories about its members fall into the absent-minded-professor category. Some samples:

—When Woodrow Wilson was proposed for membership, his sponsors were asked: "What are his qualifications." He got in when it was proved he was a competent historian. The fact that he was president of the United States was incidental.

—One day in 1917 news spread through the club that the United States had declared war on Germany. This did not interrupt the discussion of two members, one of whom said: "Well, doctor, you have convinced me that the tapeworm cannot survive in the intestines of the fur-bearing seal."

—When the news of the bombing of Pearl Harbor reached the club, one scientist said to another: "I hate to dispute you, sir, but I think you will find the matter under discussion occurred after the Dinosaur age."

New Resolution Approved

After the reaction to the Rowan rejection reached gale force, the Cosmos promptly approved a resolution to the effect that exclusion of any person "on account of religion, color, race or national origin is incompatible with the principles of the Cosmos Club." In the election for the admissions committee the five newest members privately were pledged against segregation. The prevailing opinion is that the next Negro proposed for membership will make it, although the club may proceed with what the Supreme Court integration decision called "deliberate speed."

But other such top clubs as the Metropolitan, the Chevy Chase Country, the Army and Navy and the University probably will hold the line, or at least try to do so. They have an argument in which President Kennedy, opposed as he is to segregation, can see some logic.

A club is not a public carrier which is compelled to accept everybody who has the price. It actually is an extension of a man's living room and he has the right to choose his friends and dinner companions. No man could argue with much conviction that he has been deprived of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness because he does not belong to a club.

At the risk of being executed at dawn by the combined chiefs of staff, let's have one more story about Washington clubs. It's about a guide who had worked out these capsule descriptions of clubs for the benefit of the tourists he was escorting:

"Cosmos Club: All brains and no money.

"Metropolitan Club: All money and no brains.

If people would use seat belts, we'd be out of work 50 per cent of the time!

Japanese Wins Medal

An American Fumes

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Hon. Timothy Tugbutton invaded the office half mad with anger. The old man banged his cane on the news desk, yanked down all plugged lines on the PBX swithboard and brayed a challenge to the government of the United States.

"I ain't gonna stand for it," the old man shouted. "There was a friend of mine out there at Pearl Harbor on one of those battleships and he was knocked dead when those Japanese came over. It's an outrage."

The old man paused. The slot man remarked that all of that wss 20 years ago and why be shouting it now. This sent Tugbutton into exclamatory orbit.

Medal for Enemy

"Why? I'll tell you why," he shouted. "That's why." The old fellow slapped the news desk with a folded copy of his favorite newspaper, the Alton Kan. Empire, a weekly just arrived. It contained a Page One editorial protesting the award by the U. S. government of a high decoration to a Japanese air officer who helped plan the Pearl Harbor strike.

"What knucklehead ordered that decoration to be pinned on this general name of Minoru Genda? Wait until that young fellow in the White House hears about that. That young fellow in the White House was not playing cribbage when the U. S. was fighting its way back from Pearl Harbor. What did FDR call it, 'the day of infamy, or something like that.

"That young fellow in the White House was out there in the Pacific fighting the Japs and getting his ears pinned back some, too. I'll bet he hasn't forgotten about that and I ain't either.

"Maybe we ought to dig up Hitler if we could find his body an dpin a medal on it or Mussolini's body, the bum. Americans are good fighters but they are better at forgetting. The next big thing after Pearl Harbor was the battle for Corregidor and the capture of the U. S. garrison there.

Death of Captives

"Then there was a death march of the prisoners that went on for days and a lot of them died. Now, if General MacArthur didn't get around to hanging the Jap general who commanded that death march and his whole damned staff then maybe the U. S. government will give him a medal.

"They ain't gonna like this in Arizona, I'll tell you that." Somebody wanted to know why Arizona would be interested.

"Because Corregidor was defended by an Arizona outfit," Tugbutton replied, "and that outfit was captured. You try to pin a medal on this general in some Arizona town and they'd hang him and the medal pinner along with him .Dunno but that it would be a good thing, too.

"This General Genda has been running the Japanese air force and his medal says he got it for exceptionally meritorius conduct in the performance of outstanding services since July 1959.

"Exceptionally meritorious conduct:

"Nuts."

Poetical Potshots

To an artist a husband called Bicket
Said, "Turn your backside, and I'LL kick it.
You have painted my wife
In the nude to the life.
Do you think for a moment that's cricket?"

There was a young man from New York
Whose morals were lighter than cork:
"Young chickens," said he,
"Have no terrors for me:
The bird that I fear is the stork!"

The limerick is furtive and mean;
You must keep her close in quarantine,
Or she sneaks to the slums
And promptly becomes Disorderly, drunk and obscene.

Plaque Honors Psyc Professor Dashiell

By NANCY VON LAZAR

A unique bronze plaque honoring Kenan Professor Emeritus John Frederick Dashiell of the Department of Psychology has just been placed in the main hall of the psychology building. Dr. Dashiell, who is currently a visiting distinguished professor at Florida State University, is nationally noted for his research, leadership and editorial contributions to psychology. He is the founder of the UNC Psychology Department and served as its chairman from 1920 to 1929.

The Psychology Department felt that a sculptored plaque honoring Dr. Dashiell would be a more unusual way of commemorating his service to the University than the routine oil painting.

Last summer, young John McCurdy, the son of Psychology Professor Harold G. McCurdy, challenged the department to let him do the sculpturing job. John had just graduated from Duke University. An amateur painter, he had done several paintings and some portraits in oil, but had never done any sculpturing.

Began Work

Then John Began work on the clay models for the plaque. His success with the plaque stems from his liking for Dr. Dashiell, and he requested that the famous psychologist have some extra photographs made of his hands which are quite special. Dr. Dashiell was at one time a semi-pro baseball player. His hands are part of his character—they are strong and capable looking, with veins which seem to pop right out of the skin.

The plaque was taken to New York by the McCurdys, where it was cast in bronze. The finished product shows Dr. Dashiell holding a rat—Dr. Dashiell was known for his experimentation with white rats; the Psychology building was at one time called the "Museleum." The plaque also represents Dr. Dashiell's work with decision time experiments, picturing a stop watch, and his schematic representation of the nervous system. In the upper left corner of the plaque is an outline of the nervous system.

The plaque is a "straightforward likeness of Dr. Dashiell," said Professor John Thibaut, chairman of the department. "Offhand, I don't know of any other plaque commemorating an important figure in psychology," he said. "We in the department felt it is a unique way of honoring such an important person," he said.

In addition to his work at the UNC Psychology Department here, Dr. Dashiell has also served as the president of the American Psychological Association. He is the author of major psychological texts, including "Fundamentals of Objective Psychology."

How To Be Popular, In Spite Of Your Homely Mug

When Easter vacation comes around, there are really only three sensible things you can do. One is to stay in Chapel Hill, and spend your time browsing in the Intimate. That's sure to make you popular, at least at 119 East Franklin Street.

If you're going home for Easter, stop by the Intimate and pick up a little something for the kid brother or sister. It's hard to realize how old and wise, and important you seem to the kids—but it's a fact, and chum, that kind of admiration is worth the price of a book at Easter!

If you're spending Easter with a friend, don't forget to take along a hostess present. It's the smooth, sophisticated and proper thing to do, and besides, statistics show that four and a half times as many chaps get invited back when they take a hostess gift. Like a book from the Intimate, all gift-wrapped the way we do it.

So whatever is on your Easter schedule, the undersigned emporium can help out. Come see us, chum, come and see us.

John Wayne Stars As Sailor In 'The Long Voyage Home'

Directed by Academy Award winner John Ford and based on four one-act plays by Eugene O'Neill, "The Long Voyage Home" concerns the story of a Swedish sailor aboard the British freighter "Glencairn," during the early days of World War II.

The sailor, played by John Wayne, is anxious to leave the sea and the crew try to help him but the bonds are too strong, and they find themselves forever tied to their ships.

Showings will be in Carroll Hall at 7:30 and 9:30 and students are reminded that it is the policy that there will be no smoking or no refreshments in the Carroll Hall auditorium.

Peace Corps Test Given In Durham PO

Peace Corps placement tests will be given at the main Post Office in Durham on April 21 and at other testing centers throughout the country. All tests will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Accepted applicants will begin training this summer for 30 new Peace Corps projects in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Most persons taking the tests will be those who have filled out Peace Corps questionnaires available at all Post Offices. Others will be permitted to take the tests, however, on a space available basis at the individual testing centers.

Applicants must be American citizens and at least 18 years of age. (There is no upper age limit; persons 60 and older are performing Key Peace Corps jobs overseas.) Married couples without dependent children may apply, providing both qualify.

At the testing centers, each person will be given his choice between two types of Placement Tests. One is for men and women who would like to be considered for positions as teachers. For this, a bachelor's degree is required, but you do not need to be an accredited teacher.

2 Jackson Grants Given N.C. Boys

Two Jackson Scholarships for four years of study here have been awarded to Samuel Ogburn Southern of Raleigh and Hoyle Sidney Broome of Autryville, it has been announced today by Dr. C. O. Cathey, chairman of the Scholarship Committee.

The Jackson Scholarship Fund was established 25 years ago as a memorial to the late Herbert Worth Jackson, native North Carolinian and graduate of UNC. The first Jackson Scholarship was awarded in 1938 to Nelson Ferebee Taylor of Oxford, currently of New York City. Since that time, one scholarship has been awarded each year.

The scholarships are worth $2,800 for four years of study.

This year, two Jackson Scholarships will be offered because Nelson Taylor asked permission "to restore to the late Herbert Worth Jackson Scholarship Trust—as an expression of gratitude—an amount equivalent" to the four year scholarship which he held as a student. This year marks the 20th anniversary of Taylor's graduation from UNC.

Taylor made his wish known to Herbert W. Jackson Jr. of Richmond, Va., a son of the late Herbert W. Jackson for whom the Scholarship Fund is named.

Highest In Class

While at UNC, Taylor made the highest academic average in his class and was elected president of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity.

Of this year's winners, Samuel O. Southern is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard Southern of Raleigh. He is a student at Needham Broughton High School where he has served as president of the Student Council, a National Honor Society delegate to the state convention, and sports writer for the school newspaper among other activities.

Hoyle Sidney Broome Jr. is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Broome Sr. of Autryville. He is a student at Clement High School where his activities have included serving as vice president and president of the Beta Club, three time district winner of the Science Fair, and County Council 4-H president.

Durham Senior To Give Recital

Norman Pendergraft, a senior from Durham, will present a voice recital in Hill Hall Sunday at 8 p.m. The recital is given in connection with the applied music requirements for graduation.

The program will include a variety of songs representing different periods in the history of vocal literature. Included on the program will be works by Handel, Mozart, Schubert, Verdi, and Ralph Vaughn Williams.

Edward Dawson, a music major from Chatham, Va., will be the accompanist. The concert is open to the public without charge.

DUPREE'S

Sportscope

The first month of the ACC spring sports season has zipped by and the North Carolina baseball, golf, track, and tennis teams are heading into the thick of the conference battle.

To no one's surprise the four teams have compiled an admirable 20-5 record, but only four of these contests have been against Atlantic Coast teams. Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton's track team has defeated N. C. State, Clemson, and South Carolina, while Walt Rabb's diamondmen have lost to Wake Forest.

Next week the golf and tennis teams take on ACC competition, the baseballers meet N. C. State, Maryland, and Virginia, and the track team hosts Maryland in the biggest meet of the outdoor season.

Don Skakle's tennis team has posted the most victories, eight in a row, by defeating Dartmouth, Harvard, and Williams twice and Michigan State and MIT once each. The netters jump the gun on the golf team by traveling to Maryland and Virginia for conference matches today and tomorrow. Tuesday they meet Duke at Durham in an important ACC encounter.

Ed Kenney's golfers have an opportunity to stretch their mark to 6-1 this afternoon against Navy. Next week they hit State, Virginia, and Maryland in conference matches and finish the busy week against Georgia and Florida. Only the State contest is on the road.

In addition to their dual meet wins the Tar Heel linksmen finished second in the Florida Intercollegiate Tournament at Ocala. The winner was Houston, possibly the top team in the nation this year. Purdue, last year's defending NCAA champs and a top contender again, handed the single dual match loss to UNC.

The Tar Heel trackmen did well in the Florida Relays, besides winning their three ACC meets easily. They travel to Virginia for the Quantico Relays tomorrow in a preliminary to next Thursday's big meet with the perennial champs, Maryland.

Rabb's baseball men have posted a meager 4-4 record, but only the Wake Forest loss was in ACC competition. The Tar Heels are still very much in the conference pennant race and could have the top hitting crew besides.

Fencers Go South For Meet

The UNC fencing team, fresh from wins over Duke, 14-13, and Johns Hopkins, 17-10, in last weekend's three-way meet at home, travels to Charleston, S. C., this weekend for another tri-meet with arch rival VMI and host The Citadel.

A 5-4 UNC margin in the foil accounted for the victory over Duke and an 8-1 foil victory over Johns Hopkins made possible the seven-point win over the Baltimore boys.

UNC's 7-2 margin over Duke in the sabre competition was balanced out by Duke's 7-2 win in the epee division. Thus the narrow foil victory was by the same margin as the team score.

Likewise, against Johns Hopkins, UNC won the epee competition, 5-4, and lost in sabre, 5-4. The easy win over Johns Hopkins' foil team gave the UNC fencers the victory.

A collegiate fencing team consists of nine men—three in each weapon division. Nine bouts in each division, or a series of 27 bouts decides the team winner. The team with the majority of the 27 is the overall winner while often a winning team may lose in one weapon, but capture enough bouts overall to win the meet.

The New Left Club will meet at 8:30 on Sunday evening in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. Dick Ginnold will read a paper and lead a discussion on Southern Labor. All liberals, socialists and other interested persons are invited to attend.

Daily Tar Heel Athlete Of The Week

GEORGE SOKOL

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

George Sokol is a young man, who since coming to the University of North Carolina in the fall of 1960, has played the game of tennis about as well as anyone could ask.

Sokol, a stocky sophomore out of Haverford, Pa., has yet to lose a tennis match in collegiate competition and last week, ran off four wins on consecutive days to bring his varsity victory string to eight.

For his iron-man four-win performance, the Daily Tar Heel salutes George Sokol as its eighth Athlete of the Week.

George Sokol came to Carolina as a highly-touted national juniors star. Ranked as the 23rd best junior (18 and under) in the country last year, Sokol grew up playing tennis in and around Philadelphia. The lush green grass and clay courts of Merion, Bryn Mawr and Haverford were the proving grounds upon which the 5-10, 170-pounder polished the solid ground strokes and slashing baseline attack which mark his game today.

In 1956, George entered Haverford's Harrelson High School where he went on to become state singles and doubles champion his senior year. In 1960, the court phenom won both the men's and juniors' championships of Philadelphia and was named the number one Mid-States' player.

Last year, armed with these impressive credentials, Sokol along with Ted Hoehn and Sam Applegate proved pillars of UNC's finest frosh team ever.

In last week's matches, George Turned back Harvard's Paul Sullivan twice, 9-7, 6-2 and 6-3, 10-8 and followed this up with wins over Williams' John Botts (6-3, 6-4) and Ned Shaw (6-2, 6-2).

This is just a sampling of what this blonde, nut-brown tennis star has been doing for the past two years. As number one man, George Sokol is the vital cog in Coach Don Skakle's tennis machine—one which may very well be headed to an NCAA Championship.

Carolina Golfers Seek Sixth Win Today Against Middies

By Curry Kirkpatrick

UNC's crack golf team, winner of five of six dual matches but idle since a week ago yesterday, returns to action this afternoon when the Tar Heels entertain Navy at 1:30 on Finley Golf Course.

Coach Ed Kenney's linksmen, dotted with sophomores but led by an All-American senior, have lost only to defending national champion Purdue in their six meets. Carolina opened the season with a second-place finish at Ocala, Fla., in the Florida Invitational Tourney and has since then, downed Ohio U., Princeton, Michigan State, and Dartmouth twice to offset that Purdue loss.

Pete Green, blond captain from Franklin, Mich., Jay Harris, a junior from Mebane, N. C., and Greensboro senior George Murphy have been the big guns for Kenney this year, but it has been the steady performances of a group of sophomores that have made the record what it is.

Second-year men Harvie Hill, Abe Andes, Jere Ayers, Mike Dore, and Sam McNairy have all played steady golf for Carolina as has senior John Brabson to contribute much to the team's current success.

Green, the All-American senior, and Harris have both been low man for the Tar Heels twice this year, with Hill and Dore capturing medal honors once each. Murphy, Ayers, and Andes have also shared low honors on one occasion.

GAME SWITCHED

A scheduled baseball game between North Carolina and South Carolina on May 12 at Columbia, S. C., has been switched to Chapel Hill on April 30, Coach Walter Rabb has announced.

Rabb said South Carolina had requested the change because of a May 12 conflict with the Atlantic Coast Conference track meet. The Gamecocks also play the Tar Heels here on Saturday, April 28.

Interviews For Committee
SG Chairmen Begin Monday

By HARRY DeLUNG

Inman Allen and Mike Lawler, student body officers, announced yesterday that appointmnts to student government committees will begin this Monday. Interviews for committee chairmen will be held April 16 and 17 between 2:00 and 5:30; committee members will be considered after spring holidays between April 10 and May 4.

The president and vice president emphasized the importance of the committees in carrying out much of the planning and direct action of the executive and legislative branch.

"It is through these active bodies that all students have the opportunity to participate in the programs of their student government," Lawler stated, who further pointed out that the committees provided students with a chance to express their personal interests and the needs of their particular living areas.

Student Concern Needed

Allen noted that problems areas of social conditions, honor system, and student autonomy which were discussed during the campaign cannot be forgotten by the students, but must have their continued concern through committee work.

Experience will be stressed as a qualification for those considered for chairman positions. Students interested in these key positions should consider their knowledge of the particular area covered by each committee.

Interest Important

The prime factor looked for among those applying for membership on any committee will be their interest. Lawler stressed his and Allen's concern that freshmen come in for interviews for posi-

French Encircle Oran

ALGIERS (UPI) — The French army encircled Oran with a double ring of armored cars and barbed wire Friday while heavily armed security forces carried out a house-by-house search for Secret Army OAS commandos in the heart of the city.

Oran has been a center of OAS resistance and it was there security forces captured renegade Gen. Edmond Jouhaud, leader of the extremist forces in Oran. In Paris a special military court convicted Jouhaud for his part in the activities of the OAS.

In Friday's action the army set up a heavy guard on the main roads of the port city to block any escape route to members of the OAS. It also ringed the central downtown area while the search continued .

Gendarmes moved slowly and methodically through the section in search of remnants of the OAS. There was no announcement on the number of OAS terrorists rounded up or the quantity of arms and ammunition captured.

It was in Oran Thursday that security forces fought a five-hour street battle with the OAS in a major blow against the secret group that has resorted to a campaign of terror to block Algerian independence and to try to keep Algeria a part of France.

2 Easter Egg Hunts In VV

Two Easter Egg hunts will be held for children in Victory Village today, sponsored by the Victory Village Board of Aldermen. The hunts will be postponed until Sunday in case of rain.

One hunt, for toddlers four and under, will be held within the Jackson Circle playground at 10 a.m.

The other hunt, for children five and over, will be held in the weeded area along Mason Farm Road at the intersection of Hibbard St. Children in this hunt will assemble at the Victory Village Nursery School at 3 p.m.

Prizes will be given at each hunt for the most eggs found, and for the lucky golden egg and the lucky silver egg.

Big Steel Bows To Pressure

Two Companies Rescind Price Increases

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Big steel unconditionally surrendered to President Kennedy's relentless pressure Friday and abandoned plans to increase prices.

One after another, the industry's giants churned out announcements that the battle was over. The clincher was the surrender of U.S. Steel Corp., which started the price parade Tuesday night.

The company, by far the nation's biggest producer, rescinded its $6 a ton increase late Friday afternoon. Second-ranking Bethlehem Steel already had done so.

It was a tretmendous victory for Kennedy, who, cold with anger, had denounced big steel Wednesday for its "irresponsible defiance" of the public interest. He and his aides used a combination of public denunciation and backstage missionary work to achieve their goal.

The President was in Norfolk, Va., attending U.S. Atlantic Fleet maneuvers, when he was informed of Bethlehem's action. He beamed with delight.

The U.S. Steel announcement was made in Pittsburgh by its president, Leslie B. Worthington. He said "the price decision was made in the light of competitive developments today and all other current circumstances including the desire for the removal of a serious obstacle to proper relations between government and business."

Inland Steel Co. and Kaiser Steel broke ranks first by announcing they would not hike their prices. This created a competitive situation which Board Chairman Roger Blough of U.S. Steel had acknowledged Thursday might force the big companies to change their plans.

There was no detailed word as to the Kennedy's administration future course now that it had won its battle. But a spokesman said the Justice Department would go ahead with a grand jury investigation to see if the industry had violated the antitrust laws.

President Names McDevitt Assistant

By BILL WUAMETT

Larry McDevitt was appointed Presidential Assistant Thursday by President Inman Allen and his appointment was confirmed Thursday night by a unanimous vote of the Student Legislature.

Both Allen and Vice-President Mike Lawler expressed their confidence in McDevitt by saying that the "best man had been appointed for the post."

McDevitt may be unconsciously following in the footsteps of SP presidential candidate Dwight Wheless as he fills the office that Wheless attempted to use as a springboard to the presidency this spring.

Both Were Floorleaders

Wheless held the post last year and was also floorleader of the Student Party in the Legislature as McDevitt is floorleader of the University Party now. It is expected that he will have a major role in carrying Allen's proposed legislation to the floor of the Legislature.

Lawler, who defeated McDevitt for the vice-presidency in a runoff election this spring, said that he was encouraged by the appointment in that, "Larry is a hard worker and brings with him a broad background of experience in student government.

"The concept of the job has expanded from that of a personal secretary for the president to that of a direct liaison to the Legislature and the student body as a whole."

Committee Overseer

As presidential assistant, McDevitt will be responsible for overseeing the work of all student government committees. He will also be responsible for informing Allen on the actions of the Legislature and will handle all correspondence coming into the President's office.

It is also anticipated that McDevitt will be in charge of some of the special student government projects advocated by Allen during his campaign, such as the regularly scheduled meetings with dorm advisers.

Morehead Scholar

McDevitt is a sophomore from Asheville and a Morehead Scholar. He has served in the Legislature for two years and has been co-chairman of the State Affairs Committee and a member of the Orientation Committee.

He is a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity and has served as its IFC representative. He was tapped into the Order of the Grail and the Beanbirds this spring.

Speaker Slated On May 3

Professor John Schnorrenberg of the Art Department has been been chosen to deliver the Spring Last Lecture of 1962. The address is scheduled for Thursday, May 3 and will be given at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

Professor Schnorrenberg's lecture will be entitled "The Last Enemy" and will include the thoughts that he would like most to leave with American college students if he knew this were his last lecture.

Slides will be used for the first time in a last lecture as Schnorrenberg intends to use noted works of art to illustrate points in his lecture. Schnorrenberg will be introduced by Walter Dellinger, chairman of the Last Lecture Series.

Schnorrenberg, a native of Asheville, attended Christ School and received his A.B. in English and his M.A. in the History of Art from UNC. He was at Princeton University from 1954 to 1958 and received his MFA from there in 1957.

One of the university's most popular lecturers, Schnorrenberg has taught the introductory courses here in the history and interpretation of painting, sculpture, and architecture, as well as several advanced courses.

His field of specialty is the Late Middle Ages in Northern Europe and he is currently working on problems of Gothic Survival Architecture in England.

The Last Lecture Series was established three years ago by the Student Legislature. Lecturers in the past have included Dr. Bernard Boyd, Dr. George V. Taylor, Dr. Maurice Natanson, and Coach Frank McGuire.

SG Appropriates $600 For African To Study At UNC

Six hundred dollars was appropriated by the Legislature Thursday night to pay tuition costs for an African student to study here next year. The remainder of the student's expenses will be paid for by the federal government.

The appointments of Larry McDevitt as Presidential Assistant and Carol Clayton as president of the Women's Athletic Association were approved unanimously at the start of the two-hour session.

The body heard a resolution from the Di-Phi advocating the creation of a second house of the Legislature to pass resolutions on national and international affairs, and declaring that the present legislature should confine itself to issues that directly concerned the campus.

Fourth On List

Speaker Mike Lawler also read the body a communication informing the members that the Legislature had received fourth place on the weekly Designation List of the Chez Hickory Senate.

Five posts were filled by election as George Rosenthal (SP) and John McMillan (UP) were named to the Consolidated University Committee; Haines McFadden was selected as a member of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors, and Jean Yoder and Charles Cooper were elected to the Publications Board.

African Student Debate

In the debate over the African Student Bill, introduced by Larry McDevitt, the body was asked for swift action on the bill due to the fact that university officials had unintentionally committed UNC to participate in the program before the funds were available.

It was then brought out that the funds must definitely be available by Monday if UNC were to participate, and that the Legislature was the only place the money could be found on such short notice.

During the debate, the body heard Goettingen Scholar Ditmar Schnitker speak of contacts he had had with African students now studying in this country who had said that it would be better for the United States if they had stayed in Africa.

Students Not Accepted

He said the students stated that nowhere in this country had they really been accepted as equals and friends, and that the family of one of the students had stayed with had been slowly isolated from their friends. He spoke at the request of Beth Wallace (SP).

Schnitker said in answer to a question from the floor that he was in favor of the bill, but that he wanted the legislators to know what they were getting into.

Son Of Tsarist Diplomat Says:

Communist Danger Within

By GARRY BLANCHARD

The historian son of a Tsarist diplomat, discussing "The Rhythm of Russian History," says in effect it's been one darn swing after another.

Dr. Andrei Rostovsky, professor emeritus of the University of Michigan and currently visiting professor of history at Davidson College, says the history of Russia has been one of "slow accumulation and violent release." There have been five such major swings and explosions, he says, the last one being the Communist revolution of 1917. The others, he feels, occurred roughly in 1240, 1480, 1700 and 1860, with each being caused by the rise to power of a strong leader.

New Swing Starting

The 69-year-old historian, who came to America in 1930, told the Graduate History Club Thursday there are indications that Russia has begun a new swing, although where it will end up and when the next explosion will occur, there is no way of telling.

Communism's central danger—especially in Russia—is from within, the historian said, as the men it has made scholars are beginning to question its basic beliefs.

Dr. Rostovsky said Russia is becoming more and more conservative because her leaders wish to safeguard Communism's material accomplishments, and her people want no more of the strife that has punctuated the last 45 years of Russian history. But he warned that this change in manner does not mean there has been a change in goals. It's just that Russian tactics have become less violent, he said.

Unfriendly Brothers

Dr. Rostovsky expressed doubt that the apparent split between Russia and Red China is the result of a historic conflict between the two nations—as columnist Walter Lippman recently suggested—but is instead the result of Russian expansion eastward and Chinese expansion westward. In any event, he said, "Russia and China are sticking together like two brothers who hate each other but realize that they need each other."

The main difference between the two Red giants, he said, is that China is still in the first, or militant, stage of Communism, while Russia has advanced to the coexistence stage.

Dr. Rostovsky fought in the Russian Army during World War I and against the Communists in the 1917 Russian Revolution.

UNC Economist Says:

Steel Hike 'Crucial' Decision

UNC Econoist Milton S. Heath says that the current case of the steel price increase involves two major points for consideration: whether this is a matter of cost-price increase, justifiable on its own merits in a market-guided system; or whether it is a matter to be settled politically.

The economic problem, according to Professor Heath, is whether the costs of steel production have risen during the recent period of stable steel prices to the extnt stated by Roger Blaugh, chairman of the United States Steel Corp.

If such is the case, he says, then an increase in steel prices would appear to be a justifiable adjustment to change in costs, which is what an economist would expect in a free price market.

Not Price-Wage Specialist

Emphasizing that he is not a 'specialist" on matters involving price-wage increases, nor on all the facts underlying the current U.S. Steel decision which has resulted in the raising of prices by other steel companies, Professor Heath said, nonetheless, that it is a "crucial decision."

The decision can have all kinds of ramifications, he said. "I would be inclined to think," he stated, "that they would have been loathe to raise their prices unless they actually were squeezed."

Economic Disagreement

"These problems are matters about which economists differ greatly," he said. "Economists differ about the basic causes of such price decisions." He said that the trend of costs and prices of the economy is upward, and rather than accept lower prices and wages, both industry and labor would rather have unemployment.

"These upward pressures raise costs," said Professor Heath. "The people who can not make the 'up' turn to government," he said. By this, he means industries and laborers turn to the government for assistance.

"To answer the question of the steel price increase, one needs to analyze all the facts," said Professor Heath. "Economists are now living in a new price-structure world where the price-cost relationships and monetary costs mean all kinds of new relationships of cause and effect," he said.

Deep Causes Of Increase

"The basic causes underlying the steel price decision go far deeper than the immediate situation," he said. "Furthermore, we must remember that the decision under a free enterprise economy and in the light of the facts as they see them, is after all the responsibility of the steel company executives," he said.

"It may be that the fundamental issue is whether steel companies must make adjustments to market forces or to much broader economic and political forces with which the government is primarily concerned," he concluded.

The Time Is Past

Attendance at the Yankee opener with Baltimore probably benefited from the teacher's strike in New York Wednesday. When more than 22,000 of the city's teachers failed to show up for work, there was little else for the students to do besides go to the ball game.

But aside from a boosted Yankee gate receipt, any good that will come from the strike has yet to materialize. The teachers were ordered back to work Thursday—without the pay increase—and the students returned, most of them, to classes. The United Federation of Teachers had asked a substantial increase in salaries. They now range from $4800 to $8600 a year, plus bonuses. The UFT sought to increase the figures to $5400 to $9500 a year, plus bonuses.

New York's teachers are apparently angry. They chose to go along with the UFT's call to strike in open defience of the Condon-Wadlin Act which prohibits strikes by public employees under penalty of dismissal and forfeiture of pay increases if and when they are rehired. Despite the heavy threat represented by the Act, the teachers rose up in strong protest.

The strike, dire though its consequences were in terms of the chaos it created in New York's schools, was wholly in order. For decades teachers have suffered under inadequate salaries. The knowledge that a teacher's strike has its most telling effect on the children and not the school boards or the state has kept many a teacher on the job at a pitifully low pay rate.

* * *

The fact that the teachers were so disgruntled that they struck in full knowledge of this, and in defiance of the law, should provide a lesson not only for the people of New York, but for every person in the country. The time when dedication was enough to keep a teacher on the job is past.

Steel Price Hike

The decision of U. S. Steel to rescind its decision to boost prices marked a victory of the Kennedy Administration. Secretary McNamara's announcement that military steel buying would be shifted to mills which did not go along with the price hike took hold.

* * *

Inland Steel, the country's eighth largest producer, was the key factor. Inland refused to go along with the price hike, putting the pressure on U. S. and Bethlehem. Had all the companies followed the lead of U. S. by raising prices and then standing firm, the Adminisration would have had to rely on what probably would have been a lengthy grand jury investigation which may or may not have been effective.

* * *

The President acted quickly and commendably in taking action against the move to increase prices. His denunciation of U. S. for its announcement of the hike set the stage for the rapid moves which stopped the increase.

* * *

Along with Kennedy, the heroes of the action were Inland, Arnco, Kaiser and smaller companies which held off, stopping a sweeping increase throughout the industry before it could take hold.. These companies acted in the best interests of the country.

* * *

President Kennedy hailed the Inland decision in particular as "very good." Roger Blough, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel, had said Thursday it might be difficult to stick with the $6-a-ton hike if Inland and Arnco refused to follow. Apparently it proved more difficult than Blough imagined.

Racism Is Racism

Representative Adam Clayton Powell of New York has been under fire of late from several quarters, not the least of which has been the New York Times. Calling attention to Powell as "an almost unsurpassed absentee through his years in Congress," the Times points out that Powell's wife, who holds down a $13,000-a-year job as a secretary, also earns her salary in absentia. She is in Puerto Rico.

Regardless of this and other criticism equally, if not more barbed, from other areas, Powell will probably win reelection. The Negro Congressman is a skillful politician. His speeches, if demogogic, are powerful.

His constituents follow him with a fervor that borders on the religious, and it would be as difficult to unseat Powell in his district in New York as it would be to get him elected to the same position from a district in Alabama.

Powell rides on a crest of racism. The fact that it is racism in favor of a Negro makes it nonetheless reprehensible. Demogouery in the form of hatred of the black man is vile. Yet it is equally worthy of censure when it rides a unfit man into office year after year because he IS Negro.

U.S. Changes Attitude To West Berlin

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

An important change has taken place in United States policy toward West Berlin.

Until recently, U. S. reaction to Soviet threats against the city primarily was military.

The military phase received stepped-up emphasis after President Kennedy's 1961 Vienna meeting with Nikita Khrushchev in which the Soviet leader placed a year-end deadline on a peace treaty with East Germany and abolition of Allied rights in West Berlin.

Tense moments followed as Gen. Lucius Clay arrived in Berlin to be the President's personal representative and the U. S. began re-establishing its rights on the German city.

Threat to Morale

Now a second phase equal to the military is being emphasized.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk left Geneva with the belief that so long as the Soviet challenge remains, there also remained a serious threat to West Berlin morale and a subsequent threat to investment and production.

On this baisis then, Soviet harassing tactics in the air corridors represented less a challenge to Allied rights of free access than to the spirit and economic health of West-Berlin—an attempt to discourage establishment of new business and to encourage West Berliners to leave.

In answer, the United States is trying to encourage U. S. firms with operations in Germany to open branches in West Berlin. Student exchanges are being considered, as are suggestions to make West Berlin universities centers for international education programs.

Population Loss

West Berlin gained steadily in population from 1953 to 1958 when Khrushchev issued his first ultimatum against the city. Since then, there has been a slow but steady decline.

The population which reached a peak of 2.2 million in 1950 has been projected to 1964 at an even two million.

German government officials explain it partially by the fact that Berlin is a city of the old, with a death rate far exceeding the birth rate.

But it also is true that West Berlin's work force has diminished at a rate of between 15,000 and 20,000 a year since 1958.

Formerly, the city replenished its work force with refugees from the East. The Soviet-erected wall cut off that flow to scarcely more in a year than used to arrive in a week.

Exit The B-52, Enter The RS-70

On the SAC base runway a silvery jet bomber stands poised for takeoff. Huge and streamlined, length 157 feet, wing span 185, the magnificent warplane shudders from the massive vitality of its engines. Eight Pratt and Whitney turbojets blast off, pouring out streams of searing heat merged with a crashing din that seems like the voice of a magnified acetylene torch, hovering on a pitch between scream and thunder.

The Boeing B-52 glides smoothly down the runway. Its airframe glitters with a sleek menace; the engines press onward toward the peak thrust of 80,000 pounds. Spectators see an airplane that cost nine million dollars to build, total weight 200 tons, loaded with superadvanced radar devices and complex navigation instruments. Yet its crew totals a mere six—less than half the crew of a B-36, its used-up predecessor.

The plane gathers speed; the engines thrust more and more forcefully; now with a cautious lurch the Stratofortress heaves aloft, soaring upward in a low ascending slant. Its rate of climb steadily increases, the ship hoisted by the aerodynamic principle of lift—the disruption of air pressure above and below each wing, with the greater pressure underneath, forcing the wing upward. Cruising altitude is attained, and the B-52 levels into flight, elevation 55,000 feet, darting forward at 650 mph, slicing the lower levels of the stratosphere. The wings cut through the air with an awesome, sweptback cleavage.

America's Sunday punch is on airborne alert: range over 6,000 miles, nuclear cargo 25 tons, airframe top-notch in speed, mobility, and firepower. The destruction that it carries makes all the carnage of World War II seem trival. During that war the Anglo-American bomber fleets brought death to at least 500,000 German civilians (deliberately the figure is set low) and gravely injured roughly a million. The two atomic bombs on Japan racked up a sickening total of 115,000 dead But the bomb of ONE B-52 swings a greater potential than all this in combination.

Ever since 1952, when the prototype B-52 made its flight, this has been our main strategic deterrent But to penetrate the maximum distance, to be truly intercontinental, the B-52 needs tanker support, and midflight refueling means a sharp reduction in speed. Also, a theoretical range of 6,000 miles does not mean a sure combat radius of 3,000. Navigational errors, the need for target-searching, the possible need for evasive action on target run, all mean additional fuel consumption and cutback in range.

Though vulnerable to a missile defense, the B-52 heavyweight has little to fear from fighter interception. The newest model carries Skybolt ballistic missiles—quite enough to handle anything that flies. But even a B-52 cannot dodge ground-to-air missiles, and for this exclusive reason its crews can scent the whiff of obsolescence. And it will here bear repeating that the age of the missile is still in its formative period. The immediate successor to the B-52 is not the ICBM but the North American RS-70, with its superior range ,23-mile altitude, and Mach 3 speed. There is no longer talk of a "missile gap;" this was a CIA myth. The time is not ripe for this country, or for Russia, to concentrate on all-msisile strategy.

Our sweptwing heavyweight is still worth the cost of production, but its planned successor, the RS-70, will soon be desperately needed. And so the legislative-executive battle thunders on. Congressmen and Air Force planners want this deltawing miracle badly enough to push for it with all they have.

But an RS-70 prototype will fly this December, regradless. Its performance will probably be sufficient to melt down executive opposition. And meanwhile that opposition is intense—so much so that the planners have lost the first round.

Military Space Launches To Be Conducted In Secret

By CHARLES W. CORDDRY

WASHINGTON (UP) — The administration has determined that space is going to be a secret realm as far as U. S. military operations there are concerned.

Aimed chiefly at banishing from the news any information about satellites that have the unsavory designation "spy in the sky," the Defense Department has ordered that all military space launches will be conducted in secrecy from now on.

The department will admit something has been launched—but after it has been launched. What it was will remain a mystery.

There is a rough sort of parallel which may illustrate what the government has in mind in the crackdown, which was ordered by Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatric March 23, but not announced.

To Avoid Provocation

There is more than a hint here that an underlying goal of the new satellite secrecy is to avoid any publicity that could give the Soviets grounds for yelling "provocation."

The Russians know quite well that America is developing both missile-warning and intelligence satellites called Midas and Sames. But Defense Department reasoning is that they may be less annoyed and less prone to protest about it if America keeps quiet about what it is doing.

The new order-banning press coverage of military space launches, and concealing the identy of all military space craft in orbit—is the clumination of actions started in this administration's first days.

President Kennedy Called on the press to exercise self censorship on sensitive matters .Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara became so concerned about weapons data that he told Congress the Russians should be led to think the Nike Zeus antimissile missile was the greatest thing ever devised. instead of reading about its weakness.

Bends To Task

McNamara set about to reduce what he called the vast library of military data in the public domain. A key target was military spacecraft, about which there has been diminishing information while space activity has been steadily expanding.

This week's secret launching, apparently of a prototype warning or reconnaissance satellite, was the fourth in five months about which nothing much has been said.

A real test o fthe policy will come in a year or two when the air force gets ready to fly its Dyna Soar, a manned spacecraft to be boosted into orbit by a Titan III missile and to he flown back to earth under its own control. It is a forerunner of the vehicle with which future space forces will be equipped.

There is a school of thought which holds that America, as a nation which will not attack first in all out war, must have overwhelming superiority in some new deterrent approach. Besides revolutionary weapons, this thinking holds, there must be military space applications which wipe out Russia's advantage of surprise missile attack and prevent accidental missile-triggering incidents.

Progress toward the goal apparently is being made. But the speed of this program seemingly will have to be taken on faith from now on.

'Getchya' Garbage Can

To the Editor:

We are subject to the whims of local in merchants in what ever they choose to charge us for their wares.

The new W. T. Grant store offers new conpetition, thus, it would normally be something for us to be grateful for. But for some strange reason they don't seem to realize we are here.

They offer garbage cans, clothes pins, stamp books and rubber plants as come-ons for their opening. This isn't exactly the sort of thing that gives students a good impression They may go out to get free donuts, but its not very likely that they'll keep coming.

The topper—Grants doesn't even have button-down shirts.

Sino-Russo Split Shows Up In Laos

By Arthur J. Dommen

HONG KONG (UPI)—Many Asians and Americans are wondering why the United States supports the formation of a Laotian government that would include the pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels.

They believe that a coalition government of the three Laotian factions—the pro-Western Royal government the neutralists, and the rebels—might fall, sooner or later, to the Communists.

But one factor of enormous importance in the Communist world has emerged since China was lost to the Communists. It is that the United States is no longer dealing with a single center of Communist influence in the world.

There are two headquarters of the world Communist movement today, one in Moscow and one in Peiping. And they are becoming more and more independent of each other.

Peiping Causing Conflict

While neither Red China nor the U. S. wants to commit its troops to a fight for Laos, Peiping is wholeheartedly supporting an active "national liberation movement" in Laos which conflicts directly with the interests of both Washington and Moscow.

The idea of a largely uncontrolled Chinese center of Communist expansion is a new and frightening one.

Even Chiang Kai-shek reportedly no longer regards the Chinese Communists as mere puppets of their Soviet masters.

Peiping, meanwhile, continually proclaims its backing for "national liberation movements," in South Viet Nam, in Thailand, in the Philippines, in Africa and Guatemala.

If recent economic difficulties have cooled the Red Chinese propensity for siding with "the people" against their governments, there has been no sign of it.

Peiping's view of how "imperialism" should be driven backwards by the two-pronged spearhead of "armed struggle" coupled with "struggle by negotiation" was set forth last month.

Used Double Tactics

"To deal with imperialism's counter-revolutionary tactics," the Chinese leaders said in a people's daily editorial outlining the significance of the victory of the insurgents in Algeria, "the Algerian patriotic forces correctly used the revolutionary double tactics of combining armed struggle with negotiation."

The editorial added:

"Under the hammer blows of the peoples forces, the imperialists and colonialists, driven into a corner, are often forced to accept peaceful agreements."

Then it warned:

"But when they think they can get away with it, they will violate and even scrap these agreements.

"There have been innumerable examples and lessons of this in the past."

In Peiping's view, the United States is "violating" the May 3, 1961, ceasefire agreement in Laos by continuing to arm and equip the Royal government's forces, now said to number 60,000 men. Peiping has been attacking the U. S "double game" of verbally supporting a Laos coalition while at the same time arming the anti-Communists.

How To Be Popular, In Spite Of Your Homely Mug

When Easter vacation comes around, there are really only three sensible things you can do. One is to stay in Chapel Hill, and spend your time browsing in the Intimate. That's sure to make you popular, at least at 119 East Franklin Street.

If you're going home for Easter, stop by the Intimate and pick up a little something for the kid brother or sister. It's hard to realize how old and wise, and important you seem to the kids—but it's a fact, and chum, that kind of admiration is worth the price of a book at Easter!

If you're spending Easter with a friend, don't forget to take along a hostess present. It's the smooth, sophisticated and proper thing to do, and besides, statistics show that four and a half times as many chaps get invited back when they take a hostess gift. Like a book from the Intimate, all gift-wrapped the way we do it.

So whatever is on your Easter schedule, the undersigned emporium can help out. Come see us, chum, come and see us.

Dr. Orne To Direct US Book Exchange

Head Librarian Dr. Jerrold Orne has been named president of the United States Book Exchange, a private non-profit corporation engaged in cooperative exchange and services to libraries on a national and international scale.

Orne's election puts him in command of an organization that has over 3,500,000 items and serves 2,100 institutions. He previously was vice-president of USBE, which is sponsored by ten of the principal library associations of the United States in addition to seven major educational national organizations.

Orne became head librarian at UNC in 1957 after a long engagement in library work for the federal government. He was Director of Libraries, Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala. from 1951 through 1957.

Prior to that he served as chief of the libraries division of the office of technical service in the Department of Commerce; reference consultant to the Library of Congress, and consultant to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

He is a native of St. Paul, Minnesota, and received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of Minnesota, later studying at the Sorbonne in Paris, then at the University of Chicago, where he received in 1939 his Ph.D. degree.

In 1940 he won his bachelor's degree in library science from the University of Minnesota.

Soviets Reject Appeal

LONDON (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Friday rejected an appeal by President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to agree to a nuclear test ban safeguarded by international controls, authoritative sources said.

Khrushchev, in a note to Macmillan, called instead for a moratorium on testing without inspection, the sources said. There was no official disclosure of the contents of the note, which is under study in London and Washington.

Tests Still On

Russsia broke a previous unpoliced testing moratorium last September with its massive series of test explosions, and President Kennedy said last month that the United States never would accept such an agreement again. New U. S. tests are scheduled in the next few weeks if Russia does not agree to an inspected ban. There were these other developments on the testing issue:

—In Moscow, informed sources said Khrushchev's reply criticized the Western leaders, charging they made their appeal for the sake of world public opinion, after test resumption had been agreed on.

Further details of the reply are expected to be made public in Moscow tomorow.

Moliere's Play Given New 'Twist'

In a free adaptation of Moliere's play "The Doctor in Spite of Himself" the Revelers of Guilford College, directed by Donald Deagon, brought the house down during the second day of the State Drama Festival now in progress here when the eight-member cast suddenly broke out in a jubilant Twist.

Written in 1666 as a rollicking farce with barbs for the medical profession, the new translation was staged in modern street clothes with such characters as moonshiners, big-time gangsters, hoods, and sexy sirens frequenting the stage.

Moliere's domestic farce normally ends when a headstrong young couple is reunited through the efforts of the friendly doctor—but in the jazzed-up Playmaker version, written by Guilford College student Hawie Krakow with additional dialogue added by the cast—the doctor leads the hoods, the sirens, and the lovers all in a frantic Twist.

British Airstrip Topic For New Book By Higham

Dr. Robin Higham, assistant professor of history, is the author of a new book on British aeronautical affairs entitled "The British Rigid Airship, 1908-1931; A Study in Weapons Policy."

Dr. Higham used Admiralty, Air Ministry and private papers, hitherto unavailable, in the preparation for this book. In the book, he traces the evolution of a marginal weapon from its inception on a suggestion of Prime Minister Asquith to its denoument in which the Secretary of State for Air was killed.

During 1960-61, Dr. Higham was on a leave of absence to do a study of the British armed forces between the wars. This study has been completed and turned in to the publishers who agreed to a contract before the writing began.

Professor Higham received a B.A. degree from Harvard in 1950. He received an M.A. degree in 1953 from Claremont and a Ph.D. degree in 1957 from Harvard. He is the author of "Britain's Imperial Air Routes, 1918-1939," his first book.

CRAM COURSE No. 3: ENGLISH POETRY

Final exams will soon be upon us. This is no time for fun and games. Let us instead study hard, cram fiercely, prepare assiduously.

In this column today let us make a quick survey of English poetry. When we speak of English poetry, we are, of course, speaking of Byron, Shelley, and Keats. Some say that of the three, Keats was the most talented. It is true that he displayed his gifts earlier than the others. While still a schoolboy at St. Swithin's he wrote his epic lines:

If I am good, I get an apple,
So I don't whistle in the chapel.

From this distinguished beginning, he went on to write another 40,000 poems in his lifetime—which is all the more remarkable when you consider that he was only five feet tall!

I mention this fact only to show that physical problems never keep the true artist from creating. Byron, for example, was lame. Shelley had an ingrown hair. Nonetheless, these three titans of literature turned out a veritable torrent of romantic poetry.

Nor did they neglect their personal lives. Byron, a devil with the ladies, was expelled from Oxford for dipping Elizabeth Barrett's pigtails in an inkwell. He thereupon left England to fight in the Greek war of independence. He fought bravely and well, but women were never far from his mind, as evidenced by this immortal poem:

How splendid it is to fight for the Greek,

While Byron fought in Greece, Shelley remained in England, where he became court poet to the Duke of Marlborough. (It is interesting to note in passing that Marlborough was the original spelling of Marlboro Cigarettes, but the makers were unable to get the entire word on the package. With characteristic ingenuity they cleverly lopped off the final "gh". This, of course, left them with a "gh" lying around the factory. They looked for some place to put it and finally decided to give it to the Director of Sales, Mr. Vincent Van Go. This had a rather curious result. As plain Van Go, he had been a crackerjack director of sales, but once he became Van Gogh, he felt a mysterious, irresistible urge to paint. He resigned from the Company and became an artist. It did not work out too well. When Van Gogh learned what a great success Marlboro Cigarettes quickly became—as, of course, they had to with such a flavorful flavor, such a filterful filter, such a flip-top box, such a soft pack—he was so upset about leaving the firm that he cut off his ear in a fit of chagrin.)

But I digress. Byron, I say, was in Italy and Shelley in

He resigned from the Company and became an artist.

England. Meanwhile Keats went to Rome to try to grow. Who does not remember his wistful lyric:

Although I am only five feet high,
Some day I will look in an elephant's eye.

But Keats did not grow. His friends, Shelley and Byron, touched to the heart, rushed to Rome to stretch him. This too failed. Then Byron, ever the ladies' man, took up with Lucresia Borgia, Catherine of Aragon, and Annie Oakley. Shelley, a more domestic type, stayed home with his wife Mary, and wrote his famous poem:

I love to stay home with the missus and write,

Mary Shelley finally got so tired of being bitten that she went into another room and wrote Frankenstein. Upon reading the manuscript, Shelley and Byron got so scared they immediately booked passage home to England. Keats tried to go too, but he was so small that the clerk at the steamship office couldn't see him over the top of the counter. So Keats remained in Rome and died of a broken heart.

Byron and Shelley cried a lot and then together composed this immortal epitaph:

Good old Keats, he might have been short,
But he was a great American and a heck of a good sport.

UNC Nine Travels To Wake

Heels Seek Revenge For 13-8 Defeat

By Ed Dupree

UNC's baseball team travels to Winston-Salem today for an Atlantic Coast Conference contest with Big Four foe Wake Forest. An unusual April schedule and a rained out game with N. C. State last Saturday makes Wake UNC's opponent in each of its first two league games.

On April 3, the Demon Deacons won a 13-8 contest from the Tar Heels, but the pitchers and fielders were far from midseason form. Only Dave Murr, UNC's big redheaded co-coptain, looked sharp on the mound—he pitched seven innings of two-hit, two-run ball against the Baptists after the visitors had scored 11 runs on other Tar Heel hurlers. The Deac and Tar Heel fielders combined for 12 big errors.

Coach Walt Rabb will be going with Murr in this afternoon's contest, which will be broadcast over WCHL, Chapel Hill, at 3 p.m. Since the Wake Forest game Murr has pitched seven innings of four-hit, shutout ball against the Marines from Camp Lejeune. "Red" retired the first 14 batters to face him and held the Leathernecks in control during the seven innings he worked. Sophomore Andy Billesdon retired six men in a row over the last two innings as he and Murr combined for the 4-0 victory over the Lejeune men.

The rest of Rabb's lineup will find Len Dellolio, .292, at first base; Paul Swing, .310, at second; Larry Neal, .394. at third, and Cronin Byrd at shortstop. Byrd replaces sophomore Jim Speight, .261, who is sick in the infirmary and will not make the trip.

Swing was injured and did not play in the Lejeune game, but he will be ready to go again this afternoon.

In the outfield, Buddy Tilden, .381, and Heyward Hull, .320, are definite starters. The third fly-chaser post will go to either Jud Spainhour, who has recently rejoined the team after spring football practice, or Russ Hollers, a 1960 regular who has had hitting trouble in early season games.

Both Spainhour and Hollers possess good batting power and could strengthen the outfield situation considerably.

For Wake Forest the big guns are first baseman Roger Coon, last season's top RBI man in the ACC and one of the best long ball hitters in the conference, and outfielder Bill Scripture, a man with the perfect name for the Baptist institution.

Scripture pounded out a homer and triple in four times at bat in the first Wake-UNC game and drove in four big runs. Coon was also two for four, with two singles and two RBI's. Together they provided Wake's victory margin.

Either Don Roth, a lanky right-hand junkball pitcher—a la Ed Lopat—or fastballer Bob Muller, a lefty, should be on the mound for Coach Jack Stallings. Roth is a 6-4, 185-pounder, while Muller is 5-8 and 160. The Deacon Mutt and Jeff combination gave up eight hits and only two earned runs in the first contest against the Chapel Hill nine.

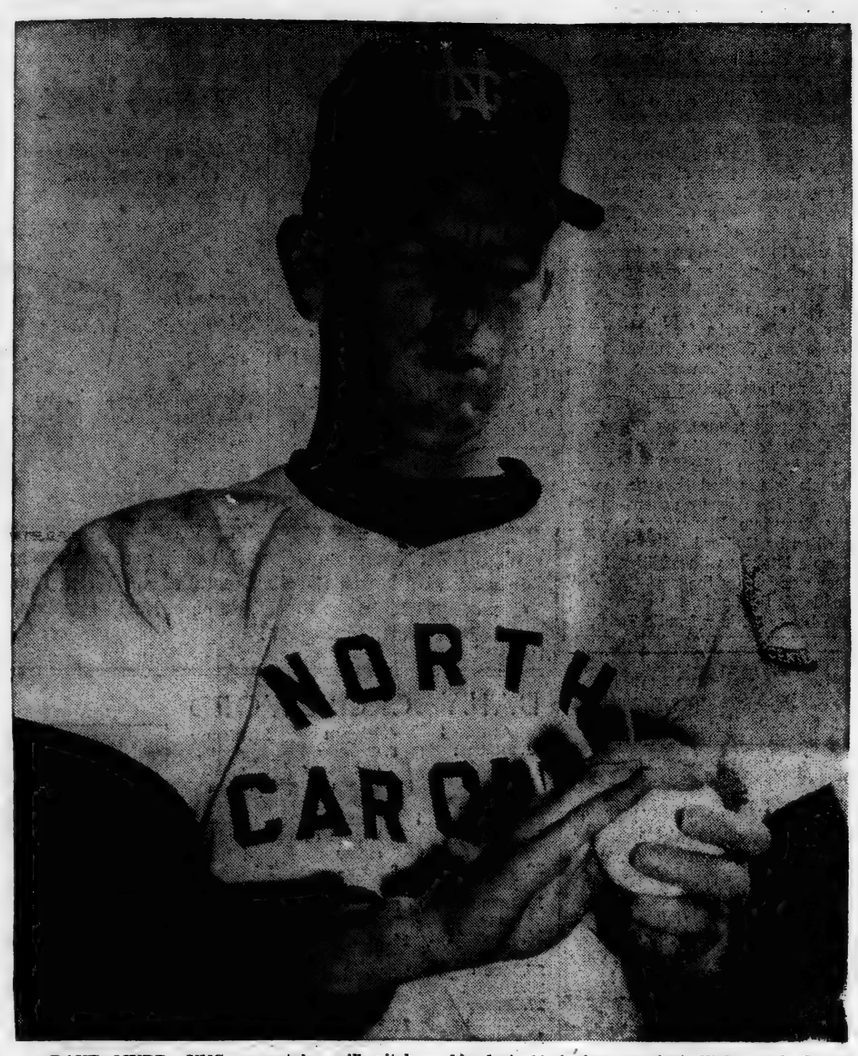
Six of these Deacons—Nichols, Scripture, Worrell, Williams, Martin, and Reiley made errors in the opening league game here in Chapel Hill — possibly Stallings' lineup may not be the same.

This is the first of four straight league games for Rabb's men. Next week they meet N.C. State, Virginia, and Maryland.



DAVE MURR, UNC co-captain, will pitch this afternoon's baseball game at Wake Forest. Murr has yielded only six hits and two runs in his last 14 innings against Wake and Camp Lejeune.

UNC Linksmen Wallop Navy

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

North Carolina's golf team captured dual-meet victory number six yesterday afternoon as the Tar Heels turned back visiting Navy 28½-7½.

Coach Ed Kenney's linksmen, who have lost only to Purdue in rolling up their 6-1 record, won six of the eight individual matches and took all best-ball competition in defeating the Middies on a rain-soaked Finley Golf Course.

All-American captain Pete Green stayed unbeaten with a 3-0 win over Navy's Craig Burbick but Jay Harris, playing in the same foursome with Green and Burbick, was less fortunate. Harris had his consecutive win string stopped by Tom Flory in a 2½-½ verdict.

Besides Flory, the only Navy winner was Jim Seeley, Seeley downed Mike Dore 2½-½ while spurring Navy to a 1½-1½ tie in that foursome's best-ball activity.

The slow,wet playing conditions sent scores soaring and as a result, medalist honors went to UNC's Sam Duckett with a one-over par 73. Other Carolina scores were: Green—77, Harris—83, Harvie Hill—75, Abe Andes—75, Dore—76, Denny White—76, and George Murphy—76.

SOCCER GAMES

The UNC All-Campus soccer team will play the North Carolina State Varsity this afternoon at 3:30 on the intramural field. All team members are urged to suit up and show up for the contest.

Varsity soccer coach Marvin Allen announces that the varsity team will scrimmage Fort Bragg at 3:00 on the Navy Field, in a second contest.

Net, Track Teams Play Away Today

By Curry Kirkpatrick

North Carolina's varsity tennis and track teams visit the Cavalier state of Virginia this afternoon—coach Don Skakle's netters at Charlottesville for a match with UVA and Dale Ranson's cindermen at Quantico for the Quantico Relays.

The tennis team has captured the imagination of the entire area so far this season by going undefeated against the best teams the Northeast US could provide. Playing with four sophomores in the top six positions, Skakle's tennisters had won eight straight this year and 20 over a two-year span going into yesterday's match with Maryland.

George Sokol (named yesterday as Daily Tar Heel Athlete of the Week) as number one, Ted Hoehn, at number two and John "Bitsy" Harrison and Charlie Shaffer at numbers four and five are the sophomores while captain Keith Stoneman holds down the third position, and junior Dave Morgan, the sixth spot.

Sokol, Hoehn, and Harrison are each undefeated while Stoneman and Shaffer have suffered one setback apiece. Stoneman's loss halted the Greenville, S. C. native's consecutive streak at 23.

On the track and field front at Quantico, Carolina will be competing with 55 other schools and clubs. Ranson's trackmen, who finished second in the ACC Indoor Games last month and are also unbeaten in two dual meets outdoors, feature high jumper Tommy Clark, pole vaulters Heath Whittle and Barrie Tiedemann, middle-distance men Bob Hart, Scott Brent and Bob Bennett, and milers Jerry Stuver, Rett Everett and Carmine Lunetta.

Freshmen Host Wake Forest Baseballers In Doubleheader

UNC's freshman baseball team hosts the Wake Forest yearlings today in a doubleheader beginning at 1:00 in Emerson Stadium.

The Tar Babies, who have yet to lose and have beaten Wilmington Junior College and North Carolina State—the latter game a 13-9 victory last Saturday, will probably start Walton Ward and Bill Danneman in the twin bill.

Other starters for Carolina will probably be 1b—Bobby Reagan, 2b—Dick Prindle, 3b—Bill Taylor, ss—Dick Flemming, lf—Ron Barlow, cf — Tom Sharpe, rf — Jerry Clark, and c—Merle Kruer.

Steel Inquest Still On

Subpoenas Are Ordered Against 12 Companies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Subpoenas were ordered Saturday against 12 big steel companies by a Senate subcommittee which pressed its antitrust investigation despite the industry's pell mell retreat from a $6-a-ton price increase.

U.S. marshals were set to serve the subpoenas which demand that the firms produce cost records for the Senate anti-monopoly group headed by Sen. Estes Kefauver (D.-Tenn.).

The action was clear evidence that the threat of both congressional and Justice Department action still hung over "big steel" even though the industry surrendered to President Kennedy in the struggle over the price hike.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said Friday after the steel companies rescinded the price rise that a federal grand jury inquiry in New York into possible anti-trust violations would proceed.

Sen. Albert Gore (D.-Tenn.), announced Saturday that he would introduce legislation Monday aimed at breaking up the bigger steel companies and giving the government a check-rein on future price increase moves.

He proposed that steel price hikes be made subject to the 80-day "cooling off" procedure which the President can invoke under the Taft-Hartley labor-management law. Gore also advocated reation of a national consumers advisory board.

The Tennessean said capitaulation of the steel industry underscored the need for new legislation. "They moved up in concert and caved in in concert," Gore said. "This is all the more reason there should be an orderly, systematic way to provide for an informed public opinion."

IN LAW SCHOOL MOCK TRIAL

Judge Gwynn Rules Mistrial

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Superior Court Judge Allen H. Gwynn ruled a "mistrial" Friday night when a student jury was unable to get past the first issue of the three-issue "Evans v. Brown" lawsuit case in the UNC Law School's annual mock trial in Manning Hall.

The proceedings, attended by over 300 persons, involved charges brought to court by Miss Barbara "Bevan" Evans against varsity basketball player Larry Brown.

The plaintiff, a varsity cheerleader, had alleged that Brown negligently drove his car into a tree on the way back to Chapel Hill from a dinner-dance date in Durham, thereby being responsible for "severe and permanent" injuries that Miss Evans incurred in the accident. She has claimed damages in the amount of $150,000.

Denies Negligence

Brown had denied any negligence on his part and had maintained that the contributory negligence of Miss Evans was the proximate cause of her injuries, in that it was her conduct toward him which caused him to lose control of the car.

The three issues of Brown's negligence, Miss Evans' contributory negligence and damages were hashed and rehashed by Thomas Starnes (Miss Evan's attorney), La Fontine Odom (Counsel for Mr. Brown) and their respective staffs.

Mr. Starnes called to the stand four witnesses on behalf of Miss Evans. State Trooper E. R. Kirby, Dr. Barry Haywood, a surgeon at the North Carolina Memorial Hospital, Miss Lynn Clark, the plaintiff's roommate and Miss Evans, herself, all supported the latter's story.

Miss Evans, her honey-blond hair in a pony tail and covered by a dark veil which also partially hid the ugly scars on her face, stated that her relationship with Brown had always been "platonic," but that on the particular night of April 7, he had seemed very "pensive and serious."

Coed 'Surprised'

The once-beautiful coed, dressed in a light grey suit, added that she was very surprised when Brown grabbed her arm, pulled her to him and kissed her passionately while still attempting to maneuver the car.

Defense Counsel Odum produced as his chief witness, Dr. John Tayloe—a second surgeon at the hospital, John Flournoy and Lindsay Raiford—two eyewitnesses who, on the date with Brown and Miss Evans, were sitting in the back seat of the car, and Brown.

Brown, a 16-point-per-game guard on the Carolina basketball team, testified that Miss Evans had continually played with his ear while "pecking" him on the cheek, which made it considerably hard for him

Fleece Tapping Monday

Valkyrie Sing To Follow Ceremony

Inductions into the Order of the Golden Fleece, the highest men's honorary society at the University take place Monday night at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

According to the annual custom the doors to Memorial Hall will be locked at 7 o'clock and no one will be permitted to enter or to leave until after the induction ceremonies have been concluded.

The ceremony will be followed by the traditional Valkyrie sing which will compose five divisions made up of women from the University dormitories and sororities.

The order of the Golden Fleece is the second oldest collegiate honorary society in the United States. The oldest is the Skull and Bones at Yale University.

The Fleece ceremony is traditionally symbolized by two hooded giants who wander up and down the aisles of Memorial Hall searching for those students who have "dared to rise above the average" and who have shown "exceptional character and leadership in a world that is badly lacking of both." Members of the Golden Fleece include men from the Junior and Senior classes and the faculty. A past member of some standing was Terry Sanford who was inducted into the order in 1941.

Film Society Sets 'Guernica' Monday

The short "Guernica," and a special feature, "Alexander Novsky," will be presented Monday at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall by the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society. The program will be the society's last before spring vacation.

"Guernica," is a French film recreation of artist Pable Picasso's murals. Directed by Alain Rosnais, it is considered a milestone in art film experiments, according to Miss Maggie Dent of the film society. Resnais also directed the award-winning "Hiroshima, Mon Amour."

Sergei Eisenstein directs the Russian feature "Alexander Novsky." The film depicts the invasion of the Baltic provinces by Crusaders in 1242. Novsky is victorious in the Battle of the Ice. Time magazine said of the film, "Like no battle ever recorded bfore on celluloid . . . for visual splendor it has never been topped."

Miss Dent also announced that subscriptions for the remained of the society's presentations for the year were available at $1.50 per person. The group plans three more presentations this year.

Bunche On Buckley: Hogwash

Dr. Ralph Bunche, 57, is the United Nations undersecretary for special affairs. He has received many honorary degrees and awards, including Phi Beta Kappa membership, the Nobel Peace Prize and the Four Freedoms Award.

By DR. RALPH BUNCHE
(As told to Garry Blanchard The Charlotte Observer)

While in Chapel Hill on a speaking engagement Tuesday evening, I was shown an Observer column by William F. Buckley about U.N. activities in Katanga last December. The column appeared in Monday's Observer. It's absolute hogwash.

But that isn't new for Buckley. I'd say he's an extremist, and not very careful about establishing his facts. I'm referring to that part of his column concerning a pamphlet prepared by Professor van den Haag, who belongs to a group called the American Committee for Aid to Katanga Freedom Fighters.

According to Buckley, the pamphlet is lively and "most revealing," and contains "electrifying photographs." It purports to be the result of Professor Haag's "investigation" in Katanga of "the behavior of the United Nations Armed Forces there, and the political circumstances surrounding the armed action against Katanga . . . last December."

I don't doubt that a good many readers will be influenced by what Buckley says. But the pamphlet is erroneous from beginning to end. And the way it's written, one has to conclude it's deliberately distorted.

Certainly Haag went to Elizabethville for three or four days. But he saw and talked with no one on the U.N. side, so he wasn't trying to get a full picture.

His trip was no investigation. It was made by a man who went out with his mind made up about the conclusions he would reach, a man who made no effort to get a balanced, truthful picture.

Consider the pictures in the pamphlet. None of them is documented. There's nothing to establish that the U.N. had anything to do with the atrocities which Haag's photographs purport to show that U.N. forces wantonly committed.

As for a "U.N. war on Katanga," I guess the best authority on that is Moise Tshombe himself. He has praised the U.N. for the protection and security it's guaranteeing him now, in Leopoldville, in his negotiations with Premier Adoula.

There isn't any U.N. war on Katanga now, nor has there been one. The only time the U.N. had to fight against Katanga was when their troops were led by mercenaries, well-paid professional killers, like those in the Secret Army Organization in Algeria right now. The people of Katanga never fought the U.N.

What the U.N. tried to do in Katanga was to get rid of the 500 mercenaries there. We managed to eliminate some of them, but there are still about 250 of them in the province.

Why does Buckley write like he does? I don't know; I've never tried to figure out the motives of extremists who engage in propaganda. But from what I've seen of his writing, it's clear he doesn't know much about the U.N. I'd invite him over but I gather his mind's made up.

Why does he think as he does? I don't know. Maybe he hasn't caught up with this century yet. Some young men are born old.

20,000 Welcome Captives

MIAMI (UPI) — A proud, hobbling band of 60 captured Cuban invaders—sold by Castro for $2.5 million—returned Saturday to freedom and a cheering welcome from 20,000 of their refugee countrymen.

They swore to return to their prison cells unless the ransom of all 1,179 of the captives is raised. A hush fell over the joyously-tearful crowd as the big four-engine plane that brought the prisoners from Havana rolled up to the unloading zone and the doors were opened.

The captives, some on crutches, some with arms and legs missing saluted smartly as they appeared in the doorway of the plane, then limped down the steep steps and for 75 yards along a roped-off lane to waiting ambulances and limousines.

Immediately upon arrival the newly-freed captives issued a statement saying they would "consider ourselves prisoners until the last one of our companions is at liberty; the Brigade 2506 is one and indivisible."

Brigade 2506 was the unit that stormed ashore at the Bay of Pigs April 17, 1961, only to be captured three days later by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's militia.

Those returned today were the most seriously injured members of the invasion force.

DTH Tradition

Tradition dictates that the outgoing editor dedicate his final column to stringing together a collection of random thoughts about the fine tradition of journalism in general and the small part he has played in it as editor of one of the nation's few college dailies.

During the year we have been editor, we have had occasion to read more than one such final editorial while glancing back over old issues. With each reading, he have quietly vowed that when we relinquished the editor's chair, the column would run blank before we filled it was a collection of tear-stained phrases, personal thank-yous and mauldlin comments about our love affair with a college newspaper.

* * *

Probably we knew at the time we said it we would renege. The temptation is too great. The fact is that there IS a fine tradition involved in editing the Daily Tar Heel, one of the finest in American college journalism. It is no secret that the Tar Heel has, in times of stress, risen to very real heights of success—through the courage to speak when no other would. It is likewise no secret that it has often managed to so completely bewilder both itself and the campus that an oracle couldn't straighten things out.

Yet it has shared in most of the University's finest hours—has, in fact, contributed to many of them.

* * *

No member of the small community of former editors would for a moment relinquish his claim to association with what has traditionally been the freest institution at the University. Rarely has it been said that the Tar Heel is loved by the campus; rarer still that it has budged from its position of dissent for any reason, least of all the anger of the campus. Each editor harbors a secret pride in the knowledge that he will share in what one former editor of a college daily spoke of as the mystique that former editors automatically share the moment they step from office.

* * *

It is gratifying to leave office with the knowledge that while many college papers throughout the country are losing some of their independence and freedom, the Daily Tar Heel continues to operate on a strictly hands-off basis. This tradition, we feel confident, will continue. And although there has been some feeling that the editorship should not be elected popularly, we are equally confident that tradition will endure. Direct popular mandate of the students themselves will always be the best method of choosing an editor. When an editor gets in hot water—as he inevitably will—it is the campus that he must answer to. As long as this is so, the reckoning will be just. Appointment by the Publications Board, or even election by the staff will never be quite as equitable a method of choosing an editor as the present one.

The difficult and lonely decisions that must be made day after day during an editor's term of office are behind us. We are happy the task is done. Certainly if many of them were made over again, they would be made differently. Some of them, even in retrospect, we are glad we made as we did.

* * *

In joining the company of former editors, we are sorry to step down with so much to be done. But in a sense, there is an even greater challenge in being a former editor.

The Old Well

As one last dissent before we leave office, we would like again to call attention to a problem that has become increasingly more pressing in the past few years.

* * *

* * *

For years the University has been looking at its own reflection in it. Like Narcissus, Chapel Hill and the University is in love with its own image. Curled catlike and content by the fireplace, the University has lost much of its imminence as a stronghold of the arts in the South. We are still dusting off old heroes instead of helping to breed new ones. Tom Wolfe is dead; Proff Koch is dead; other greats are gone or no longer producing.

* * *

Yet we continue to look upon Chapel Hill, not with an honest nostalgia, but with a feeling that the greatness of its best days is somehow still here and has but to be remembered to live again.

* * *

Good Books Just Out

"The Tides of History," by Jacques Pirenne (Dutton $8.95): This is volume 1 of the "universal history" in which the author plans to trace the march of humanity from its earliest known beinnings through rising and declining civilizations over thousands of years to the present time. To synthesize his view so general trends can be discerned, Pirenne tells of events in all parts of the world, east as well as west, and indicates their inter-relationships. This book takes the story "From the Beginnings to Islam." Six other volumes are in preparation, the last one to be "From 1939 to Our Days." Pirenne, who teaches Egyptology at the University of Brussels, has many historical works to his credit as has his father, the renowned French historian Henri Pirenne. In his long perspective view . . . "technical achievement has profoundly changed th world . . . but . . . the human aspect of problems has changed far less than appears at first glance." He believes universal history must be studied . . . "by developing before our eyes the great cycles of human evolution, to make us understand at what point in evolution we are today . . . For it is on knowledge of the necessities and possibilities of our times that the value of future peace depends." The work is translated from the French by Lovett Edwards and is fascinating and lucid in ideas and expression.

* * *

"A World Fit For Grimsby," by Hilary Evans (St. Martin's Press $3.95): An amiable and very amusing caricature of a familiar institution—the town that makes its living by having been the home of a famous man. The community which British satirist Evans calls Riddleford had only one real industry: exploiting the memory of the eminent if somewhat ribald. 17th-century poet Nicolas Grimsby. Innkeepers, souvenir peddlers and Riddleford industrialists were understandably alarmed when nearby Grimwick filed a rival claim to its favorite son. The story pokes amiable fun at a variety of U. S. and English institutions, notably including poetry of the post-Elizabethan period.

"The Sino-Soviet Conflict, 1956-1961," by Donald S. Zagoria (Princeton $8.50): A history and discussion of the schism between the Russian and the Chinese brands of Communism which began with Khrushchev's denunciation of Stalin in 1956 and has widened ever since. Zagoria, an analyst of Communist politics for 10 years for the U.S. government, believes this division in the Red camp can last for years. Whether they can ever submerge their differences and get on with their original object of spreading Communist revolution world-wide is a question of paramount interest to the Western world and one to which the author of this book offers no answer.

Federal Aid To Be Denied If Schools Are Segregated

By GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is going to be a corker of a fight in Congress next year on federal help to schools in so-called impacted areas.

These are areas where armed services based or other defense installations swell a town's normal population and place an added burden on its schools.

The squabble will center on the meaning of the word "suitable."

The Kennedy administration has written its own definition in order to end federal aid to schools which refuse to mix Negro and white students.

The administration is merely saying that schools which practice segregation are not "suitable" to teach the children of federal workers and servicemen. Therefore they won't get any federal money.

But it will not start withholding funds until the fall of 1963. Before then, however, the impacted area law come up or renewal in Congress which may have a different slant on the word suitable.

The administration has looked long and hard for some way to start denying money to schools which continued to practice segregation in defiance of the Supreme Court's 1954 desegregation edict.

A few weeks ago, Abraham A. Ribicoff, secretary of health, education and welfare, held out hope to liberal legislators that the search would be fruitful.

He told them of plans to stop racial discrimination in a specialized education program subsidized by the govenment—a program to conduct special language and student-guidance courses in colleges, mostly for teachers.

The government notified the colleges that hereafter, in order to get federal help for these courses they would have to sign contracts promising no racial discrimination.

But the mandate ha dan extremely limited effect. Only $14.5 million in all was involved, and most of the schools didn't practice segregation anyway.

But then attention focused on the word "suitable" in the impacted area law, the provision of which authorizes the commissioner of education to arrange for suitable free education for the "impacted" children.

Heretofore the word was interpreted to mean that the school building was all right, the equipment acceptable, and the standard of education adequate.

Ribicoff acknowledged that Congress did not have desegregation in mind when it wrote the word into the law in 1950.

Since 1954, Congress has renewed the statute several times, with the word suitable unchanged in application.

South Would Have Objected

The fact is that if the law had been made a vehicle to deny funds to segregated schools it probably would never have been passed. Southern legislators would have seen to that. The mere threat of such an amendment has been enough to sidetrack a school aid bill.

Nevertheless, Ribicoff, admitting that Congress didn't mean it that way, says the education commissioner must decide for himself what is suitable. And starting with the fall term in 1963, he is going to rule that segregated schools aren't suitable for federal families.

This puts not only the schools but Congress on notice. Both the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations have wanted to cut the expense of the impacted area program, but it has had a broad base of insistent support in Congress.

This base will either disappear or weaken in the South when the program comes up for renewal next year. Meantime the Department of Justice is planning to file suit in the South—perhaps Florida—to try and compel a segregated school to drop its racial barriers on penalty of losing federal aid.

Letters To The Editor

Abstract Art Not Appreciated

To the Editor:

Yesterday's article in the Chapel Hill Weekly sampling community reaction to a piece of student art work illustriously displayed in a local gas station is an interesting commentary on one of the greatest inconsistencies in our culture.

The people who remained glued to their radio sets for some nine hours to hear an astronaut's account of a whole new world of sensations, did so because they themselves delighted in a vicarious experience of pleasing fantasy. These same people, however confronted first hand with a work of abstract art, violently turn off their receivers and spurn exciting fantasy's in form and color with "God-awfullest thing I ever did see," or "A perfect example of wasted time and material.

It is curious indeed, that a people ahead enough of their times to call their forth coming worlds fair The Century 21 Exhibition still prefer to live in the art world that cast and erected Carolina's tired "Silent Sam."

—Mike Hall

To The Editor:

Mr. Cheek in his letter seems very worried about the possible mutations produced by atomic testing. In answer to his letter, I would like to ask him if he has any idea of the number of mutations that would be produced by atomic weapons exploded over New York, Washington and the other prime American target areas?

I agree that it would be a fine thing if all nuclear testing could be stopped, but the United States cannot do it unilaterally. If we just decide to cease testing, the Russians would stop too—for a while. Then they would start again, only this time instead of testing them over Siberian wastes, they would test their weapons over American cities. Does Mr. Cheek want this? I hope not.

Mr. Cheek maintains that American nuclear weapons are not out-of-date, and that they are the best in the world. I concur, but I would like to ask Mr. Cheek how they got to be the best in the world? Through tests, obviously. In order to retain our superiority, the United States has to test.

As a possible father, I too am worried about the health of any of my children. But I am willing to take a chance. Freedom is not maintained by "playing it safe," we have to take the chance. We have a choice: test and risk a few mutations or die as a nation. I am for testing .

If Mr. Cheek would like to argue the point further, he is welcome to come and see me anytime at 421 Cobb.

—Harry W. Johnson, Jr.

To The Editor:

I read Jeffrey Lawrence's letter f enlightenment to the student body with no little amusement. I certainly do agree with its great care. Because the student, if he's not careful, might have to exert a little effort. He might have to discipline himself. In short, he might have to pay the price required to gain anything worthwhile.

He mentioned the fact that making an average of ten displays a week is next to impossible. To those students who are not familiar with cookware presentations, a display, if well organized should last approximately 1½ hours. But even if 2 hours are allowed for each presentation, ten displays would total twenty hours a week. Granted, to make ten displays a week the salesmen will have to spend some of his time obtaining appointments, since he can't make displays on the golf course, or at the beach, and he might not be able to pull it over on the tennis courts unless he's a pretty smooth operator. But, with a little organization ten displays a week can be made even if the girls aren't falling all over themselves to buy your cookware.

What each student should decide before accepting a job in sales, or in any other capacity, is: 1. What he will demand of his employer. 2. What his employer will demand of him, and 3. What he will demand of himself. He should remember that "you don't get something for nothing."

Profs Urged To Try Collective Bargaining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — College professors often face the same kind of job problems as factory workers and may turn into collective bargaining to solve them, says an AFL-CIO publication.

It said they are confronted by speedups, stretch-outs and unfair salary scales under their present system of individual negotiations.

An article in the Quarterly Digest of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department, written by David Hamilton, associate professor of economics at the University of New Mexico, said the chances of campus unionization may increase as the "war babies" born after World War II start to enter college and enrollments zoom.

College instructors have been "relatively untouched" by union organization so far despite the existence of contract and job practices which began to disappear from the industria lworld two decades ago, Hamilton said.

"Today the actual job conditions of the academic worker are not dissimilar to those faced by the industrial worker within the large corporation . . . the gulf between the university president and the average faculty member yawns almost as large as that between the corporation president and the average wage earner," Hamilton said.

He said college professors have little ,if any, control over their workload, work hours, working conditions or introduction of new techniques which may affect their employment. Pressure on faculty members to produce original research grows greater every year because of the renown that comes to a university with eminent scholars, he said.

The teaching load, which varies from six to 18 hours a week, is set by administrators without effective faculty checks, Hamilton wrote.

Salaries are settled by individual negotiation and result in a "crazy quilt pattern" that does not reflect the equal pay for equal work principle. Newcomers are often paid considerably more than veterans who are equally skilled but cannot apply "bluff and bluster" to get more money, Hamilton said.

The advent of classroom television and teaching machines has even produced an academic version of automation without any professorial check on its use, he said.

As for fringe benefits, Hamilton argued that faculty members are concerned over sabbatical leave, retirement plans and medical care programs.

"With the increasing size of universities and colleges the necessity for collective bargaining—if the college teacher is to achieve his job aims—becomes increasingly apparent," he said.

Poetical Potshots

"I shall star," vowed a girl in Biloxi,
"By being Twentieth Century-Foxi,"
And her film career
Really blossomed this year:
She's in charge of the mops at the Roxi.

A damsel, seductive and handsome,
Got wedged in a sleeping room transom,
When she offered much gold for release, she was told
That the view was worth more than the ransom.

A mischievous miss from Woods Hole
Had a notion exceedingly droll:
At a masquerade ball
She wore nothing at all,
And backed in as a Parker House roll.

Brown, dressed in a dark grey suit and red tie, further stated that Miss Evans finally became so amourously inclined that at a point, two miles outside of Chapel Hill, she sighed "Oh Larry," threw her arms around him, and kissed him firmly on the mouth. "This," added Brown, "impaired my vision."

Proceedings Slowed

The proceedings, time and again, were slowed down by remarks from the witness stand which sent the court into an uproar.

Perhaps the biggest outburst came when Miss Raiford, after refusing to answer Counsel's questions on her personal dating habits and morals, and stating that she and Mr. Flournoy had only been watching what went on in the front seat, was asked why she was watching the defendant an dthe plaintiff.

Miss Raiford, an attractive blond nursing student, fluttered her eyelashes, and innocently answered, "There wasn't anything else to do."

After deliberating for about ten minutes, the jury (eight men and four women) returned a 9-3 verdict of "Not Guilty" on the issue of Brown's negligence. Since the decision was not unanimous, Judge Gwynn asked the jury to retire again until an agreement of all the members had been made.

A half-hour later, the jury entered for a second time. Foreman Bert Hoffman slowly rose and repeated that the jury still was at a 9-3 separation, whereupon the distinguished judge ruled a "mistrial" after more than four hours of court haranguing.

Peace Corps Program On WUNC, CC Tonight

WUNC-FM and Carrier Current will carry a special news program on the Peace Corps tonight in connection with the upcoming round of Peace Corps tests to be given Saturday at testing centers throughout the nation.

The program will contain excerpts from interviews with Peace Corps officials who spoke here at a recent conference. Also included will be parts of a speech given here at that time by Rev. William S. Coffin, Yale Chaplain and a leading advocate of the Peace Corps. The program will be on the air from 10:15-10-30 p.m.

Two types of tests will be given Saturday for those who wish to begin training this summer for 30 new Peace Corps projects in Alsa, Africa and Latin America.

Two Tests

One test will be for those with bachelors degrees who wish to teach. The other will be for all applicants who desire to work in any of the Peace Corps' other projects.

The tests, which will all start at 8:30 a.m., will be given in North Carolina at Asheville in room 14 of the Federal Building, at Charlotte in the Main Post Office, at Durham in the Main Post Office, at Fayetteville in the Main Post Office, and at Goldsboro in the Main Post Office.

Applicants must be American citizens and at least 18 years old. (There is no upper age limit on Peace Corps service.) Married couples without children may apply, providing both qualify.

Although most of those taking the tests Saturday will have filled out Peace Corps questionnaires available at all Post Offices, others may take the tests on a space available basis at the indivdual testing centers.

Wake Forest Bombs Carolina, 12-5

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Lanky Don Roth supplied the pitching and Bill Scripture, Bob Worrell and Donnie Nichols, the hitting punch, as the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest pounded four Carolina hurlers in a 12-5 victory yesterday afternoon at Winston-Salem.

Roth, a righthanded junkball thrower relieved Deacon starter Bob Muller in the fourth and limited the Tar Heels to five hits and two runs while his mates supported him with a 11-hit attack.

Scripture, Worrell and Nichols accounted for seven of the 11 base knocks with Scripture contributing a double and triple and Worrell, three RBI's.

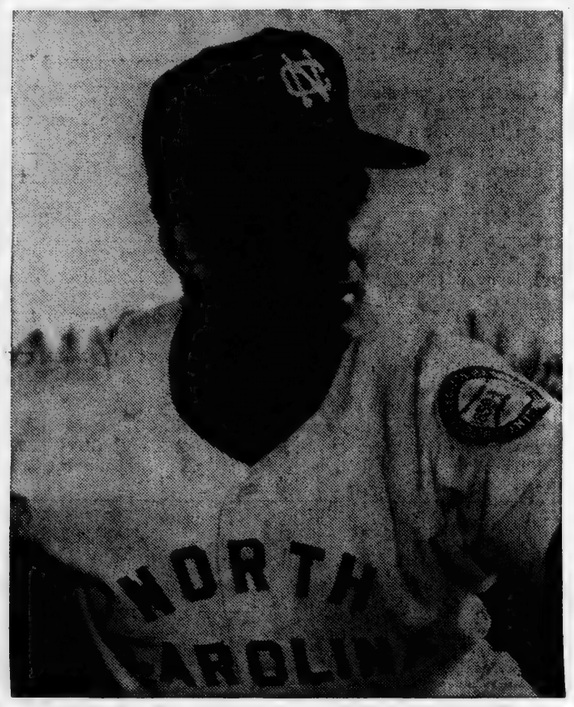
The Deacons scored one in the first, one in the fourth and three in the seventh but their big innings were the third and the sixth.

With two men out in the third, centerfielder Scripture walked and went to third on Roger Coon's booming double. Consecutive singles by Wayne Martin, Pat Williams, and Worrell produced the three markers that put the Deacons back into the lead for good.

In the sixth, with Andy Billesdon having relieved UNC starter Dave Murr, Scripture hit a sacrifice fly to score Nichols, who had doubled and moved to third on a passed ball. Three consecutive walks followed and at this point, Walter Rabb called for Bob Wacker to replace Billesdon. But Wacker walked Williams forcing in one runner and Worrell singled to score the other two.

Carolina had gone ahead with three unearned runs in its opening half of the third. A double by Cronin Byrd and a walk to Buddy Tilden put men on first and second. After two men were out, Paul Swing struck out but Deacon catcher Williams let the ball roll all the way to the backstop, enabling Byrd to score and Tilden to move to third. Larry Neal then got an infield single and on the play, pitcher Bob Muller threw wild to first as Tilden and Swing both scored.

The Tar Heels added two more in the seventh on back-to-back doubles by Tilden and Swing and a single by Heyward Hull.



LARRY NEAL, UNC's hard-hitting third baseman, went into yesterday's game with Wake Forest batting a sparkling .394. The Kannapolis senior collected two hits in five trips to the plate but in a losing cause, as the Tar Heels went down, 12-5. Neal, one of the top infielders in the league, hit an even .300 for coach Walter Rabb's club last season.

Casper, Souchak Lead GGO Tilt

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI)—Billy Casper shot a three-under-par 68 Saturday to share the lead with defending champion Mike Souchak, who followed his first holes of the $35,000 Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Souchack, who followed his first round 68 with a 69 Friday, moved up another notch Saturday with a 70.

Two strokes back of the leaders at 209 were slammin' Sammy Snead, seven time winner of the Greensboro Open, and Jerry Steelsmith, of Glendale, Calif. Snead pulld up on the leaders with a hot four-under-par 67 while Steelsmith fashioned a 70.

Tar Babies Divide With Wake Forest; Take Opener 7-6, Drop Nightcap 4-3

By LOU ROSENTHAL

Carolina's freshman baseball team came from behind to defeat the Wake Forest Frosh in the first game of a doubleheader, 7-6, but lost the second in extra innings, 4-3, yesterday at Emerson Stadium.

Joe White, out for frosh baseball only this week because of spring football, struck out nine men in the first game, but had to be relieved in the seventh inning when Wake threatened. Bill Dannemann relieved White and claimed the victory when Dick Fleming scored the winning run in the bottom half of the seventh on a passed ball by Wake catcher Bill Mallory.

Ken Willard, another football player, was the big gun for the Tar Babies in the first game, as he uncorked a 360-foot pinch-hit two-run home run in the bottom of the sixth. His hit came after Merle Kruer pinch-hit safely.

In the second contest Butch Tyree, normally a pitcher, cracked a home run down the left field line in the first with a mate aboard to give the Deacons a 2-0 lead.

After two were out in the third, Dick Prindle rapped a double and Jerry Clark singled him home to cut the lead to one run. But Wake came back in the top of the fourth to tally a third run, and give the Deacs a two-run lead again.

Carolina came back in the fifth and sixth innings to tie up the game, but lost it in the eighth when Ron Barlow tried to grab Danny Loftin's single on the first hop and missed. Loftin went to third and Dickie Newsome scored the winning run.

Prindle and Bill Taylor had a single and a double each to spark the Carolina frosh.

Jerry Davis absorbed the loss for the Heels, and now has a record of 0-1. Dannemann notched his second victory against no defeats in the first game.

Ehle Leaving; Paul Green To Assume Post

Pulitzer Winner To Teach Writing

Paul Green — playwright, novelist, poet and Pulitzer Prize winner —will be teaching creative writing in the Dept. of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures at UNC during the academic year 1962-63. He will replace John Ehle, the teacher-novelist who has been granted a one-year leave of absence to complete work on a sixth book.

Scheduled for release in the next few months is a new volume of selected plays to be published by the New York firm of Hill and Wang, and a new volume of essays.

Among his published works are "The Lord's Will and Other Plays;" "Lonesome Road;" "In the Valley and Other Carolina Plays;" "The House of Connelly and Other Plays;" "Tread the Green Grass;" "Roll Sweet Chariot;" "Shroud My Body Down;" "Wide Fields;" "The Laughing Pioneer;" "This Body the Earth;" "Johnny Johnson;" Out of the South;" "The Highland Call" "Hymn to the Rising Sun;" "Dog on the Sun;" and "Salvation on a String."

Founder Of Outdoor Drama

The father of the outdoor "symphonic dramas," Green is the author of "The Lost Colony," now preparing for its 25th season at the Waterside Theater in Manteo. It was the success of "The Lost Colony" which led to the establishment of outdoor theaters from Florida to the Dakotas.

Harkness, Putzel To Battle For Student Party Chairman

Curtis Gans, Edminsten To Aid Hopefuls

Mike Putzel and Pete Harkness are both avowed candidates for the position now held by Jimmy Weeks, who was the SP candidate for student body treasurer.

Putzel, a sophomore, is vice-president of Cobb dormitory. Harkness, a freshman, was campaign manager for the SP "Big Four" slate.

Active Workers

Both contenders were active in the Student Party spring elections campaign.

A former president of the Young Americans for Freedom, Putzel was co-campaign manager for SP editorial candidates Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye.

Possibility

Rufus Edminston, majority floor leader in the Legislature, will speak for Harkness at the meeting. Beth Walker, newly elected senior class secretary, will also speak for him.

Putzel Speaker

George Rosental, sophomore class president and chairman of Legislature's Finance Committee, will speak for Putzel. Curtis Gans, former Daily Tar Heel editor, will also talk for him.

The meeting will be held in Howell Hall Monday night at an undecided time.

THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Symphony Concert Tonight

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra will celebrate the 30th anniversary of its founding when it presents a concert here tonight at 8:30 in Memorial Hall.

UNC students will be admitted free.

The orchestra, which was the nation's first state supported symphony orchestra, was founded here in 1932 under the leadership of Lamar Stringfield, a recent winner of the Pulitzer Prize in Music.

The 65-member orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Benjamin Swalin, will feature violoncellist John Thurman as soloist. He will play Variations on a Rococo Theme by Tschaikowsky with orchestral accompaniment.

Music Scholarship Winner

Thurman won a Pablo Casals Festival scholarship in 1957 at the age of 14 and has studied with Benar Heifetz, Bernard Greenhouse and Otto Deri. He presently holds a scholarship at the University of Indiana School of Music and is on leave during this term to gain professional experience as a soloist and first violoncellist with the Orchestra.

Tonight's program will also include works by Handel, Strauss, Enesco, Tschkowsky, Aaron Copland and Hector Berlioz.

"Horn Tooting Bill"

In its early years, the orchestra was supported by Federal Emergency Relief and Works Progress Administration funds. State support began in 1943 with the passage of the "Horn Tooting Bill" by the General Assembly.

The state now provides about 30 per cent of the orchestra's support with the rest of its funds coming from annual memberships.

Order Golden Fleece Taps Eighteen Juniors & Seniors

Eighteen junior and senior men were tapped into the Order of the Golden Fleece in a ceremony preceding the Valkyrie Sing April 16.

The selection of Mary Sue Simpson as Senior Woman of the Year was also announced at that time.

Kappa Delta sorority won the skit division of the sing for the fourth year in a row and Ruffin dorm won the men's skit division. Alpha Tau Omega captured the men's sing division and Delta Delta Delta won the women's sing.

Oldest Men's Honorary

The Order of the Golden Fleece is the oldest and highest men's honorary society at the University. It was founded in 1903 and is based on the legend of Jason and his crew of Argonauts who went in search of the Golden Fleece, the eternal symbol of truth.

It seeks to recognize those students who have given most unselfishly of time, service, and dedication to their fellow men and the University.

Eighteen Initiates

The initiate Argonauts are: Robert Hodges Bilbro, Dwithyt Hernard Wheless, Timothy Brooks Burnett, Wade Hampton Hargrove Jr., Richard Allen Vinroot, William Graham Harriss, Julius Le Vonne Chambers, Joe Malcolm Craver, James Dennis Rash, Michael David Hall, Frederick Randolph Anderson Jr., Allen Thomson Cronenberg Jr., Grover Woodrow Everett Jr., Lawrence Jackson Fetner II, William Carl Imes, Edwin Warner Bass, James Carlos Gaulden Jr., and Walter Estes Dellinger III.

A banquet was held for the new members in the Carolina Inn immediately after the tapping. J. McNeill Smith Jr., alumni Argonaut of the Class of 1937, delivered the banquet address.

Mary Sue Simpson Outstanding Senior

The selection of Mary Sue Simpson as the Senior Woman of the Year was announced during the Valkyries Sing in Memorial Hall April 16. She received the Irene F. Lee Cup at that time.

MARY SUE SIMPSON
. . . Outstanding Senior

The Cup award was established in 1955 in honor of Mrs. Lee who had been hostess of Spencer dormitory from 1925 to 1948.

Miss Simpson, from Shaw, Mississippi, transferred here her junior year and was a member of Kappa Delta Sorority, a dormitory house counselor, a member of the Wesley Foundation lay scholars group, a worker for the YWCA at the School for the Blind and attended the YMCA United Nations Seminar in New York.

In her senior year she has been a member of the Women's Council, the Pan-Hellenic Council, the Religious Emphasis Committee of the YWCA, president of Kappa Delta, and has been tapped into the Order of the Old Well and Valkyries.

Saturn Missile Goes Up...

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — America's Saturn super rocket—the vehicle on which the United States is pinning its hopes in the race to the moon—thundered 65 miles into space Wednesday and created the highest ice cloud know to man by dumping 95-tons of water in the heavens.

Famed space scientist Dr. Wernher von Braun, who once saved the Saturn from a financial death on the drawing boards called the brief flight "a full success" and predicted the rocket will orbit a prototype of the U. S. Apollo lunar landing capsule within two years.

The United States followed up the dramatic Saturn flight by firing an advanced model Polaris missile from a nuclear submarine, the U.S.S. Sam Houston, from beneath the ocean's surface off Florida's east coast to a target 1,50 miles away Wednesday.

Cancel Second Shot

The Polaris firing, which the Defense Department tried in vain to kep secret, was the first of a series scheduled for the Sam Houston and her sister sub, the U. S. S. Thomas Edison. A planned second lauching from the Sam Houston Wednesday was cancelled.

But it was the second successful flight of the mammoth Saturn in as many tries. The Saturn flight represented a new Zenith in U.S. rocketry and opened a little wider the doorway to the day when man will be able to send teams of men and tons of machinery to the moon.

The Saturn, as tall as a 10-story building, is a massive cluster of eight engines. It is believed to be the largest rocket in the world—significantly bigger than the rockets that put Russian cosmonauts Yuri Gargarin and Gherman Titov into orbit.

The Saturn is certainly the most complex space launcher ever built in the free world. It is the product of putting together a quarter-million parts, any one of which could go wrong and ruin the works.

'Intermediate Yield' Bomb Resumes Atomic Test Series

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States launched its atmospheric nuclear test series Wednesday with an "intermediate yield" bomb dropped from a high flying airplane and exploded near Christmas Island in the Pacific.

The bomb, fired at 10:45 a.m., EST, apparently unleashed an explosive force equal to at least 100,000 tons of TNT. It was detonated by the U.S. task force less than 18 hours after President Kennedy gave the final go-ahead for the new series.

The Atomic Energy Commission announced the explosion in a brief statement and immediately gave assurances that the U.S. tests would produce far less radioactive fallout than the 1961 Soviet blasts that triggered the American program.

"A nuclear test detonation took place at about 10:45 a.m., EST, Wednesday in the vicinity of Christmas Island," the commission said. "The detonation was in the intermediate yield range. The device was dropped from an airplane. The test was the first detonation in Operation Dominic, now underway in the Pacific."

Spokesman Qualifies Blast

A commission spokesman said only that the explosion was equal in power to less than one megaton, one million tons of TNT, but greater than 20 kilotons, or 20,000 tons. However, the AEC usually uses "intermediate range" to refer to a blast equal to 100,000 tons of TNT or more.

After issuing the brief formal statement, a commission spokesman added:

"As President Kennedy stated on March 2, the U.S. tests will be conducted under conditions which will restrict the radioactive fallout to a minimum, far less than from the Soviet Union's series of nuclear weapons tests in the fall of 1961."

Republican Dinner

There will be a "Meet The Candidates" dinner sponsored by the Orange County Republican Party Saturday that will feature the sixth district Congressional candidates and local candidates. Tickets and further information may be obtained from Earl Baker, 126 Cobb (968-9092).

SL To Eye Bus System

By HARRY DeLUNG

The introduction of a resolution calling for continued investigation of the feasibility of free bus transportation to outlying portions of the campus will be the major business at tonight's meeting of the Student Legislature.

The resolution, introduced by Ford Rowan (S.P., D.M. I), directs the Campus Affairs Board to continue investigation of the feasibility of free bus service operating hourly from the new Craige and Ehringhaus dorms, the medical complex, and Victory Village to Y-court.

Week-end service to Greensboro is also mentioned in the resolution which calls for the University administration to appropriate funds for the service.

Little Opposition Likely

Campus bus service was mentioned in both U.P. and S.P. platforms, and U.P. floor leader Larry McDevitt indicated that appreciable opposition to the resolution seemed unlikely.

A bill to appropriate $100, to be allotted to the legislators for the purpose of establishing better communication with constituencies will be introduced by Rufus Edmisten (S.P., D.M. VI).

The legislators will meet at 7:30 tonight on fourth floor of New East.

Wrye-Clotfelter Edit First Issue

Today's issue of the Daily Tar Heel is the first edited by Co-Editors Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye, who were selected in a run-off election April 3.

Clotfelter, a sophomore from Atlanta, Ga., and Wrye, a senior from Greensboro, have announced a few appointments to salaried staff positions.

The Daily Tar Heel

In its sixty-ninth year of editorial freedom, unhampered by restrictions from either the administration or the student body.

Your Daily Tar Heel

The Daily Tar Heel is under a new editorship.

* * *

As the new editors we will endeavor to produce a newspaper different from those of our predecessors, a paper hopefully more interesting ,more stimulating.

* * *

The paper will be similar to previous Tar Heels in that it will continue to uphold its seventy-year tradition of editorial freedom. And while attempting to further this tradition, the paper will remain clear of alliances with or obligations to any campus social group, political party, or pressure group of any sort.

* * *

In the editorial column we will continue to exercise the traditional editorial freedom extended to the editors by both student government and the administration. While attempting to merit this freedom, we will criticize, if criticism appears necessary; we will praise, if praise appears merited. We will speak only for ourselves—not for the DTH staff, student government, the student body, or the University.

* * *

In the news pages, we hope to greatly increase coverage of student government executive committees and Legislature. Reporters will be assigned to cover particular campus groups and all activities of general interest . . . Concerted effort will be directed to the coverage of next year's University budget battle in Raleigh . . . National and international news will be reported from the student's angle . . . what students are involved? what do students think about it? and what are some of the more informed opinions of professors?

* * *

We hope to improve communications between the Tar Heel and all segments of campus activities. We invite any individual or representative of any group to come up to the DTH office ,second floor of Graham Memorial, with any complaint or comment. To sit obstinately in your room, harboring resentment or disgust for the policies or actions of this paper is to be absurd. This paper thrives on student concern; we want your opinion.

* * *

The Tar Heel has traditionally been one of the nation's best college newspapers. In recent years it has slipped from its respected position. Reasons many, excuses none. Our concern is to improve the quality of your campus newspaper.

* * *

The Tar Heel will face greater challenges in the next few years than it has encountered before. As the University grows by leaps and bounds, the indivdual student is losing contact with his student government and with the cultural and intellectual core of his campus. The Daily Tar Heel should be a most effective means of narrowing this gap.

* * *

We were elected DTH co-editors in one of the most heated and confused editorship campaigns of recent years. Though the battle was waged largely on journalistic issues, too often the facts were submerged in political noise.

* * *

The fact of our election to this position, in many ways the most responsible job on campus, probably the most exhausting, and undoubtedly the most unpopular . . . is a very sobering experience.

* * *

It means we are caretakers for a $57,000 daily newspaper which is distributed to more than 9,000 students and almost a thousand other readers. It means that for one year we are responsible for the editing of one of the nation's greatest college newspapers. For one year we must labor to put out an interesting and comprehensive newspaper, a campus paper which must search out campus news and creatively convey student opinion.

* * *

The publication of a Daily Tar Heel comprehensively informative and blatantly stimulating will be our sincere endeavour.

Empty....

For those who stuck around Chapel Hill during Easter vacation the rare sight of a ghost town was afforded. Only two of the town's numerous restaurants were open. Only a few stores kept any semblance of business hours, and for those which did, customers were few and far between.

* * *

The town stood as mute testimony to the truth of a statement that merchants have been denying so long—that the town does exist for and by the students. Perhaps when questions of the prices of food, clothing and other merchandise come up, students would do well to remember . . . .

"Would You Want Your Daughter To Marry A Russian?"

Robinson's Ramblings

NOTE: After recently skimming through a Nuclear Magnetic Resonance Spectroscopy manual, I went on a one-trick scientific-mind-jag. This is by way of explanation of what follows.

Science is everywhere. We can not escape it. Even those of us who try to retire into esoteric books can not escape the pervading shadow of science. Now, even poetry uses scientific terms to describe feminine grace. As for example this poem by John Updike:

My love is like Mies van der Rohe's
"Machine for living"; she
Divested of her underclothes,
Suggests efficiency.

Her supple shoulders call to mind
A set of beveled gears;
Her lower jaw has been aligned
To hinge beneath the ears.

Her spine so frictionless, at points
Is technical perfection;
Her knees, sweet ball-and socket joints,
Allow for sudden flexion.

Her finger tips evoke, for me,
A digital computer;
And all in all, she couldn't be
A millimeter cuter.

And David Angus has summed up these sentiments with great scientific precision: "In brief, shapeliness and smoothness of the flesh are desirable because they are signs of biological efficency."

What are we coming to? Is there nothing sacred anymore? Aren't women sacrosanct, pure untainted, divine . . . .

(Would you believe it? There are actually some people on this campus who swallow the above line. This column doesn't only attract sophisticates, you know.)

The following sign, according to Insiders Newsletter, is in the Los Alamos National Laboratory's busy accounting office: "Schtung! Alies Lookenpeepers. Das computenmachine ist nicht fur gefingerpoken und mittengraben. Ist easy schnappen der springenwerk, blowenfusen, und poppencorken mit pfittzensparken. Ist nicht fur gewerken by das dumkopfen. Das rubbernecken sightseeren keepers hans in das pockets —relaxation und vatch das blinkenlights."

As all German I students know (especially the ones that are taking it for the third time) the article should agree with the nouns, the prepostions should be in the correct case etc. But most of us will agree that the above paragraph is much more attractive than the German 1 primer, 'Hans und Heidi Auf Dem Land." Hmmm, or is it ". . . Auf Das Land," or . . . .

DEBATE:

What Divides Liberals And Conservatives?

What issues divide the liberal and conservative? What are the liberal and conservative positions on the freedoms of the First Amendment, economic freedom, civil rights? Are there conflicts within the libertarian code? What problems have given rise to the present liberal-conservative split?

Liberal

By CURTIS GANS

Somewhere in the deep dark ages of 1928 a portly porcine figure waving a cigar proclaimed from the podium that there would be a chicken in every pot and one or two cars in every garage. He wore a smile. To the American people he was a good man. His name was Herbert Hoover.

Somewhere in the jungles and backwoods of various underdeveloped lands in 1962 we are told that beady eyed, linguistically fluent men are promising to the so-called ignorant African and Asian precisely the same thing. These we are indiscriminately told are "communists," evil men out to do the human race more harm than good.

Domestically the liberals are doing battle with the successors to Hoover, the paleolithic brand of individuals who learned nothing from the depression that followed his pronouncement, and who seem to view the world in no wise changed from the days when Jefferson was writing his tracts on agrarian democracy.

Abroad the battle is with the other breed of men who see in technical advancement, full bellies, and houses the complete answer to the human dilemma, and in some cases who see in these advanced artifacts the tools to the propagation of their own indivdual or collective power.

There is something lacking in both. What is basically missing is the conception of human creativity expressed in terms other than economic. What is lacking is the conception of man the artist, the poet, the architect, the teacher, and the knowledge participant in the development of a community of creative indivduals within the context of a free society.

* * *

And man finds himself today isolated in a world very much of his making asking the question of how did it get to be this way and how is it all going to be straightened out?

The world is very different now from 1800 when today's conservatives called themselves liberals and were in the vanguard against the old mercantilist economy.

The largest of the changes that has overhauled the fabric of the society is technology, industrial development, and the inevitable concommitant developments that has changed the nature of the human condition and brought with it a new political language.

The west has traditionally held a conception of creativity as expressed in one's work, and yet the technological revolution has shown that work can be putting a screw into a rear fender of a car, day after day for 365 days a year.

It has held that a man should be rewarded for his efforts according to the creativity, usefulness, and extent of those efforts, and yet for the simple act of one night's sexual intercourse one man may be a millionaire for life, while another may inherit the poverty of a shack, a family in need, and a lifetime of hard labor for something less than a living wage.

The same forces—technology and industrialization — have tended to breed a centralization of power, a control of the political marketplace in the hands of the few so that only large scale collective lobbies either financed by industry or financed by wholesale collective human outpourings can bring about fundamental changes or even can compete for public attention.

Through all of this we have moved far away from government, of the people for the people and by the people into a realm where government is something apart, and where the vote, the contribution, and the effort of individual human beings is relatively meaningless in the morass of mass communications and mass organization.

There is the growing problem of urbanization in which the human being is reduced to an interchangeable part in a never ending succession of factories and apartment dwellings, in which his identification with the community is nil and in which his creative existence is a mockery of either term.

And with us always are the greed, the prejudice, the hate, and the fear that lead to segragation, ambition, power seeking, monopoly, and the like.

Yet, despite all of this there are a few who still believe that we don't have to bury our heads in the sand, forget all that has happened and return to a never to be again past. And there are a few that believe that we don't have to throw in the sponge and admit that providing for man's material needs is the end product of a going society.

There are some, perhaps only a handful, who believe that man can still come to grips with his environment, that despite the threat of self-annihilation, man can bring about a better world, that if not in work, then in leisure man can produce creatively and receive self-fulfillment, that political democracy in which the individual freedoms to think, speak, write, and assemble are guaranteed may still exist, that some time in the future a situation can be created whereby the individual voice can again be made to have meaning, that there will come a time when man will control his technology rather than vice-versa and lead it to solve human economic problems that do not determine but do inhibit man's creative functioning, and that someday through education better than we have now, through interaction, and through understanding there will come an end to the hate and bigotry that infest all parts of the world.

They envision a world in which all men can live together in peace, freedom, possessing human dignity under a just set of laws administered by an international community of human beings in which greed and ambition have been replaced by love and creation.

But, they are also cognizant of the obstacle, of the seemingly insurmountable conflicts in the thought and condition of man that will have to be overcome before even the word, human, can be placed before the word progress. The obstacles are real, and the people willing to meet them all too few.

There are, of course, some who refuse to see these obstacles, who see a complete and total victory to be won economically through laissez-faire and militarily through nuclear weapons.

For those the Socialist Party has a special remedy. They have put out brand new shiny gold buttons saying: "Goldwater in 1864." They should sell a million.

Conservative

By EARL BAKER

The terms liberal and conservative, as applied to contemporary political groupings, are confusing and perhaps misleading in the light of tradition vis-a-vis current policy disputes, but nonetheless they serve the purpose of delineating two general approaches to political problems. Liberals tend to favor more government intervention in the economy, higher taxes to more effectively redistribute the wealth of the country, less fear of inflation, and government action is not looked upon as being a threat in any field which appears to call for improvement or change such as housing, education, civil rights, etc. Conservatives on the other hand, have a bias against government action in these fields and in the economy, and favor it only where it is absolutely necessary to fulfill some Constitutionally granted area of policy. In the United States, the tenets of the Constitution are accepted by both of these groups (which vaguely correspond to the two parties, Democrats being more liberal, and Republicans more conservative), and differences have been in degree and emphasis, although based on opposite foundations of philosophy.

Liberals SAY they favor liberty, yet turn to controls to meet problems. Conservatives who reflect the essence of conservatism are libertarians—those who "uphold liberty ot thought and action."

What are the areas in which liberty is important today? Libertarianism as a guiding basis is the key to liberal-conservative disagreement in three areas, which for purposes of this discussion, I will denote as 1) political and civil liberties, 2) economic liberties 3) intergovernmental liberties.

The essence of true conservatism is expressed in tolerance and opposition to statism. The liberty which I am intersted in conserving is that which nineteenth century liberals espoused. In other words, many who are called conservatives today are simply miffed at the liberals because the liberals control the government, NOT that government itself should be limited. These so called conservatives only wish they held sway in the councils of power, and they would be satisfied.

In the first area, political and civil liberties, the true conservative stands for maximum freedom and in general strict adherence to the Bill of Rights and its spirit. On the other hand, conservatives as citizens have the duty to work to preserve their nation as an entity, and therefore during wartime, for instance, demands upon individual liberties such as the draft, censorship, and the suspension of some rights of expression, are required by the national interest. There is reasonable debate over whether this is not a compromise of principles for conservatives, but my answer is that before we can work within our nation to preserve liberty, we must guarantee the nation's existence. Thus the House Committee on Un-American Activities (even with that name and granting its mistakes) is not anathema to conservatives, nor efforts by the FBI or executive branch to control communists. For we must face the fact that communists, when under the discipline of the communist party and thus Moscow, do not constitute simply "another political view" which deserves the right to be heard, but the equivalent of enemies in wartime. It is with heavy heart that the true conservative resorts to such measures, but we must always remember that we live in a pragmatic world, and abstractions of liberty are not always our best safeguards for the freedoms we retain.

Concerning the racial civil rights issue, conservatives would be foolish indeed who gave lipservice in individual freedom, and then were not committed to freedom for ALL citizens. That many who are called conservatives, merely because they wish to conserve bigotry, do not believe in this freedom is something which true libertarian conservatives wish to change. It should be noted here, however, that belief in freedom for everyone regardless of race, does not necessitate belief in forced federal intervention in other rights which are as sacred, such as that of free association. What conservatives want is liberty for all under the law, and where public tax money is being used. A private club, therefore, is no legitimate concern of government, to be consistent in freedom.

Our second area, economic freedom, is another in which liberals although "loving liberty," are all too ready to step in, "for the welfare of the people," and intervene. Free enterprise is based on the laws of economics—supply, demand, etc. —which have proved time and again superior to planned systems. Capitalism meets the desires of the people, it does not try to regulate them. Now J. K. Galbraith, eminent liberal, contends that people don't know how to spend their money and that the government, by taking more in taxes, can spend it on the "right" things. This is the type of thinking to which conservatives are opposed. What many liberals fail to realize is that economic freedom, such as the right to manage one's own business, are inextricably linked to the other freedoms we are concerned with. We cannot be selective concerning liberty—erosions in any area weaken the fabric of libertarianism.

In the intergovernmental area, many conservatives are content to complain about federal usurpation of states' rights, without remembering that the opposite side of this coin is states' responsibilities. When states fail to provide constitutional guarantees of liberty of Negro citizens, it is all very well to complain about U. S. intervention, but our government is so constituted that certain liberties are promised for all citizens—they must be provided. This also applies to arguments about the recent reapportionment decision of the Supreme Court—had the states accepted their responsibilities, such a decision would not have been necessary. This is not to say that such happenings do not raise doubts and misgivings in my mind, but conservatives should emphasize the positive aspect of local and state action rather than being content to gripe.

Summarizing, the liberal jumps in with both feet with additional taxes and government action as the answer to any problem which occurs and many do not occur—he starts with the assumption, that the government is the bast means for solving problems. Conservatives, with John Locke, want the maximum of freedom consistent with national security in thought, spending and action.

Old Book News

MONTHLY SHAKE-OUT—While you were away, we've given the old book shelves a thorough shake-out. You'll be happily surprised to find that a lot of books that were dozing on the 97c shelf are now cut to 72c, and sleepers on that shelf are down to 38c. A number of $1.50 and $1.25 numbers have tumbled to the 97c shelf. Come check up.

IN THE FEATURE CASE — you'll find a nice little library of books about Latin America. If your interest lies in that field, here are some good, inexpensive back-ground books.

ABOUT THOSE SEA BOOKS— If you've been waiting for what's left of that swell marine collection to hit the old price roller-coaster, may as well give up. Matter of fact, what you don't buy in the next couple of weeks is going to be packed and shipped off to our New England shop, so don't dawdle.

NEW FACES — As we write this, we're about to start on another old book buying trip. Right now, we're full of hopes for rosy treasure, but you'd better ask us what we found next time you're in.

Go Ivy...Get Buckle Down Seats

SEAT BELTS—Pretty Mary Gilroy demonstrates the use of the automobile seat belts being sold, non-profit, by the Chapel Hill Jaycees until May 1. They are being sold and installed at $6. A Jaycee official said yesterday that 75 per cent of all people will be involved in accidents in the next 5 years. Of these accidents, 60 per cent of the injuries and 50 per cent of the deaths could be eliminated by the use of seat belts.

Seat belts are being sold at Jake's Sunoco, Glen Lennox Barber Shop, Stevens Shepherd, Town and Campus, Jim Durham's Sunoco, Walker's Gulf and Fitch Lumber Co.

Today Marks Deadline For Europe Trip

GM Sponsored Trip Costs Only $300

Today is the last day for registering for Graham Memorial's special group flight to London this summer. Full payment of the $300 fare will be required for registration.

A minimum of 25 reservations are necessary to schedule the flight and about 22 persons have registered as of Thursday afternoon, according to GM Director Howard Henry.

The flight, which will be on a regularly scheduled Alitalia Airlines jet, will depart from New York on June 11 and return on August 22.

The $300 dollar fare is a special rate and is substantially less than the regular fare. Director Henry said the flight will be cancelled unless the 25 minimum is met.

Harper New English Department Head; Succeeds H. Holman

New Head Is Expert On Blake

George Mills Harper, professor of English and chairman of the faculty, has been named to head the Department of English, effective July 1st, it was announced yesterday by Chancellor William B. Aycock.

Harper succeeds Kenan Professor C. Hugh Holman who has been department chairman since 1958. The chairmanship of the English Department, as with other departments of the University, normally revolves every five years.

Professor Harper, a native of Missouri, was honored in January by the Poetry Society of America when his book "The Neoplatonism of William Blake" was awarded the Eimily S. Hamblen Memorial Award for the best book of the year written on Blake, the English poet.

12 Years At UNC

Harper attended Culver-Stockton College where he received a B.A. degree in 1940. He received a M.A. degree in 1947 from the University of Florida and a Ph.D. degree in 1951 from UNC. He has been a member of the UNC English department staff since 1950.

In addition to "The Neoplatonism of Blake," published last year by the University of North Carolina Press, Harper has published several other articles and essays, all having to do with Blake and other poets of the Romantic period.

Authority On U.S. Writers

Holman succeeded Kenar. Professor Dougald MacMillan as head of the department five years ago. A native of South Carolina, Holman has written and/or edited a number of books and is considered a leading authority on contemporary American writers such as Thomas Wolfe and Ernest Hemingway.

He will now devote his full time to teaching in his special field of American literature, and to his writing. Holman is editor of two collections of work having to do with Thomas Wolfe, published by Charles Scribner's Sons, and edited the William Gilmore Simms novel, "The Yemassee," published last year.

He is the author of over fifty articles and reviews printed in leading scholarly and critical journals and, in addition, has published several detective novels.

TWO-DAY MEET

Latin American Confab

The ninth annual Southeastern Conference on Latin American Studies will convene here today for a two-day meeting. Professor Federico G. Gill, director of the UNC Institute of Latin American Studies, will serve as president of the conference.

The theme of the conference is "The Latin American Social Revolution." The meeting will attract top national figures who are active in Latin American affairs, and will be open to all interested persons. This year marks the first time the conference has met at UNC.

Ryan will speak at a special University President's Luncheon on April 27 at 12:30 p.m. at the Carolina Inn. The title of his address is "The Alliance for Progress: A New U. S. Image?"

Nehemkis will speak at a banquet dinner at the Carolina Inn at 7 p.m., Friday evening. His address is entitled "The Hour of Decision for Latin America."

The program sessions of the conference will consist of three sections on the following subjects: literature and the arts; economic development, international relations and social change; and politics and history.

U.S. Newspapers Failing To Meet Race Crisis, Bagdikian Declares

By RICHARD BURNS

The role of the press in easing race tensions, and its failure in filling this role to date was described by Washington correspondent Ben H. Bagdikian Wednesday night as he delivered the third 1961-62 Journalism Lecture.

The Chief Washington Correspondent for Thme Providence ournal and The Eevening Bulletin spoke on "The Press, the Past, and Social Change."

Our "most profound social problem," race relations, is lessening in communities where communication between the racial groups is fluent, Bagdikian says.

Negro News Neglected

Most American dailies fail in race relations by not reporting the ordinary social events of the Negro community.

The white community sees only the picture of conflict and crime among Negroes. Bagdikian sees this failure as "Not so much suppression as ignorance."

Another weakness in the American dailies is the "cliche mind." This is "a fixed model of something in life which a publisher or reporter may have."

One of these is treating newspapers on a completely business level. Bagdikian says newspapers should be thought of as "public education for a profit."

Another is that of "the low mind of readers." He says that although most readers have a "fifth grade reading ability, they do not have a fifth grade mind."

One Track Minds

"Single mindedness" is also a weakness of the American press. Although newspapers are supposed to report "reality," they are "edited severely and edited by human beings." Many publishers have the attitude that "What is good for us is good for everybody."

After the lecture, Bagdikian spoke informally with Journalism students in Howell Hall's student lounge. He said that the quality of a newspaper is dependent on the nature of its owner.

The owner must "have great personal power in the newspaper. Good newspapers are run by people with tightly held control and high regard for public service."

7 Michigan Daily Editors Quit; Claim Interference

Special to the DTH

Believing that their freedom of expression had been endangered seven of the eight newly appointed editors of the Michigan Daily refused to accept their appointments.

The seven junior editors said they would continue to publish the paper while asking for a reconsideration by the faculty-student administration board of the paper. The eighth will accept his post as city editor.

The board, which holds final authority over the paper, overruled the recommendations of the outgoing senior editors. All of the newly appointed editors believed that the board through the power of appointment was attempting to influence the overall editorial policy of the paper, a perogative of the editors. They therefore refused to accept the appointments.

Editors' Protest

The board made major revisions in the recommendations. Their decisions were based on written petitions, brief personal interviews and scrapbooks of newspaper articles.

The changes included appointing co-editorial directors instead of an editorial director and associate, the traditional structure. There were two other personnel switches.

The student publications board accepted the resignations of the senior editors and acknowledged the decision of the seven junior editors. It was announced by the board that petitions for vacancies on the senior staff would be due by May 15.

"Freest Student Paper"

Professor Olin Browder, chairman of the student-faculty board, said. "The Daily is probably the freest student newspaper in the country . . . the board intends to preserve that freedom in any case."

Former editor, John C. Roberts labelled the boards interpretation of the senior's actions as "completely distorted."

"We resigned because we considered that the Board's changes were not in the best interests of the Daily."

Jim Gaulden Heads NROTC Batallion

Jim Gaulden has been selected as commander of the NROTC Battalion for the Spring Semester, Commanding Officer Captain John G. Spencer announced this week.

Second in command will be Carl Pedersen and Ned Moore will be the Battalion Operations Officer. John Johnson and Ed Pleasants are the remaining officers on the Battalion staff.

Serving under these five men on the staff will be four others who have attained the rank of Petty Officer. These include Odell Dilliard, Garland Carlton, Frank McSwain and Pete Bondi.

There were no changes in the leadership of the Drum and Bugle Corps and the Drill Team. The former will be under the guidance of John Corbett while the latter will again be directed by Pender McElroy.

The Battalion structure, in addition to the Drill Team and Drum and Bugle Corps, includes three Companies. Each Company is composed of three Platoons headed by a Midshipman Ensign.

U. S. Back In Space Race With Moon Shot

GOLDSTONE TRACKING STATION, Calif. (UPI) — The free world scored its first hit on the moon Thursday with the Ranger-4 and jubilant scientists left little doubt they believe the success put America back in the race with Russia to land a man on the lunar body.

But Russia also claimed success in launching an unmanned Sputnik in a busy day in space on both sides of the Iron Curtain. The Soviet shot, Cosmo IV, was intended to study ways of landing a man on the moon.

The United States at the same time launched three satellites, including "UK-1" from Cape Canaveral, Fla., the world's first international satellite to enter orbit. Two other satellites blasted from Point Arguello, Calif., launch pads —both highly secret and apparently intended for defense purposes.

"The next one we make will be more complex than anything attempted by the Russians," said Dr. William H. Pickering, director of Cal Tech's jet propulsion laboratory in evaluating the "crash landing" of Ranger-4's 730-pound moon probe on the far side of the moon at 7:49 a.m. EST.

"The Ranger-4 is a big step forward. We are certainly doing more complex experiments than the Russians—so you can use your own judgment."

He had been asked how the Ranger-4 achievement, despite the fact it did not take pictures because of a technical flaw, placed the United States in regard to Russia in the exploration of the moon.

Full - Time Jobs Open With NSA

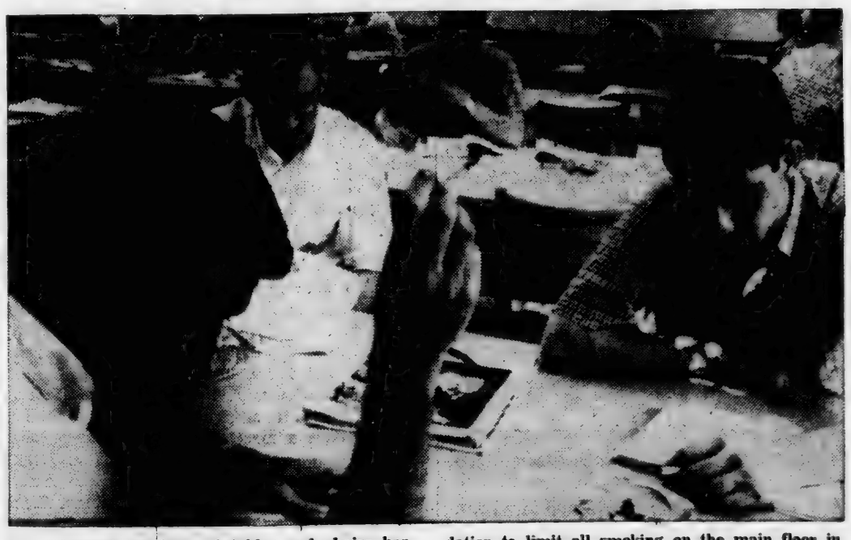
The National Student Association is now looking for people to fill staff positions in the National Office of the USNSA. All positions are full time jobs.

The National Commission Administrative positions are: Public Relations Director, Assistant to the President, Administrative Assistant to the National Affairs Vice President, Director of the Student Government Information Service, Publications Director.

Positions for the International Commission are: Administrative Assistant to the International Affairs Vice President, Latin American Assistant to the International Affairs Vice President, Campus Internation Administrator.

Anyone interested in applying for one of the positions should contact Bill Straughn, NSA co-ordinator in the Student Government offices in Graham Memorial for application blanks and more information.

NEW SMOKING ROOM



A recent purchase of tables and chairs has allowed the Wilson Library to open another air conditioned study room. The Library has changed the "smoking room" to the assembly room on the ground floor. This has been in keeping with the Student Library Committees recommendation to limit all smoking on the main floor in order to keep the noise level to a minimum on the main floor. The newspapers have also been moved to the assembly room. The old smoking room is now used for general study, and smoking will be prohibited in this room.

Students Must Re-Register In Chapel Hill

By Clyde Wilson

Students registered to vote in Chapel Hill Township will be required to re-register between Saturday, April 28 and Saturday, May 12, as a result of a precinct reorganization.

Students who can show payment of taxes on a car in Orange County, or who can demonstrate that they maintain no permanent residence outside of Chapel Hill, probably will be able to register unchallenged, according to James Shumaker, general manager of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

North Carolina law gives wide discretion to registrars in accepting proof of residence. In the past there has been conflict over student registration in Chapel Hill.

Proof of Registration

Payment of property or poll taxes in a county is one common proof of bona fide residence. Another may be proof that no permanent residence is maintained elsewhere.

New voters who can establish a year's residence in North Carolina as of the general election next November, and 30 days residence in their precinct prior to May 26, will be allowed to vote in the primary elections May 26. They will not be allowed to vote in the school tax

Student Responsibility

Student government and the Office of Student Affairs are still bickering over control of summer school government activities and publications.

—Student government wants 10 cents from the activity fee of each student to cover operating costs in the summer.

—Student government plans to print its own summer school newspaper. In recent years the Administration has printed the summer UNC News.

—The responsibilties and powers of the Summer School Activities Council should be made clear.

The bill requesting 10 cents from every summer activities fee go directly to student government was passed in March of this year by Student Legislature. These funds would pay for basic expenses, including the salary of the executive secretary, telephone costs, and costs of improving social rooms and making other capital improvements.

A bill to "redifine the powers and responsibilities of the summer school government" was also passed in March. Included is provision for a summer school newspaper to be published under student direction.

* * *

The regular-session Publications Board chooses the editor and business manager and a summer session Pub Board has control over their actions, including the power to fire them.

Dean Long has requested that he be on the summer Publications Board so that he would continue to have a voice in the newspaper's operation. The student Board would include one member of the Journalism School faculty—it seems the journalism professor could do the most adequate job of advising and supervision. There would then be no reason for Long to be on the board.

The third issue on which student government and Dean Long have disagreed is the role of the Summer School Activities Council, which was set up by student government legislation. It is not an administration organ, as some apparently believe.

* * *

The real issue in this student-Administration disagreement is responsibility—student responsibility, and can it be exercised in the summer as it is in the winter. Or are summer school students incapable of exercising the freedoms granted to their regular session counterparts? (jc)

Essay Contest

Too often, students look upon the writing of an essay as a distasteful chore. Most often, the topic to be written about is an assigned one, falling within the confines of a particular semester's course. Not often enough is the subject sufifciently broad to allow for personal pupil opinion.

Be that as it may, the educational value of labouring diligently over an assigned theme is not to be denied. Nor, however, is the value of freely and openly expressing individual opinions on matters of interest to all.

The senior class is now presenting the student body with an opportunity to compose and present individual undestanding of "The University and Its Meaning." That subject is the topical point of departure for the senior class essay contest. Your personal opinion as to just what an education and/or four years of residence at the University could and should, or does and will mean to you is being solicited.

The essay will be judged by faculty members, with emphasis on content, not on journalistic ability. The winning paper will run in the Tar Heel, for the benefit of the student body.

Prizes, presige aside. Here is an opportunity to think, an opportunity to speak. Are you there? (cw)

Europe

Occasionally, if he is fortunate and deserving, a student will have the opportunity to travel extensively. Uusually, red tape and expense hustling, a student will manage to Europe.

Occasionally, an organization will extend itself to facilitate student travel. Usually, if he is alert and hustling, a student will canage to catch up with these organized endeavours.

Graham Memorial has managed to arrange, for UNC students, a flight to Europe and back. The cost is approximately $200 less than commercial prices. One might wait quite a while for a similar opportunity. It is essential that those interested stop by Graham Memorial today.

Letters To The Editor

80 Per Cent Rule (Again), Hank And Saucers

Toppell Attacks Double Standard

To The Editor:

Of late, the Daily Tar Heel has contained a few letters on the merit of fraternities. These had been prompted by an article concerning "the 80% Rule."

However, the question of fraternities good or bad, does not enter the discussion. The pros and cons of fraternity life can be discussed elsewhere, not taking important editorial space.

The author of this article just stated that the merits of fraternities are beside the point. The point is that the "80% Rule" is an unjust restraint upon a segment of the student body.

Yet the supporters of this rule seem to imply in this rule, that because the fraternity exists, it must be imposed upon. One is forced to ask why this is so.

It is said that fraternity life is antagonistic to academic achievement, that it seriously hampers any intellectual progress. However, as has been stated, the fraternity average is above the minimum needed for graduation. Fraternity men can be found among the members of Phi Beta Kappa,, Phi Eta Sigma, and any honorary that may be mentioned.

No, this writer is afraid that it is a weak argument, at best. Academic advancement is a personal matter. The will of the individual is predominant in the analysis of his success or failure. The number of dropouts and failures is very high in dormitories in contrast to that of fraternities. (This is not taking away from the admitted intelligence of many dorm residents—merely pointing up the existence of scholastic failure there.)

One can only wonder why the administration takes a double standard in its requirements. Where is the double standard? The finest example is in the case of automobiles.

Here the rule is logical and quite fair. Any individual not making a "C" average may not have a car on campus. This is not a restraint upon all those who own a car. Why should it be? Many students with a car have high marks. There is no such ridiculous regulation that no one can have a car if 80% of the automobile owners don't make their grades. Fair? Yes. Within reason? Certainly.

In a quick about-face, however, someone—(no one definite, for everyone seems to disclaim the rule—witness the lack of administrative response to the first article)—someone decides the fraternities are the root of all the institution's evils. The panacea for all the ills in some one's mind is to penalize fraternities.

Herein lies the double standard. For one part of the student body, a fair and equitable ruling is in force. For another group of students, it seems that only repression suffices.

Fraternities exist through their members. If the propagating device of the fraternities, i.e., rush, is taken away, the fraternities will wither and die. By this rule a small minority of the membership of a house can jeopardize its existence.

It would appear that that is why the rule is in effect. One can only hope that the administration doesn't truly feel that by ridding the campus of fraternities they can find their nirvana.

* * *

In this line of thought, the question arises as to why it is necessary to "punish" the honor students in a house. Surely, there is no reason to impart a financial burden on a student because his fraternity brother has failed to make his grade. But, by implementation of this rule, a member of the Order of the Old Well must pay for the errors of another.

The reasoning behind this rule is weak. It fails "to hold water." The holes that may be punched in it are numerous. Yet it exists. Still, one must ask why?

'Hank' Insanity In J-School

To The Editor:

The men in the little white coats are coming. They are going to take away every nincompoop ghost hunter in Howell Hall (the Journalism School). This includes just about everyone over there—including some professors, I understand. They are stark raving mad and no one is doing anything about it. If action isn't taken immediately I shall be forced to contact the state mental institution.

Recently I (a non-journalism major) was studying in Howell when a ghost furor broke out. At least eight journalism students started running around the halls screaming HANK. I later discovered that some screwball named Hank P. Snow is the so-called GHOST of Howell Hall. Now Hank has never been seen in Howell Hall. His name is not registered at South Building. In fact, the truth is—Hank does not exist, except in the demented minds of those feeble-minded journalism students.

All evening weird messages from HANK kept appearing on the Journalism bulletin board. Each of them was signed by Hank's personal name stamp—in red ink. The innocent observer to Howell Hall has only to look at any message or notice on any bulletin board to see Hank's name stamped on it in red.

One Hank was bad enough but all of those chucklehead journalism majors want to be Hank. Fake Hank messages started appearing by the dozen. Some clever ones even began to forge Hank's red rubber stamp. To add to the confusion, there appeared on the bulletin board a letter from Hank's girl friend begging him to come back and care for the children. It mentioned something about a rendezvous under Dean Luxon's desk.

Journalism students: I flunked my quiz because of your lousy Hank! Everytime they yelled that name I jumped. When a war broke out and students began tearing down some Hank messages and putting up others, I didn't leave the bulletin board. The fact that is driving them all nuts is: no one knows who the "real" Hank is, and it's driving the whole school into empty-headed senility. Soon there will be as many Hanks as there are journalism students.

I have one final question—why did you tear up my message, you bums!* My message said: "Everyone who wants to join the 'I don't believe in Hank' Fan Club, sign here." Several people had signed it, too. Wayne Cling, Lloyd Grandiose, Irving Short, Bill Walnut, Jim Clod.

Well I want everyone to know that I am sane—I don't believe in Hank. I do believe that the Journalism School is composed of irrational, incomprehensible numbskulls, and demons of all types. But whoever heard of any fool believing in ghosts. I can't even believe it!

—"HANK EWONS"

P.S.: People who yell Hank make me nervous—particularly in reference to the dead.

Wellman Speaks On . . . Saucers

To The Editor:

About midnight September 19, 1961. Mr. and Mrs. Barneyy Hill drove down a lonely stretch of U.S. Highway 3, New Hampshire. Not far from North Woodstock, they spotted a bright gleaming object in slow motion against the sky. Seen through binoculars, the UFO (unidentified flying object) displayed a curving band of light and a rotating motion.

Presently the UFO drifted down toward the car, deliberately closing the distance while the couple gazed upward in stark disbelief. The rotating ceased; the luminous band resolved itself to a row of windows, shining with bluish-white fluorescence. Two red lights gleamed on opposite sides of the craft.

Hill stopped his car, scrambled out and gawked at the intruder. Gradually it angled down in his direction. The red lights began to protrude outwards, moving on pointed finlike structures that slid away from the sides.

Panic dashed over Hill. Quickly jumping into the car, he stepped on the accelerator and pulled away top-speed. Next day, when Mrs. Hill reported the sighting, an Air Force officer questioned her, showing particular interest in the mobile projecting fins. And then the security lid clamped down.

Year after year, the Air Force UFO investigation has sceened itself behind walls of inviolate secrecy, based partially on Air Force Regulation 200-2, paragraph 9. The censorship has stood firm despite every effort to crack it. In this country the only serious opposition has come from the National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena, 1536 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Early this year, when Congress reconvened, NICAP once again pressed for hearings on UFO - reality and Pentagon secrecy. Hopes ran high, for the House Space Committee had already established a Subcommittee to make an investigation. But Rep. George Miller, chairman of the main committee, decided against hearings shortly after the term began. Subcommittee Chairman Joseph Karth drifted away from his earlier contention that hearings would be desirable. And the Air Force, with help from NASA, went all out to block action. By Easter, it seemed, the latest round was over and the censors had triumphed, leaving NICAP to gather up the pieces.

Despite many problems, NICAP will gladly extend membership to anyone who cares to join us. No views on the subject are prerequisite. My own conviction is that the UFO's are interplanetary; the simultaneous radar-visual sightings the amazing speeds, and the obviously controlled maneuvers leave no room for doubt in this regard.

For a reader who wants to form his own opinion, I can do no better than recommend the following books:

Against my view: Lawrence J. Tacker, "Flying Saucers and the U.S. Air Force;" Edward J. Ruppelt, "The Report On Unidentified Flying Objects" (revised edition); Donald H. Menzel, "Flying Saucers —Myth, Truth, History."

Favorable to my case: Donald E. Keyhoe, "Flying Saucers from Outer Space" and "Flying Saucers—Top Secret;" Richard Hall and C. A. Maney, "The Challenage of Unidentified Flying Objects;" Aime Michael, "Flying Saucers and the Straight-Line Mystery."

Students: Stupefied, Attentive?

Teachers are often dismayed to find at the end of a term that though they can, according to the bell curve they grade by, award five A's, only two or three students are worthy of this distinction.

The teachers have mistaken stupefaction for attentiveness. Their students have never mastered the knack of thinking and expressing themselves but the fault is not chiefly the students'. Their high-school education has not adequately prepared them for mastering the methodology of the higher academic world into which parents have by hook and crook managed to send them.

Faced with the naivete of the college freshman, the college instructor does nothing about it. He does not even motivate or orient the undergraduate in his very new studies.

A college class large or small should be a quest for values, led by the teacher because he is the one most skilled and knows the terrain better. Instead it is but a burrowing amid ideas, symbols, and facts which seem to lie scattered beyond the students' ken. When final term papers are in, many of them deplorably late, the instructor assumes that most of his students are dead wood.

This is definitely not true, nor is it true that his students have been undermined by personal problems. They have simply been cast afloat without any stars to steer by or pilots to point them out. The professors, all except a few, behave like stokers not pilots The result is that they train stokers not pilots.

Because of this predicament, many young people miss their calling, and many more graduate from college condemning scholarship.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Robinson's Ramblings

"Sit on your butt and rake the money in. It's your unalienable right, your patriotic duty."

This rather crudely sums up the attitude of the Eisenhower administration toward American businessmen. But nowadays JFK is holding up a mirror for businessmen to look at themselves and they don't like the reflected image.

This is reported by Clarence B. Randall, former president and chairman of the board of Inland Steel Co., in a candid article appearing recently in "The New York Times Magazine."

—The tie carries an ineradicable smudge from price fixing.

—The eyes are bloodshot from reading in speech after speech that discrimination in employment and promotions is un-American—"but we have no such problem in our firm simply because we just ignore it, or kick it under the executive rug."

—The hands are swollen from "passing good will offerings" to public officials.

Mr. Randall admits it's not a pretty picture. He is further appalled by "a stain on the conscience of industry which needs to be removed, and removed soon."

In insisting that the commercial world has no monopoly on character weakness, Mr. Randall also inferred that bribery is a two-way street—before there can be a bribe-taker, there must be a bribe-giver.

And there is also the corollary statement "the human frailty of others can never justify moral turpitude in business."

The weakness' of some North Carolina sheriffs does not condone wrong doing by businessmen, simply because "everyone else is doing it, too."

Mr. Randall's warning is really aimed at all Americans—civil servants, educators as well as businessmen and industrial leaders.

In his final sentence Mr. Randall says "the survival of private enterprise in this troubled world" depends on strict business morality.

He could have gone a step further: our survival in the battle of democracy vs. communism is just as dependent on the strength of our morality as it is on the strength and effectiveness of our military weapons.

COURT CONVICTS

The IDC Court recently placed seven students on indefinite probation for abuse of a dorm social room. Two of these students were also fined $2 each because they participated in the infraction while holding dormitory offices.

Another student was moved from one dorm to another for being "generally uncooperative" in the dorm and for striking an IDC representative.

FOR COMING YEAR

Welch Outlines IDC Program

By Owen Bishop

Bruce Welch, new IDC President, told the newly sworn-in members of the Council Wednesday night that better study conditions, better relations between dorms and the rest of the campus, and a better social program for dorm residents are the major goals for the IDC for the coming year.

The cooperation, he said, would come through all the dorms working together for common goals. The competition would originate through each dorm striving to be the best one on campus.

Prizes As Incentive

As incentive for the competition aspect of the program, Welch said the Outstanding Dorm Contest offered prizes for meritorious work.

He also said incentive would come from the IDC's election of a most outstanding IDC member each month.

"We have the potential of becoming the most powerful organization on this campus," he said, "because we represent the majority of the students here."

"The success of this year's program rests not with officers of the Council, but with you. If you fail to do your job, the IDC will fail."

IDC Court Change

Presidential Assistant John Mitchener discussed several ideas under consideration for possible Council action. Among them were: Increasing dorm social fees from 75c to $1.25; Partial reversion of excessive dorm funds to the IDC treasury; and Payment for dorm damage handled by each individual dorm.

IDC Court Chairman John Gould then explained the workings of the Court. "There has been one major change this year," he said. Previously, the Court has investigated its own cases. Now the Assistant Attorney General will be handling the investigations.

The Court was then elected by the Council. The members are: Gordon Appell, Jay Dinsmore, Rex Savery, Preston Aldridge, Jim Waller, Barry Craig and Ford Rowan.

elections on the same date, however, unless they can establish a year's residence prior to May 26.

Dates And Places

Voters may register or re-register at the polling places from 9 a.m. till sunset on the next three Saturdays. They may also register at the homes of the registrars during the same hours on week days.

Most of the campus is in the East Franklin St. precinct with registration and polling place at Graham Memorial. The southern part of the campus lies partly in the Country Club precinct, with registration at Woollen Gym.

Other Chapel Hill precincts and registration places are Dogwood Acres, Mellots Store; Estes Hills, Estes Hills School; Glenwood, Glenwood School; King's Mill, Barret's Garage; Northside, Town Hall; Westwood, High School auditorium; North Carrboro precinct, Carrboro Elementary School; South Carrboro, Town Hall.

Voters must also be 21 years of age, literate, and of good character.

Exec Says Sponsors Don't Control TV

Criticism of the control which advertisers and advertising agencies allegedly have over television programming was termed "exaggerated and irresponsible" here yesterday by Jack P. Rees, executive vice-president of Compton Advertising, Inc. of New York.

Rees, a guest of the Department of Radio and Television, said that "the bulk of television programming has a dual responsibility—to the public and to the sponsors who are paying the bills."

"Prime time programs must have broad mass appeal," he said. An opportunity for television to offer programs of special interest to selected groups, he said, lay in the non-prime hours of television viewing.

Of the advertiser's responsibility in network programming, the executive said that the advertiser's first responsibility was to his own business. The advertiser "should have the right to select programs and to reject programs," he said.

Hurlers Sparkle For Baseballers; Tar Heels Meet Gamecocks Today

By Ed Dupree

Coach Walt Rabb's early season problem, pitching, has taken a turn for the better the past two weeks. His baseballers have won three of five games since April 17, but the mound staff has yielded more than one run in only one contest during that span.

Today they host Clemson's Tigers in an important ACC contest.

After losing to Wake Forest for the second straight time, 12-5, the Tar Heels registered their first ACC win as Jack Rees made his first start of the season on the mound and shut out N. C. State's Wolfpack, 1-0. The red-headed hurler, who wasn't on the roster at the start of the season, baffled the Raleigh boys on seven hits.

Rees got in trouble in the ninth inning when the first State man walked and th next singled. A strike out and a fielder's choice play put runners on first and third with two away and then Rees retired second-baseman Tom Hines on a ground out to whitewash the Pack.

The only other shutout registered by a UNC pitcher was Dave Murr's 4-0 win over Camp Lejeune earlier in the year but the victory over the Marines does not count in NCAA records.

In the first of four vacation period games, Murr handicuffed Maryland on three hits for a 3-1 victory. The Terrapins scored their single run when Frank Martz tripled and Wayne Holler singled in the second inning. Murr yielded only one hit over the last seven frames.

Jim Speight led the Tar Heel batsmen against Maryland with 2 for 4. Maryland hurlers Rich Koch and Jack Lund limited UNC to only five hits.

Russ Hollers drove in two Carolina runs in the fourth inning with a double and Bernie Isgett accounted for the final run of the game with a sacrifice fly scoring Larry Neal who had tripled.

Virginia's Cavaliers won their third straight game from UNC over two seasons by edging the Chapel Hillians 2-1. Larry Jenkins was the losing pitcher, but yielded only four hits and two runs over seven innings. Bobby Cox gave up the fifth Cavalier hit in a two-inning relief chore.

Henry "Moose" Massie, a Virginia sophomore, scattered six UNC hits to win his first game of the year. Three UNC hits came in the third inning, but a double play prevented the Tar Heels from scoring.

Rabb's men scored their run in the fifth when Swing reached base on a fielder's choice and Speight tripled. Speight, the sophomore shortstop, also had a double and led the team at the plate by going two for four.

Florida State's Ray McShane limited UNC to six singles as the Seminoles hammered the Tar Heels 9-2. Dave Pope and Heyward Hull drove in the two runs.

Sophomore Spencer Willard was the losing pitcher, but six UNC errors paved the way for eight unearned runs, five in the first inning and three in the fifth. The lone Seminole earned run was a homer by Williamson in the second inning, the team's 17th of the season—a new school record.

Willard gave up five hits in 4 and one-third innings and relief pitchers Cox and Bob Carter yielded two and one respectively.

The Tar Heels finished the vacation week with a thrilling 2-1 decision over East Carolina, the defending NAIA champions.

A bases-loaded, two-out single by Len Dellolio broke up a 1-1 game as the Tar Heels edged the Pirates. Dellolio's hit scored Paul Swing with the winning run.

Larry Neal was three for five for UNC and Bernie Isgett was two for four.

Murr was again the sparkler for the Tar Heels as he gave up only one hit in the first eight innings. He gave up two more in the ninth when East Carolina tied the score. Jack Rees got the victory in relief.

Swing stole second after singling in the sixth inning and scored UNC's first run on Neal's single.

Leading the Tar Heel hitters is Isgett, the sophomore catcher who wasn't a starter at the beginning of the season. The stocky backstop hasn't appeared enough to be the official team leader but is hitting .471 on eight hits in 17 at bats.

Buddy Tilden leads the regulars with .370 average on ten hits in 27 at bats. Neal is hitting .333 and is the number two RBI man with 8. "Charlie Brown" has 17 hits in 51 trips. The Tar Heel third baseman has one of the four Tar Heel homers—the others were hit by Tilden, Hull, and Swing.

Other UNC averages are Speight, .286, Swing, .275, Dellolio, .262, and Hull, .227. Hull leads the team with nine RBIs.

Golfers, 3-2 Over Easter

UNC In Vacation Fade

By Curry Kirkpatrick

Coach Ed Kenney's UNC golf team, which took a 6-1 won-loss mark into the Easter break, went into a mild slump last week, and could only manage three wins in five vacation-time decisions.

The Tar Heels, playing all but one of their matches at home on Finley Golf Course, started off the recess strong with victories over North Carolina State and Virginia.

All-American Pete Green, with a 76, was low for the linksmen in their 26-10 win over the Walfpack at Raleigh while Mike Dore, a sophomore from Convent Station, N. J., fired a 71 to pace UNC's 23 1/2-6½ conquest of the Cavaliers.

Carolina then took on tough Maryland and came out on the short end of a 21-15 decision. Green, out of Franklin, Mich., again sparkled as he shot a 70 and continued unbeaten in match play.

But against Georgia the next day, the husky blond's win streak was halted as the Bulldogs' Dave Boyd deadlocked Pete in their match battle of All-Americans, 1½-1 1/2. With Green's 72 being the only Carolina score at par, the Tar Heels were crushed, 23-4 for their third loss of the campaign.

UNC, though, came right back to record win number nine as they finished up the vacation period with an 18-9 win over Florida. In that one, Jay Harris, Abe Andes and Green, again, were the Carolina medalists with 73s.

Kenney's men finish out the home portion of the schedule this Tuesday when the UNC golfers entertain South Carolina. Following their last dual meet on Finley, the Tar Heels travel to Athens, Ga., where they will play in the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament on May 2, 3 and 4.

LA, Milwaukee Post NL Routs

United Press International

Willie Davis hit two home runs and his Los Angeles Dodger teammates Frank Howard and Daryl Spencer one each Thursday to spark a 14-hit attack and a 12-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs. It was a sloppy game that produced nine errors, six of them by the Cubs.

Ernie Banks hit his fifth homer of the season to drive in two Cub runs in the first, but four pitchers couldn't hold the brief lead and starter Dick Ellsworth took his first loss.

Rookie Tommy Aaron drove in four runs with three hits, including his first major league homer, to spark the Milwaukee Braves to a 10-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. Catcher Del Crandall knocked home two more runs with a double as the Braves captured their third straight game.

Unbeaten Netters Host South Carolina

By Louis Legum

The University of North Carolina tennis team has made a virtue out of being stingy by sweeping their first 18 matches in a row of the season. Wednesday afternoon against Toledo University, the Tar Heel netters gave up a meager 26 games over 9 matches in shutting out their visitors from Ohio. This afternoon, Carolina will attempt to duplicate this conquest over a visiting University of South Carolina squad.

Undefeated George Sokol, a sophomore from Bryn Mawr, Pa., has been the principle impetus behind the UNC streak which has now been extended over thirty matches. Playing on the number one court, The relatively small Sokol has bowed only in just three sets, while using his lightning-like serve and forehand to come out on the winning side on 36 sets.

"Prince Ted" Hoehn, a frequent doubles partner has won all but one of his matches. The red-haired first-yearman dropped only a road trip decision to Virginia's Bruce Farrell. In a bout with Stuart Levi of The Citadel, Hoehn rallied from a 5-2 deficit in the final set to come out ahead, 7-5.

Prodigious Bitsy Harrison, another one of Coach Don Skakle's talented sophomores, has also played extremely well over the last several contests, displaying a fine net game to go along with his powerful serve.

Veteran Keith Stoneman, guiding his mates as their captain, has enjoyed an equal amount of success in competition. The 6-3 blond from Greenville, S. C., caused a frustrated Toledo player to remark that "I'd never seen any one like Stoneman playing at my position."

Chapel Hill's Charlie Shaffer has come back from a defeat against Harvard to run off 15 consecutive victories, and thus round out Skakles' famous "Untouchables."

These five stars are backed up by an experienced group of veterans that include Dave Morgan, Garland Carlton, Stan Socke, Kirby Jones, and George Zimmerman.

Track Team Comes Close, But Falls To Tough Terps

UNC almost pulled the track upset of the year in the ACC a week ago yesterday when the Tar Heels fell to powerful Maryland, 74½-61½.

The 13-point final deficit does not tell the whole story, for Carolina gave the Terps all they could handle and when eight of the 16 events had been run, Maryland led by only 34½-33½.

But at this point, the College Park cindermen, who had copped five first places to Carolina's three, ran off five straight wins to sew it up.

Jim Montgomery, in the javelin; Dick Smith, in the 880; Don Stauffer, in the 220; Stephen Hameroff, in the discuss; and John Belitza, in the pole vault were the Terps who broke the 'Heels' backs with their consecutive victories.

For UNC, Jim Brown won the 220 low hurdles; Mike Folk took the two-mile, and the Tar Heel mile relay team of Scott Brent, Charlie Little, Jerry Stuver, and Brown won that race to sweep the last three events and cut the final margin.

Maryland's Stauffer was the meet's only double winner as he beat Carolina's Bob Hart in both the 220 and the 440. His times were 21.8 in the former and 49.5 in the latter.

Other UNC winners were Harvey Henry in the shot, John O'Bannon in the broad jump and Tom Clark in the high jump.

Student Party

The Student Party will meet at 7:30 Monday night in Gerrard Hall. All officers and Advisory Board members will be elected.

Weber Sets Two Records But Finishes Third In Triathlon

Jon Weber, a junior at UNC and a member of the National United States Pentathlon team, bettered two national records in the swimming and running events during the Triathlon Championships in New York. However, due to an unusually poor score in the shooting event, Weber was only able to gain third place in the championships.

Counted out of the running after the first event, Weber by virtue of a big heart and a will to win, came back strong during the next two days. By winning both the swimming and running events Weber was able to amass enogh points to place third in the competition with a total of 2,555 points.

Davis Shuts Out ORM For Freshmen

Jerry Davis struck out nine men and pitched the Carolina freshmen baseball team to a 4-0 victory over Oak Ridge Military Academy, yesterday, at Emerson Stadium.

The Tar Babies were sparked by Bill Taylor's two triples, driving in a run in both the second and eighth innings.

Davis allowed only five hits and gave up six walks in going the route. The Tar Babies played errorless ball behind him.

The freshmen took advantage of five errors by the Cadets, and worked Oak Ridge hurlers, Buddy Coheen and Max Coltrane for five walks.

Dick Prindle rapped two singles for the Tar Babies, and Frank Gallagher and Ron Barlow each had a base knock apiece, to round out the Tar Baby hitting.

To Drop 80 Pct. Rule

IFC Proposals Introduced In Legislature

Support of Interfraternity Council proposals for the improvement of fraternity scholarship and the withdrawal of the 80% rule was introduced in the form of a resolution by Bob James (Ind. TM 1) at Student Legislature Thursday night.

Jones' proposed desolution, like the other four measures introduced, was not acted upon by the legislature at Thursday's session.

Stating that the success of the 80% Rule has been, "very limited at best," Jones asked the legislators to formally endorse an IFC proposal that the individual members of each fraternity "would either have to maintain good grades or would have to dissociate themselves from the fraternity." "This," said Jones, "would effectively place the responsibility where it belongs—on the individual fraternity members."

Asks Bus Study

Ford Rowan (S.P., DM 1) introduced a resolution calling for a legislative study of free bus transportation to outlying portions of the campus. Rowan noted particularly the great distance between the main campus and Craig and Ehringhaus dorms, which will be opened for occupation this fall.

A bill to provide for "more equitable" distribution of salaries for members of the Daily Tar Heel staff was introduced by George Rosental (S.P., DM 1), chairman of the legislature's finance committee. Rosental also moved that the legislature postpone an earlier bill to appropriate $5,000 to the DTH to establish a printshop fund until the next legislative session. This resolution passed unanimously.

Communication Bill

Other action in the legislature included the introduction of a bill to appropriate $100 to be allotted to the legislators for the purpose of better communication with constituencies. This bill, introduced by Rufus Edmisten (S.P. DM VI), would provide funds for legislators who wished to report the activities of the legislature to students in their districts through newsletters or other means. Edmisten is the Student Party floor leader in legislature.

Larry McDevitt (U.P., DM VI), the University Party's legislative floor leader and newly appointed Presidential Assistant, introduced a bill to appropriate $60.70 to pay for the expenses of UNC's delegation to the spring regional conference of the U.S. National Student Association now in progress at Belmont Abbey school in Belmont, N. C.

Student Body President Inman Allen sent three messages to the legislature asking it to approve his appointment of Johnsey Massenburg to the Graham Memorial Board of Directors, Walter Dellinger to a vacant post on the Men's Honor Council, and six UNC delegates to the regional NSA conference. The legislature will vote on these appointments at its next meeting.

UNC To Produce Film On Graham

SG Appropriates Sum For Film Biography Of Ex-UNC President

The Student Government has appropriated $2,500 for a TV film biography of the life of Dr. Frank Porter Graham, a long-time Southern liberal, political leader, mediator at the United Nations and president of the University for 19 years.

The bill, as passed by the student legislature of the University and signed by retiring student body president Bill Harriss, states that few men have contributed as much to UNC and the state as has Dr. Graham. Harriss is from Columbia, S. C.

John Ehle, Associate Professor in the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures here and the author of five books, is serving as Coordinator for the film biography. Also on the Planning Committe e are Joel Fleishman from Raleigh, James C. Wallace of Chapel Hill, Warren Ashby from Greensboro, and Miss Anne Queen of the University YWCA.

Made in CH

The video recording will be made in Chapel Hill in the television studio in Swain Hall by the UNC Communications Center. Present plans call for the work to begin the first week in June.

The film committee states that they will attempt "to capture something of the substance and flavor of Dr. Graham's distinguished work. By means of interviews and discussions we intend to put him on the spot concerning some dozen periods and actions of his life—here at the University, as a southern liberal active with labor unions and race relations, as a senator, and as a mediator at the United Nations," Dr. Graham has consented to take part.

The completed biography will be placed in the Wilson Memorial Library at UNC nd kept there permanents.

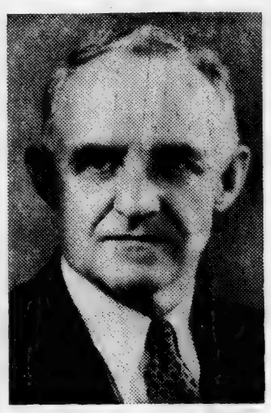
The committee has selected about twenty people who have worked closely with or against Dr. Graham over the years, to appear in the film. Each person will be given a specific subject area to cover, either in private interviews or as part of a discussion group. The interviewer may also bring up other subjects, tell of incidents he knows about, and ask questions for which he has never gotten answers before.

The committee states that "This is the first in a series of studies the we know of. Maybe this study is the first in a series o fstudies of our leaders. Such recordings if made a hundred years ago would be immensely valuable today, and we today need to start getting these things done and tucked away."



Dr. Frank P. Graham
. . . Ex-UNC President

Dr. Graham, now 76, is a native of Fayetteville. He graduated from UNC in 1909; did graduate work at Columbia, University of Chicago, Brookings Institute, the University of London; and has honorary degrees from a host of the nation's top institutions.

11th President

He became the 11th president of the University of North Carolina in 1930 after long serving as a profesor of history and an acknowledged leader on the campus and in the state.

In 1949 he left the University to go into the Senate. He has served on numerous important national organizations and for the last decade and longer he has worked as UN mediator.

Dr. Graham has been known for his hard-fighting in liberal causes in the South for half a century. It is expected in the proposed discussions, which are to be preserved for coming generations, that he will state his side of the many debates which have involved him.

All persons who want to work on the Tar Heel staff this spring are requested to come to the meeting or see Co-Editors Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye before then.

STUDENTS PROTEST BOMB TESTS

Japanese Stone US Embassy

TOKYO (UPI) — Screaming and chanting Japanese students, protesting U. S. nuclear testing, Friday stoned the walls of the U. S. Embassy compound and fought police in an unsuccessful attempt to storm the building.

More than 2,000 students surged through the streets of downtown Toyko in the largest anti-bomb demonstration since the United States resumed testing in the atmosphere Tuesday. They clasehd repeatedly with 700 policemen.

Most of the students were members of the militant leftist Zengakuren Federation. Their leaders urged them on with loudspeakers as the students snake-danced their way toward the embassy.

Police said 10 student leaders were arrested and 30 students and 10 policemen were injured in the demonstrations, which began at noon and lasted until evening.

Try to Enter Embassy

The march reached its climax in the attempt by about 1,500 demonstrators to enter the embassy compound, marching four abreast with arms locked. They charged the massive embassy gate, but ran into a wall of policemen braced three feet deep against the gate, and were hurled back.

The students organized a second charge, and the police, now kicking, slapping, and punching the demonstrators, beat them back again.

Then hundreds of students slumped to the pavement in a defiant sit-down demonstration, and others pelted the compound walls with stones. Police loudspeakers ordered the demonstrators to move on. When they refused, policemen moved in, wrestled the students to their feet, and hustled them down to an intersection about five blocks from the embassy entrance.

Some had to be carried bodily. Others allowed themselves to be dragged, but most walked willingly, jeering and hooting at the policemen.

BULLETIN

WINSTON-SALEM — Wake Forest College's trustees yesterday voted to integrate the Baptist school's undergraduate facilities to Negroes. The vote was 19 to 7, with 4 abstentions.

As of 6 p.m. it wa snot known if the trustees had acted on possible "punitive action" against Russell Brantley, author of "The Education of Jonathan Beam," a novel set on a college campus identified by many readers as Wake Forest.

Bradbury Talks On Economy Of S. America

Dr. Robert Bradbury, expert on Latin American economy at the University of Florida, said yesterday that the Latin American Free Trade Association could possibly in the future encompass most of the Latin American states and together with The European Common Market provide an effective bulwarks for the defense of the free world.

Dr. Bradbury was speaking at the afternoon session of the Southeastern Conference of Latin American Affairs which met yesterday.

Jose Cardenas, chief of the division of economy of the Inter-American Development Bank spoke on the effects and purposes of the banks. He said that the bank intended to accelerate the economy of Latin America by enabling countries to take out loans to promote industry.

Since the bank's birth a year and a half ago it has made 94 loans which total over $400 million, according to Cardenas. The bank has also undertaken the distribution of $300 million appropriated by Congress for a Social Deveilopment Fund in Latin America.

N.Y. Times Man Talks At 11 Today

Tad Szulc, for five years the chief South American correspondent for the New York Times, will speak at the ninth annual Southeastern Conference on Latin American Studies here today at 11 a.m. in room 08 Peabody Hall.

Richard B. Gray, of the Department of Government, Florida State University, will also speak at the meeting.

Polish born Szulc was educated in Switzerland, France, Brazil and the United States. He served as the United Press correspondent at the United Nations from 1949-1953. In 1955, he was the New York Times correspondent in Southeast Asia.

From 1956 through 1961, he served as the New York Times chief South American correspondent. During this period his reportorial activities included the coverage of five major Latin American revolutions, 12 elections, and close observations and reporting of the Castro revolution in 1959, 1960 and 1961.

Dellinger Heads Honor Council

He was appointed to the Council by Student Government President Inman Allen after one of the newly elected members resigned. The appointment is subject to the approval of the Student Legislature.

Dellinger has served as a member of the Council for three years and has served as Scribe for the past year. He is attending the University on a General Motors Scholarship.

He was a member of the Freshman Honors Program, and is currently reading for Honors in Political Science. He is also a member of the Golden Fleece, the Order of the Grail and the Old Well.

Grant Wheeler was elected to succeed Warner Bass as Vice-Chairman, and Whitney Durand was elected Scribe. The Scribe will be in charge of the Council's administrative work.

Dellinger said in a statement yesterday "The task of arriving at a just and fair decision in every case is one that is difficult indeed, yet it is the goal for which the Council must strive."

He said that the members of the Council must be aware that their duty is dual in nature in that they must both uphold the standards of the university community and act with fairness to every individual who comes before them.

"The administration of the Honor System has long been an area of controversy and criticism," he said. "A long as the criticism is valid and constructive, it should be welcomed by all who are interested in improving the system."

Robin Britt Enters SP Chairman Race

Already in the contest are Mike Putzel and Pete Harkness. The SP meeting will be Monday night at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall.

Britt was legislative campaign co-ordinator for the SP this spring. He has been in Legislature for two years, but was defeated this year.

He unsuccessfully sought the SP nomination for president of the student body. He has been chairman of the Communications Committee.

Dave Williams

Britt, a junior, said he was seeking the position to ensure that the party continued to make "its contribution to the campus not only in the nomination of outstanding student leadership but in serving as a forum for the discussion of a wide range of political issues, stimulating in this way the interest of the campus."

Putzel, a sophomore, is vice-president of Cobb dormitory. Harkness, a freshman, was campaign manager for the SP "Big Four" candidates.

From Radio Workshop

UNC Show Over WPTF

The first show of the UNC Radio Workshop, "The Boy Who Met Doc Blanchard," by graduate student Ralph Dennis, will be broadcast over Raleigh Radio station WPTF tonight at 9:05.

The Dennis play, written and produced at the University will also be aired Tuesday over WBT in Charlotte. It will be heard at 8 p.m. on the Project 60 program, a cultural series of the station.

The UNC Radio Workshop is a student oriented program of the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures, producing original student plays and utilizing student actors, directors, and technicians. Professors John Ehle and John Clayton are the faculty members spearheading the new play productions, along with Wesley Wallace.

A discussion session, featuring playwright Paul Green, Ehle, Clayton, and the author, will be heard at the end of the Dennis play.

The original drama has a 16-member cast and stars, among others, Gordon Cleveland of Chapel Hill as the boy; Bill Jaker of Laurelton, N. Y. as narrator; Paul Gold of Charlotte as the storekeeper; and Vi Galvin of Chapel Hill as the mother.

Other UNC Radio Workshop shows already scheduled for release include original plays by Buck D'Amore, and Leon Rooke.

Heard Heads Presidential Study Group

Report Discusses $$ And Campaigns

By BILL WUAMETT

The belief that widespread voluntary participation by private citizens and groups is the most desirable method of financing political campaigns is the underlying principle of a report on "Financing Presidential Campaigns" issued last week by a committee headed by Alexander Heard, Dean of the UNC Graduate School.

Dr. Heard was appointed head of the bi-partisan committee by President Kennedy in November of 1961. The committee was directed by the President to make "recommendations with respect to improved ways of financing expenditures required of nominees for the offices of President and Vice-President."

Heard is nationally recognized as an authority on the financing of political campaigns. He headed a seven-year study of this subject that was conducted by the Institute of Research and Social Science here from 1953 to 1960.

From results of this study, Heard wrote "The Costs of Democracy," the oniy book-length treatment of campaign financing that has been written since 1932.

Following this directive of the President, Heard's committee made 12 recommendations as to ways of raising adequate campaign funds that would avoid placing candidates in "moral hock" to large contributors.

No Federal Aid

One of the main areas explored by the committee was a system of financing national campaigns by the federal government, as Puerto Rico now does.

The committee rejected this approach, Heard stated, because "in our society, the presumption is always in favor of private voluntary action where this will suffice.

"The Federal government should not subsidize campaigns until full efforts have been made by private organizations and these efforts have been proved inadequate. Neither political party has yet made a maximum effort to raise money by widespread solicitation

Sources Of Information

The committee used three main sources of information for its report: official reports of expenditures required by the Federal government and some states, interviews with fund raisers and campaign observers, and reports by congressional committees that have investigated past campaigns.

"Although some official reports are useless," Heard stated, "because official limits on spending almost compel false reports, they are very useful if they are understood.

"Then, interviews with campaign workers and observers—such as reporters and broadcasters—help to establish the accuracy of the official reports and also their deficiencies.

"Finally, the congressional reports, such as the Gore committee report on the 1956 Presidential campaign, gave us more information on the official reports, and other information on campaign financing."

Importance Of Money

The major importance of money to a candidate, Heard said, is the "minimum essential amount" that every candidate must have to run a campaign.

"Up to that point," he stated, "money is crucial. After that point is reached, money is seldom decisive. Money only buys goods—the important thing is how the money is used.

"The Democratic party, for instance, has not lost a national election in this century for lack of adequate funds, and the Re-

Sigma Chi Derby Set For Tuesday

The 18th annual Sigma Chi Derby will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 in Kenan Stadium. Admission is free and more than forty door prizes, including clothing from Chapel Hill merchants and numerous cases of beer will be given away.

Six Campus sororities, the Nurses Dorm and the Stray Greeks will compete in the unusual contest for the Derby trophies. Events that will be of special interest include a newly added limbo contest and the Miss Modern Venus beauty pageant. Skits by each entering group and a chocolate pie throwing "Hit the Geek" event will treat spectators to humorous relaxation during the afternoon.

The traditional Derby Parade will begin at 2:00 and proceed up the center of Franklin Street, across the center of campus, and then to Kenan Stadium.

Derby chairman Harry Schiffman has said, "This will be the biggest Derby ever, and it is produced especially to suit the tastes of the Carolina Gentleman."

IDC Improvement

In the not too distant past, the Interdormitory Council was almost a joke. The members were the more popular guys from each dorm, guys who didn't get popular by enforcing strict dorm regulations. It seemed that those who played the hardest in intramurals, or those who had the most free time managed to win the scarcely contested battles for the dorm presidency.

The dorm officers knew all the "good buddies" and were just generally pretty swell guys. And the fellow who hated the filthy frat rats the most seemed the most logical choice for the presidency of the IDC.

Everyone knew that dorm social conditions stunk, and the sentiment was the guy who made the most noise about it was the man to improve their pitiful lot. The campus seemed to forget that there were beer drinkers residing in buildings outside of big frat court. Anyway, if they couldn't have parties in the dorms, they could at least make noise.

Rules were broken ,trials were called, and laughs were had. The dorm presidents were pretty swell guys.

Granted, there certainly were those who abhored the situation, but it seemed that they were in the minority. Yes, there were cases of stern and just punishment, but it seemed that there weren't too many.

Most of the situations that could have been handled by an alive IDC were dumped into the lap of South Building. The administration was swamped with innumerable petty problems. Since everyone hates the administration anyway, it was nice to have them shoulder the discontentent of all the "good buddies" who were dealt with.

* * *

Recently the new IDC members were sworn in. At the meeting, some good programs were outlined for the coming year. Some hopes seem a bit idealistic, in light of past experiences. But the tinge of idealism sits well on the shoulders of a council that appears capable of desperately needed leadership.

tI would appear that at long last the dormitory residents have realized that to ever get improved social conditions they must stop electing nice guys, and put in a few of the level-headed type.

If the dormitories even want to improve study conditions, the residents must realize that their officers are effective only when the "good buddies" down the hall let them be so. (cw)

State Establishment

An editorialist for the Greensboro Daily News recently claimed the existence of a North Carolina "Establishment"—the men in government, business, communications and education who make the "big" unofficial decisions for the state in matters concerning their interests. This group supposedly resembles Richard Rovere's national Establishment, a third cousin of C. Wright Mill's celebrated "Power Elite."

Daily News Writer Ed Yoder suggested that the state Establishment met in Chapel Hill, named several probable members (including, of course, top-ranking Raleigh officials), and tagged William C. Friday, president of the Consolidated University, as its "chairman."

Mr. Friday was understandably modest about his designation. He denied his "chairmanship."

* * *

The state of North Carolina has always complimented itself on its state-supported educational facilities. Many times it has failed in its responsibility to education—as when it voted down last fall's bond issue. But it has always been prone to honoring men of education, like Frank Graham, and men who helped education, like Kerr Scott.

Whenever the University's top administrators pay a visit to Raleight (which next year, when the 1963-65 biennium budget comes up for consideration, will be often), they are greeted with smiles and handclasps from the legislators. But real control of the future of education is too often left in the hands of others (not so vitally concerned with the education of the people of North Carolina.)

* * *

And we doubt if Bill Friday is chairman of the Establishment, if one exisits . . . although there could be few more qualified men. (jc)

IFC

At the University of Mississippi there is a group of young men, fraternity pledges, who make up a "junior" Interfraternity Council. They meet as a body separated from the actual IFC of the school. They are guided by a president who is a member of the real IFC, but all other officers are pledges. They serve as a directive force, representing the interests of pledges and doing much to further the preparation for active membership in the fraternal system.

At various northern universities there are interfraternity groups made up of alumni from the local chapters. They meet as a body separated from the undergraduate IFC. They seem to provide a highly effective and obviously experienced liason between the undergraduates and the administration.

Now that the IFC at Carolina has managed to get realistically down to work, and has demonstrated that it can be an effective force for equitable solutions to fraternity problems, it would seem that they should be interested in some apparently beneficial expansion.

"If Theah's Anythin' Ah Like, It's A Good Joke"

In The Pursuit Of Peace....

As the miracle that might have averted new nuclear tests failed to materialze, President Kennedy issued the fateful orders to go ahead with the scheduled tests in the Pacific.

In issuing the orders to the Defense Department and the Atomic Energy Commission, the President had to weigh the inexorable requirements of both national and free world defense against the many protests voiced not only by the Communists but also by neutralist statesmen, "peace marchers," and even United Nations Secretary General Thant. With deep reluctance and regret which we share, he decided that our own and free world preservation demands the tests; and nobody who is not privy to the secret military and scientific considerations that went into the decision can gainsay it.

The responsibility for these tests lies patiently with Russia, which both Moscow and Geneva and as late as yesterday stood adamantly against international inspection as endorsed in United Nations resolution and accepted, in principle, even by the neutrals at Geneva. The Administration is keeping the door open to the very last moment for the Soviets to accept a test ban pact with minimal international controls, but the hope for such a Soviet turnabout is all but gone.

Now it is more urgent than ever to explain once again to all humanity that the United States stands for a peaceful world ruled not by force, but by law, and that it has made innumerable efforts, sacrifices and concessions to attain that goal.

In the pursuit of peace the United States has been the principal backer of the United Nations as the exponent and executor of peaceful principles which are now part of world law. Without our support, moral and financial, this world organization would collapse and chaos would be the result.

In the pursuit of peace we have submitted, in keeping with United Nations resolutions draft treaties for both a nuclear test ban and gradual and balanced progress toward total disarmament under a United Nations peace force. We have reduced our insistence on control and inspection to mere sampling techniques and other minimal requirements which expose us to a calculated risk to our security that for the sake of peace we are willing to assume.

In the pursuit of peace we are offering new concessions on Berlin to reach at least temporary working arrangements within an ultimate European peace settlement—concessions which have caused serious misgivings both in Bonn and Paris.

In the pursuit of peace we have backed the United Nations in seeking the peaceful liquidation of the Western colonial empires, sometimes at the price of serious disagreements with our allies.

In the pursuit of peace, and at the risk of losing Laos to the Communist world, we are pressing for a neutralist Laos in which even the army and the police would be in neutralist hands. We have vigorously backed the United Nations in working for a peaceful and united Congo to avert big power intervention, and we have conscentiously supported the U.N.'s peace-making and peace-keeping efforts in the Middle East. In the pursuit of peace we even dissociated ourselves from our British and French allies and from Israel in their attack on Egypt over the Suez Canal.

Finally, in the pursut of peace we have poured out more than $80 billion since the war to help other, including Communist-dominated, nations, and are still doing so at the rate of nearly $5 billion a year.

In brief, we have pursued peace in accordance with our principles and to the very limits of our own and free world security, and of our financial resources. At this unhappy moment when we are about to proceed with new atmospheric testing —in the long-range interests of peace—let the record speak for us against those who would malign us.

Bus Conversation

The following is an accurate rendition of a never-to-beforgotten conversation that occurred but three days ago. The scene is a Trailways bus, filled to its quota by returning students. The conversation takes place between the last four arrivals —three relatively commonplace looking crew cut, Ivy-league dressed students whose sole distinguishing marks were three bright shiny Kappa Sig pins and there very large mouths, and a portly balding tee shirted person whose distinguishing feature was the projection of alcoholic spirits from every pore. The reason for recording this is that the quartet kept myself and everyone near them awake for two hours with scintillating wit and brilliant oratory. It went something like this:

1ST KAPPA SIG: Great Weekend!

2ND KAPPA SIG: Yeah, Great Weekend!

3RD KAPPA SIG: Yeah!

1ST KAPPA SIG: Boy, was I stoned. Drank a fifth Friday and never recovered.

2ND KAPPA SIG: Don't think I'll be able to make classes tomorrow either. Great Weekend. Drunk all the time .

2ND KAPPA SIG: Yeah.

3RD KAPPA SIG: Wish there was a woman on the bus. Boy, if there was I'd offer her my seat. I'd say, 'here honey. Here's my lap to sit on.'

1ST KAPPA SIG: You wouldn't if I beat you to it.

2ND KAPPA SIG: Great women.

3RD KAPPA SIG: Yeah, great women!

1ST KAPPA SIG: Yeah!

2ND KAPPA SIG: (to fourth person) Where're you from?

FOURTH with a fifth: High oint.

1ST KAPPA SIG: Pretty dull, isn't it?

2ND KAPPA SIG: You going to school?

FOURTH: Yeah. Third year med school at Wake Forest. That is, if the Dean don't kick me out. Got a good memory though. Might be able to make it.

3RD KAPPA SIG: Know any Kappa Sigs there? How 'bout Jim Jones, or Pete Williams.

FOURTH: Don't know them.

1ST KAPPA SIG: You ought to meet them. They're great guys.

2ND KAPPA SIG: Yeah, great!

3RD KAPPA SIG: Yeah.

FOURTH: I was fishing in this stream and this fella asked me 'what you fishing for.' I told him a Schlitz.'

1ST, 2ND, and 3RD KAPPA SIG: Ha, Ha,Ha,Ha.

1ST, 2ND and 3RD KAPPA SIG: Ha.

2ND KAPPA SIG: Yeah Great.

1ST KAPPA SIG: Hell, he pulled three gotchas.

2ND KAPPA SIG: Hell no. He was pulling them every fifteen minutes from the top of the bannister.

(Editor's note: A gotcha is a new form of sport. It involves pulling one's drawers down, both outer and inner, and points are scored in direct ratio to the number of people watching. Rumor has it that it will soon surpass baseball as our national pastime.

1ST KAPPA SIG: Guess, we ought to grab some sleep.

2ND KAPPA SIG: Yeah, good idea.

3RD KAPPA SIG: Yeah.

FOURTH: zzzzz. urp.

One time Al Lowenstein was speaking at a sorority at the University of Wisconsin. The sorority had a dumb-waiter in the kitchen which rattled terribly when it brought up food from the basement.

On this occasion, it took the opportunity to thunder ominously just after the final course and before Lowenstein was supposed to speak.

Lowenstein, distraught, exclaimed: "Good heavens! What's that?"

Letters To The Editor

Nation Must Meet Force With Force

On Thursday, April 12, a letter by David Cheek was published in the Daily Tar Heel. It was in disagreement with an earlier letter. My purpose is not to become involved in that disagreement, but merely to express my opinion in regard to some of Mr. Cheek's statements which draw my attention, either because of the context in which they are used or because they are not acceptable to me.

Mr. Cheek mentions the British Labour Party's stand on disarmament as a manifestation of "peace group strength." It might be worth noticing that since the party has taken its "unilateralistic stand," it has been the victim of continuing internal dissension and its vote- getting power at the present time is at a very low ebb. The party has been weakened immeasurably, and in fact this stand threatens its very existance. The result of "peace group strength" may be the destruction of one of Great Britain's two major political parties.

The student riots which prevented the visit of President Eisenhower to Japan are seen by Mr. Cheek as having been a result of peace group action. There is widespread pacifism in Japan, but unless the American press has been grossly misinformed and consequently misleading, the apologies of Japanese officials and student leaders hypocritical, the blame for the riots has been proven to belong to Communist and leftist oriented groups. Such factions fail to strike me as being reliable peace groups.

According to Mr. Cheek, the Atomic Energy Commission says "The United States is not behind the Soviet Union in the development of nuclear weapons." This source would not have any occasion to be prejudiced, would it? National interest and security automatically demand such a statement. The A.E.C. could say nothing else. (Note: it does not say we are ahead of the U.S.S.R. either.)

The concept, mentioned by Mr. Cheek, that the newly emerging nations of the world will be better influenced ideologically by a pro banthe-bomb United States policy, strikes me as being slightly unrealistic. The newly emerging nations are not going to be too worried about the East-West ideological conflict. They will be more interested in themselves. Will they be able to feed their populations? This is a nation's first problem. If they can not, then they will look for food and accept it, regardless of who is offering it. Only when a nation's stomach is full will it be concerned with the ideological struggle. The nations will be faced with traumatic experiences with regard to preconceived national ideals. Many of these ideals will be shattered. The real problems of feeding, civilizing, educating, and employing its people will bring these ideals crashing down abruptly. Some nations have had democracy replaced by mild dictatorships, as in Ghana and Guinea, or with chaos as in the cases of Laos and the Congo (Leopoldville). Ideals are fine things, but most of them just don't work in this world. Egocentricity and self-ameliorization are characteristic of the new nations, where the battle for men's minds has become, in reality, a battle for their stomachs, in reality and ideologies do not feed starving people.

I find the Soviet proposal of a demilitarized Central Europe absurd. A power vacuum in Central Europe would be an invitation to Communist landgrabbing. Western Europe would be undefended and open to invasion in time of war. And I do not believe that Central Europe would permit itself to become the sacrificial lamb of super power politics.

Mr. Cheek says the statement "The Reds want the world and they won't stop until they get it one way or another" shows a "defeatist attitude." This is not a defeatist statement, but rather one of hard reality. Communism aims at world conquest. In my lifetime East Europe, Tibet, North Korea, North Viet Nam and or bamboo curtains. It is time for China have slipped behind the iron the world to stand up and shove an iron fist into the next piece of communist imperalism. Mr. Cheek, this opinion is not defeatist or chauvinistic, but it is rather hard& brutal realism.

In his conclusion Mr. Cheek states that the way to reach a "peaceable solution to the Cold War" is "to stop building weapons, stop testing weapons ,and stop discrediting every proposal that the Communists make." In the event of war we can not afford to be hindered by a technical lapse. The Free World is opposed by a force which would like to see it removed from the face of the earth. Defeat would be the end of our concepts of relative democracy, freedom, self-respect, and of our socio-economic system. Technical equality can be obtained only by continued building and testing of new weapons. In today's world disarmament is not likely to succeed because there is a lack of trust. It is well placed too because Communism operates on a different scale of values than we do. Their word has been proven to be worth little and their ethics are highly questionable. Their gods live in the Kremlim and like the gods of classical antiquity they change their minds when it is convenient to do so.

At the conferences very little can be accomplished until they are closed to the public. National pride prohibits the granting of concessions and compromises with previously stated values. In closed conferences negotiation would be easier and concessions could be obtained. As it is now, each camp discredits the proposals of the opposition, regardless of their validity, because it seems to be expected that the opposition is never right. Closed conferences might ease this problem.

Mr. Cheek does not favor unilateral disarmament. He does favor "peripheral steps that will eventually bring about peace and harmony between the two powers. I think that everyone else does too, but, the difficulty is to define these steps in mutually agreeable terms. The problem is that we can not gamble because this is a game for keeps and I am not willing to put the United States up as the stakes in a game where I have a chance of losing. Technological developments and weapon tests will have to continue in the best interests of national security. We must remain very strong as we walk down the long road to meet Communism. A weak nation is nothing in this game. History speaks for itself on this topic with the classic example of eighteenth century Poland and the famous partitioning of that country.

World Peace is still far away from us and in the interim we must protect ourselves. We must also be wary, and realistic in order to survive. Unfortunately we can not cloak ourselves in ideals and dreams because they are not bulletproof. We must meet force with force every time that the Communist cancer appears in a new area, until they come to recognize the fact that they can go no further because we will exist. Perhaps then the Communists will come to recognize the fact that peaceful co-existence will be the only alternative to a mutually destructive nuclear war. When this impasse is reached, and only then will trust be possible and negotiation succeed. We will then have beaten them at their own game . . . the use of force . . . by continually frustrating their plans. We will never be subservient. Until the impasse is reached and the resolution and power of the Free World to continue its existance is accepted by Communism, STRENGTH and REALISM will be our best weapons to cope with Red transgressions.

publican party has almost always had more funds available than the Democrats have had."

Bi-partisan Campaign

One of the committee's major recommendations was the encouragement of private organizations to sponsor bi-partisan political fund raising activities.

As one example of this type of bi-partisan fund raising, Heard cited the plan of the Aero Jet Corp. in California during the 1958 and 1960 campaigns.

That corporation, he said, with the cooperation of the union, sponsored a fund raising drive in which the employees could keep their contributions secret.

19 Out Of 25 Gave

Candidates from both parties were allowed to speak during out-of-working hours and the corporation invited registrars to come to the plants (which is legal under California law).

"Out of 25,000 employees," Heard said, "19,000 contributed an average of $3.20 apiece, for a total of $60,000."

Heard believes this sort of drive will work wherever both the corporation and the union are assured that employees will be able to give freely, without pressure from either side.

Other Findings

Other major recommendations of the committee were:

1. Tax deductions for small contributors.

2. The elimination of Federal ceilings on expenditures and the establishment of an effective system of reporting campaign expenses.

3. The continued equal enforcement of prohibitions on direct contributions by corporations and labor unions.

"Some people feel that enforcement of this prohibition has not been strict enough on unions," Heard commented, "but the only indictments for violating of this statute have been against unions. It all depends on one's viewpoint."

Report Favorably Received

The recommendations of Heard's committee have received widespread bi-partisan support so far, and President Kennedy stated in his news conference that he would recommend legislation based on the committee's findings.

"Passage of legislation during this session of Congress," Heard stated, "will probably depend on what the President recommends, and when he submits it.

"The fact that our report was unanimous, and that it was a bi-partisan committee," he concluded, "should give our recommendations a good deal of weight."

TUESDAY CONCERT

University Chorus To Present 'Elijah'

The University Chorus, under the direction of Wilton Mason, will perform of Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah" in Hill Music Hall at 8 p.m., Tuesday.

For this concert the University Chorus will be joined by soloists Nell Wiseman and Martha Teachey, soprano, Virginia Johnson, contralto, Robert Williamson, tenor, and Bert Adams, baritone, who will be heard in the title role of the prophet Elijah. All of these singers have appeared in many operas and oratorios performed in this region and are well known to the musical public.

The "Elijah" is considered by musicians to be an ideal model of the dramatic oratorio. Alfred Einstein, the historian of the romantic era which produced the work, speaks of it as being a work of "the greatest stylistic purity, of the highest nobility, of the loftiest spirituality."

It served as a model for the English oratorio of the 19th century and its popularity has continued to the present day. It holds a firm place in the affections of public and performers, second only to Handel's "Messiah."

James Holmes, a graduate student in the music department, will be the organist for the performance. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Foreign Student Counselors Listed

The following students have been announcel as Foreign Student Orientation Counselors by coordinator Susan Holly Woodward:

Fred Anderson, Jim Light, Lou Jay, Gary Sutherland, Joady Bryant, Deal McArthur, Pam Butler, Glenda Lackey, Lee Shepherd, Eleanor Hambright, William Robert Bullard, Bob Ferry, Ben Newlin.

Poole, Bryan Win AFROTC Awards

Two AFROTC cadets were awarded the Military Achievement Award in special Pass-inReview ceremonies here last week.

Cadet A/1c James R. Poole III of Lumberton and Cadet A/2c H. D. Bryan of Chapel Hill were awarded a ribbon and a letter of commendation for earning more than 15 merits in the program this semester. Both cadets are sophomores enrolled in the basic AFROTC program.

Poole is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Poole, Jr. of Lumberton, and Bryan is the son of Dr. and Mrs. A. D. Bryan of Chapel Hill. Poole is a graduate of Lumberton High School, while Bryan was graduated from Darlington School, Rome, Ga.

JACK LEMMON

'Cowboy' Film Stars Lemmon Ford, Donlevy

"Cowboy," starring Glenn Ford, Jack Lemmon, Anna Kashfi, and Brian Donlevy, will be tonight's Free Flick presentation. The West as it really was—the life-choking dust on the trails, the lashing brutality of the cowboy and his savage practical jokes, the authenticity, excitement and greatness that is the epic of the real American cowboy—have been brought to life in this technicolor production.

This is the real-life story of Frank Harris, young adventurer and would-be cowboy who bluffs a tough cow man into taking him on a cattle drive along the trail to Mexico and back. Outstanding performances by Glenn Ford as the hard-bitten rancher and Jack Lemmon as the tenderfoot make this picture giant-sized entertainment.

Showings will be in Carroll Hall at 7:30 and 9:30 and only students with ID cards will be admited.

Tar Heels Club Clemson Baseballers By 11-5

Rabb's Men Host Gamecocks Today

By ED DUPREE

Clemson's previously undefeated pitcher, Tommy Lyon, was no match for North Carolina's hitting, nd the lauded Tiger batsmen could manage only six hits against three UNC pitchers Friday as the Tar Heels clubbed the visitors, 11-5.

P. W. Swing and Larry Neal each drove in three runs for the Tar Heels to give the homestanders all the runs needed for the win.

Swing carried a .275 batting average into the game with Clemson, now 5-3 in the ACC, but went three for three to raise his mark to .315—a familiar level for the Tar Heel second-sacker.

P. W. walked in the first inning and scored the first run of the game when Neal singled to left. After singling in the third, Swing hit safely again in the fifth to drive in Whitey Cox with UNC's third run. A sharp grounder past the Tiger shortstop, football halfback Elmo Lam, went all the way to deep center field for a triple and two more RBIs for Swing.

Neal was two for three, swinging twice to left field—each driving in a run—and the third baseman from Kannapolis drove in another with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning. Neal raised his average to .352 against the Cats.

But Buddy Tilden surged to the top of the team in batting by going three for four. His mark now stands at .419, unofficially the highest in the Atlantic Cost Conference. All of Tilden's hits were singles and the stocky left fielder scored three runs.

Jack Rees was the starting UNC pitcher, but gave up four runs and four hits in his 2 2/3 inning chore. Bobby Cox pitched the next 2 1/3 frames, yielding one unearned run, to gain the victory, his second against two losses.

Larry Jenkins, a 6-foot lefthander from Mt. Holly, was the pitcher of the day, pitching four scoreless innings and giving up only one hit. In saving the game for Cox he retired the last 11 men to face him.

Clemson broke loose for four runs in the third inning to overcome North Carolina's 1-0 lead. They added a single run in the fourth and led 5-1 going into the bottom of the fifth inning.

Lam, sporting the best record in the ACC—5-0—had given up three hits over the first four innings, but the trend changed considerably in the fifth.

Dave Pope opened the inning with a home run to left field. The speedy center fielder's long drive touched Nick Lomax's glove in left, but Lomax hit the fence at full speed as soon as he reached the ball. It bounded off the mitt and over the fence for Carolina's fifth homer of the season.

With two runners on, Swing got his single, scoring Cox. Jim Speight then forced Swing at second on a fileder's choice play. Speight's grounder advanced Tilden to third and Tilden scored on Neal's bingle.

Lomax in left field bobbled Neal's hit, allowing Speight to score from first. Len Dellolio singled to drive in Neal with the fifth run of the inning.

The five-run outburst put the Tar Heels ahead to stay, 6-5. They added two more runs in the seventh and three in the eighth.

Lomax and Lyon led the Clemhon hitters with 2-4. Dave Ellisor, and Buddy Nixon had the other Tiger hits.

Nixon drove in three runs with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the third inning. Lyon got the fourth Clemson RBI.

Johnny Jones, carrying a lofty .405 average into the game—high for the team which was hitting .309 as a unit—was stopped cold by Rees, Cox, and Jenkins. He went 0-4 as his average dipped to .370.

The Tar Heel hitting, in addition to Tilden, Swing, and Neal, was Dellolio (1-4), Pope (2-4), and Jenkins (1-1).

TED HOEHN, playing in the number two position for Coach Don Skakle's undefeated tennis team, has a 17-1 record this season. Hoehn is one of four sophomore netters who has paced the team to 19 straight victories this season. The others are George Sokol, Bitsy Harrison, and Charie Shaffer. The two year win steak is now 31 games.

Victory Streaks Clash As Netters Host Clemson At 2

By LOUIS LEGUM

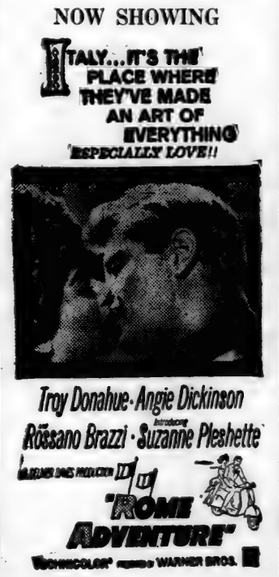
An ambitious challenger meets a wary defending champion on the varsity tennis courts this afternoon at 2:00 p.m. The stake is the ACC crown and a perfect record. Carolina's netters, sporting a 19-0 season thus far, and 31 in a row over two years, host a Clemson squad without a loss in 12 matches.

Coach Don Skakle's team has not been hard pressed yet this year. However, the Tigers will attempt to upset the Tar Heels by using part of the same formula that has worked so successfully for UNC—youth. A group of very capable sophomores are headed by Alabama native Doug Stewart and Malloy Evans. Last year in a freshman match, Stewart almost beat Carolina's George Sokol with his soft shot game, while Evans dropped Ted Hoehn.

The Tigers are anchored by their number one man Bobby Burns, who will play gainst Sokol in a match of unbeatens. Burns, who did not play last season, is ranked as the number one player in South Carolina, and two years ago finished in the semi-finals of the ACC tournament.

Skakle expects his team to be ready for the determined Clemson netmen. His "Big Five"—Sokol, Hoehn, Bitsy Harrison, Keith Stoneman, and Charlie Shaffer—have all been playing well as of late. This conclusion is more than evidenced by the spring trip, when Carolina ripped through The Citadel, Rollins, Georgia, and Furman, after decisive conference victories against Maryland, Virginia, and Duke. So far, the "Big Five" has lost only 6 individual matches out of 90.

The Tar Heels will be seeking to wrap up their seventh ACC championship in eight seasons. Included in this string is a record of 31 consecutive conference triumphs.



Blue Devils Nudge UNC Golfers, 15-12

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Duke University rode the three-under-par 69s of George Smith and John Abernathy to a 15-12 victory over Carolina, Thursday on Finley Golf Course.

Smith, playing in the number one position for Coach Dumpy Hagler's linksmen, fired his 69 on the way to a 1½-1½ match play tie with the UNC All-American—Pete Green. Green, who has yet to be beaten this year, also broke par with a one-under 71.

The Tar Heels, who dropped the best-ball activity, 5-4, had two individual-match winners. Miami Shores, Fla., sophomore Abe Andes came in with an even-par 72 and a 3-0 win over the Blue Devils' Dave Franklin while Mike Dore, another soph from Convent Station, N. J. beat John Sronce, 3-0, for the other UNC win.

For Duke, which won eight conference matches without a loss last year in addition to taking the ACC tournament, Dick Dion and Richard Bassett were other individual winners.

Dion turned back Jay Harris, 2½-1½ while Bassett downed Dinny White, 3-0.

Coach Ed Kenney's UNC club next faces South Carolina Tuesday on Finley in its last home match of the season.

The summary:

Pete Green (UNC) tied George Smith (D), 1½-1½. Richard Bassett (D) def. Dinny White (UNC), 3-0. Best ball: Duke 2, UNC 1.

Frosh Nine Boasts 6-2 Mark; Faces Blue Imps Monday

By LOU ROSENTHAL

Carolina's Freshman Baseball team, behind sparkling pitching and timely hitting, increased its record to 6-2, since the spring holidays.

The Tar Babies started out with three straight wins over Wilmington, N. C. State ,and Wake Forest, before losing the second game of a double header to the baby Deacs 4-3.

Bruce Crump's charges came back against Louisburg, but then dropped a slugfest to State, 15-10. Since that loss, the Tar Babies have beaten Duke and Oak Ridge Military Academy.

Bill Dannemann has turned in the best record so far, 3-0, coming in twice in relief to pick up the victory. He also pitched a nine-inning win over Louisburg. His ERA is also lowest on the squad, 1.97.

Jerry Davis rebounded from the loss to Wake Forest to pitch consecutive wins over Duke and Oak Ridge.

The Oak Ridge victory, a five-hit shutout, added nine strikeouts to Davis's record. His total of 18 is the squad's highest.

Walton Ward has the other freshman victory, a 13-9 win over state.

Frank Gallagher, who has only appeared in 2 games, because of spring football, has a single and an inside-the-park homer in three trips to the plate.

Ken Willard, another gridder, has the only other round-tripper for the Tar Babies; a 370-foot smash in a pinch-hitting role.

Bill Taylor, pushing the .300 mark with a .290, has the most triples, 2, both coming in the Oak Ridge win.

Ken Boykin who splits catching chores with Krues, has hit two doubles to lead in that department.

Altogether the Tar Babies have a .243 team batting average and the ERA is 4.36.

Their next game is Monday, against Duke, in Durham. They return to Chapel Hill the next day to face the same foe in the third of four scheduled games between the freshman clubs.

31ST CONSECUTIVE WIN

Skakle's Men Top SC, 9-0

By LOUIS LEGUM

Spectators in the newly expanded bleachers on the tennis courts received somewhat of a surprise yesterday afternoon. For the match with the University of South Carolina, Coach Don Skakle put four of his "Big Five" on the bench, and trotted out in their place his famous "pit crew" of veterans. The spectators received an even bigger surprise when the collection of second-stringers rung up perhaps the most impressive scores of any Carolina team. Forfeiting two matches, the Gamecocks were able to win only six games out of 90, as they bowed to the Tar Heels, 9-0.

George Sokol was the only regular to play against South Carolina. In his match with Charles Nash, the undefeated sophomore spent just 22 minutes in ringing up a 6-0, 6-0 decision. His steady ground-strokes and surprisingly quick serve forced Nash into numerous errors.

On the number two court, Dave Morgan duplicated Sokol's effort by shutting out Phil Mansell, 6-0, 6-0. Having slumped briefly at midseason, the Asheville junior won his third straight match. Another teammate from Asheville, Stan Cocke, also won 6-0, 6-0 over Joe Logan.

Senior Garland Carlton suffered in comparison as he dropped one game in his first set against Bill Woods and finished with a 6-1, 6-0 triumph. The final singles saw stocky New Yorker, Kirby "Caboose" Jones win a 6-2, 6-1 decision over Al Smarr.

Bureaucrats Hurt Alliance For Progress

By BILL DOWELL

"There is no doubt that if the alliance for progress is carried on as a social revolution from Washington, it will collapse," Tad Szulc, New York Times correspondent to Latin America said yesterday. Szulc delivered the last paper of the 1962 session of the Southeast Southeastern Conference for Latin American Affairs.

Answering a question about Washington bureaucracy and the Alliance, Szulc said that it was like someone trying to court a girl through a staff meeting.

He said that if the Alliance were to succeed it would have to convince South American diplomats that it was worth sacrificing their political careers to defend it.

Contact With the People

The Alliance would also have to convince Latin America that it was not just another big grant from the United States, he said, and it would have to get into the boondocks and establish contact with the common people.

Szulc said that a viewpoint held by many people about the Alliance is that it is a race against time to build more dams and housing projects than the communist.

"That view," he said, "is something like a group of boys holding their fingers in a leaky dike to prevent a flood. The next step is a general lamentation because the flood is impossible to hold back."

Fear Of U. S. Help

Szulc also said that he had been told by a Latin American diplomat that the Latin American people were worried about the United States going right. He said that they were afraid that if they became to friendly to the United States they would not be able to reform their own governments.

Brass Group Will Present Concert Here

The University Brass Ensemble under the direction of Edward Kettick will present a concert Wednesday night of the works of Pezel, Poulenc, Ewald, Bohme, and Dahl. It will be held in Hill Hall at 8 p.m.

Sonata No. 30 by Johann Pezel, will illustrate the work of a seventeenth century German musician who in his lifetime composed and published several collections of pieces for wind instruments.

Sonata for Horn, Trumpet, and Trombone by the French composer Francis Poulenc displays Poulenc's compositional traits: polytonal techniques and interesting and unusual rhythms.

Victor Ewald wrote his Opus 5 for a quintet of saxhorns, a family of brass instruments invented in the 19th century by Adolph Sax, who also gave to the musical world the saxophone. This work shows to some extent Russian influences reminiscent of Tchaikovsky.

Sextet, Opus 30 by Oskar Bohme is one of the most difficult pieces in the entire repetoire of the brass ensemble. It combines ensemble techniques found in the string quartet and also shows Bohme's feeling for melodic lines.

Dahl was at one time a disciple of Stravinsky, his advanced polyphonic style in free dissonata counterpoint has had considerable influence on contemporary writing for brass instruments.

Edit Writer's Conference Is Next Week

The 13th annual N. C. Editorial Writers Conference will be held here next Friday and Saturday, with an array of speakers including Tom Wicker, a UNC alumnus, who is now a staff writer for the New York Times.

Robert Campbell of the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel. Conference chairman, announced a diversified program, including a debate on "Legislative Reapportionment."

Speakers will be State Senator Archie Davis of Winston-Salem, who will represent the viewpoint of the urban Piedmont, and Senator Frank Banzet of Warrenton, who will talk for the rural east.

"Who Reads the Editorial Pages" will be a topic by a panel composed of Editor Emeritus Lenoir Chambers of Norfolk, Va., winner of the Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing; William D. Snider of the Greensboro Daily News and Prof. Wayne Danielson of the UNC School of Journalism. Danielson will present some actual surveys on editorial page readership.

Editorial pages will then be criticized by a cross-section of editorial writers in the state Saturday morning.

All the sessions except the luncheon and dinner will be in Howell Hall, with Walter Spearman, professor of journalism, as secretary of the conference.

COMING NEXT WEEK

Committee Interviews Set

President Inman Allen announced yesterday that interviews for positions on all Student Government executivt committees will be held during the coming week. Interviews will be in the President's office on second floor Graham Memorial from 1:30 to 5:30 daily Monday through Friday. Interview times may be reserved in advance at the Student Government Office.

Allen urged all interested students, regardless of previous experience or year, to apply for positions. Further information about the committees may be obtained from the Student Government office—942-1463.

Positions are available on the following committees:

International Students Board—concerned with furthering better relationships for foreign students in the student community, promotes exchange of ideas and cultures, and administers Goettingen and NSA scholarships.

Toronto Exchange Committee—administers the annual student exchange between Carolina and the University of Toronto.

Student Credit Commission—attempts to improve credit relations between students, individual merchants, and the Merchants' Association by handling the problem of bad checks.

Library Committee—works with the library administration on student grievances to seek a fair solution to all problems.

Men's Council Clerks — keep the proper records of all men's trial proceedings.

Communications Committee—publicizes various activities and positions open in all areas of Student Government.

Academic Affairs Committee — studies courses and academic procedures to make recommendations for improvements to the appropriate offices.

Campus Affairs Board — investigates and attempts to alleviate campus problems as recommended by the Legislature, President, members, and other students.

Budget Committee—draws up and submits an approximate $150,000 student Government budget to the President for subsequent legislative consideration under chairmanship of the Student Body Treasurer.

Consolidated University Student Council—discusses mutual problems and plans inter-campus activities with students from each of the three schools in the Consolidated University.

Campus Committee of National Student Association — coordinates activities with this channel for exchange of ideas and programs among 400 member schools, of which Carolina is a leading member.

Secretariat—supervises and performs secretarial work in all phases of Student Government under chairmanship of the student body secretary.

Attorney General's Staff—responsible for investigating all violations of the campus and honor codes, protecting the rights and advising of defendants, and presenting cases under direction of the Attorney General.

Honor System Commission—studies the functioning of the honor system to recommend improvements and presents our system to new students, other student governments, and high schools throughout the state.

Dance Committee—makes and enforces rules governing the conduct of dances at Carolina with a representative present at all functions, on or off campus.

State Affairs Committee — promotes through publicity and personal contact the standing of the University throughout the state, with a view toward advancing one interest in legislative appropriations.

Publications Board — responsible for coordinating and supervising the activities of the various student publications.

ESSAY CONTEST

"Content rather than style" will be the basis of judgment in the Senior Class sponsored essay contest, it was announced by Ray Farris, class president. Subject of the essay is "The University and Its Meaning."

All students are urged to enter their essays of any length in competition for prizes to be announced later. Entries must be turned in to the office of the Daily Tar Heel in Graham Memorial by May 11.

Winners will be announced by the faculty committee judging the essays. The winning paper will be run in the Daily Tar Heel. All prospective essayists have been encouraged to give serious thought to their interpretation of the university and submit an entry.

JEFFERSON AWARD

KENAN PROFESSOR OF LAW, right, is congratulated by Chancellor William B. Aycock, left, when Dr. Van Hecke Friday was announced as the winner of the 1962 Thomas Jefferson Award at the University of North Carolina. The Jefferson award was made known at a meeting of the University faculty Friday. Dr. Van Hecke is former dean of the Law School and is former President of the American Association of Law Schools.

COLLEGE ROUNDUP:

No 'Pinks' At Maine

The threat of adverse public opinion has apparently caused the cancellation of a proposed debate at the University of Maine that would have featured a speaker of "communist persuasion."

The debate was canceled after its organizer surveyed the state legislature as to their opinion of public reaction. Twenty percent of the solons said they were opposed, forty per cent said there would be little public opposition, and the rest said they had "mixed" feelings.

Upon receiving the results of the survey (which was conducted after the University's president expressed concern about public opinion), its sponsors dropped the project. "Public opinion," one sponsor commented, "would turn the whole thing into a circus."

LEGAL LIQUOR

A petition to allow Stanford University students over 21 to have liquor in their dorm rooms has been signed by over 1,700 students and presented to the Student Legislature. The Legislature is expected to call a special referendum on the issue.

A faculty committee has also been studying the problem for six months and is expected to submit a report shortly. Final action on the issue, however, must come from the University President and the Board of Trustees.

FOOTBALL IS "TOUGH LIFE"

Nearly half of the University of Kentucky football team have turned in their suits since Charlie Bradshaw became head coach this January. Eighteen quit before spring practice and 19 others left after practice began.

"Life isn't easy and football at this level certainly isn't," Bradshaw has commented, "but none of us are sadists."

SIGMA NU GETS AUTONOMY

The Cornell chapter of Sigma Nu has been released from a national discriminatory clause by a waiver granting local autonomy to the chapter. All members of the local fraternity will be regarded as members of the national, even if they had been denied national membership before the waiver was granted.

The Cornell Sun stated that "the University chapter is one of the few Sigma Nu locals that has received a waiver from the national before a university-imposed deadline. The national policy has been to delay granting local autonomy until the last moment."

FRATERNITIES REFUSED

Three of four fraternities at Colgate with discriminatory clauses have reported that efforts to remove these restrictions in the local chapters had been thwarted by the national fraternities, mainly because Colgate has no definite time limit for removal of the clauses.

Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Nu stated their positions for removal of the clauses had been rejected on these grounds. Lambda Chi supported an abolition resolution at the national convention last summer, but the resolution was defeated.

Spaghetti Dinner

Tri Delts will have a spaghetti dinner Monday night at 5:30 and 6:30 at the Tri Delt House. Tickets may be purchased from any Tri Delt-er or at the door. Proceeds will go to the Tri Delt scholarship fund.

A. G. Whitener To Address YAF

A. G. Whitener, leader of the recently formed Conservative Party in North Carolina, will speak to the Young Americans for Freedom Monday night at 7:30 in the Law School Courtroom.

Whitener, a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Sixth District, will discuss the need for the restoration of conservative, constitutional government, and the desirability of the establishment of an independent Conservative party in North Carolina.

There will be a question period at the end of Whitener's speech. YAF has invited the general public, including those of opposing political views, to attend the meeting.

Brantley Is Not Censured By WF Board

No action will be taken against Russell Brantley, whose controversial novel, "The Education of Jonathan Beam" has created furor among North Carolina Baptists. This was the decision of the Wake Forest College trustees in a 16 to 4 vote Friday.

One reviewer has termed the book as "an attack on the narrow-minded religious fundamentalism that the author finds in a large segment of the Baptist State Convention."

The trustees also voted to drop racial bars in the undergraduate college during the same Friday meeting.

Finance Committee

The Finance Committee of the Student Legislature will meet Wednesday at 5 to 7:30 p.m. in Roland Parker II.

Laotians Invade Carolina

OFFICERS—Two Laotian officers inspect American clothing during a visit to Chapel Hill yesterday. They are part of a group of 66 officers representing 17 countries currently training at Ft. Bragg's Special Warfare School. The Chapel Hill visit was one of three trips taken to show the officers something of the United States other than military life. Other countries represented by the group are Thailand, the Republic of China, Nicaragua El Salvador, Italy, Viet Nam, the Philippines, Haiti, Germany, Turkey, Argentina, Chile, Columbia, Liberia, Nigeria and Korea.

Dormitory Votes

A University Party candidate in the spring elections said Carolina was a "no-party" campus, rather than predominantly sympathetic to the Student Party or the UP.

He is right that most students have no loyalty to either party. He is right that a majority of the student body doesn't vote in campus elections. He is right that most students who do vote, wouldn't class themselves as SP or UP like they would as Democrats or Republicans.

He is wrong, however, if he thinks the majority of students won't vote for one party most of the time. In recent years Carolina has become more and more a Student Party campus. With the addition of Craige and Ehringhaus dormitories, where the SP should be strong, the campus will become more predominantly Student Party territory.

University Party leaders realize this. This spring former chairman and now student body treasurer Bill Criswell convinced the party to adopt a new convention setup, where non-Greek members have a much greater potential voice.

The UP realizes that unless it shifts its base of support onto broader ground than fraternities and sororities, it will be hard put to win future elections.

The SP is holding a meeting Monday night to select a new party chairman. In this "out" year the party will probably keep in mind its traditional pro-dormitory position and relatively liberal stance which have led it to successes in the past.

For instance, one of the chairmanship candidates, Mike Putzel, is vice-president of Cobb dormitory. He has a dormitory orientation typical of most successful Student Party leaders.

More and more the dormitory is becoming the campus political battleground.

The University Party has pledged to establish an all-campus weekend, to make several other dorm improvements in the next year. It hopes to make permanent inroads into SP dorm votes.

The past year's SP administration did only an adequate job in the way of dormitory physical improvements. If the party doesn't take up a rallying cry of "We're for the dorm man," this year it might be in danger of losing part of its base of support to the opposition.

Communication Vital

COMMUNICATION is a word vital to any University community. Communication between the student and all aspects of his world is central to the educational process.

Student Government also plays an important role in the educational process. On this campus, with only 9,000 students—supposedly a select group of reasonably intelligent, interested persons—we have an ideal situation for learning through practice the concepts of democratic government.

One of the most important functions of a democratic government is to communicate with the people, and this function is especially easy to fill here in such a small, generally intelligent community.

Unfortunately, very few student government officials have taken advantage of this situation, and the result has been a student body largely disinterested in student government. The politicians storm the dorms and fraternities twice a year during the fall and spring elections. Then, when elected, they go off to the second floor of Graham Memorial and work without attempting to explain, justify, or even inform the students of their work until the next election.

In doing so, student government officials are not only denying the communication function of democratic government, but potentially cutting their own political throats. A legislator, for instance, who has faithfully written his constituents a newsletter throughout the year would have a much better chance of getting re-elected than someone with whom the students were completely unfamiliar.

* * *

Next Thursday the Student Legislature has an excellent opportunity to rectify this situation and enhance the process of communication. The matter in question is Representative Rufus Edmisten's bill to appropraite $100 to the legislature's finance committee to be allotted to student legislators for "better communication with constituencies."

The bill would provide funds to legislators who wish to write a newsletter or report on the legislature's activities to the students of their districts.

The executive branch of student government has already tried to solve this problem. The establishment of the Communications Committee last year was an imporant step, and President Allen has promised to continue the process — a promise we believe he will keep for both idealistic and political reasons.

The legislative branch should now take this step by passing Representative Edmisten's bill posthaste. However, just passing the bill will not be enough: the legislators must then use the funds they have given themselves or the whole effort will be useless.

Every legislator should vote for this bill next Thursday, and every legislator who votes for it should use the funds appropriated to publish a newsletter or report regularly.

Atomic Testing

They dropped a bomb on Christmas Island three days ago. The government announced that it was the first in a series that will end in a few weeks to be followed surely by a resumption of Soviet testing shortly thereafter.

It signalled the failure of the Geneva Conference to arrive at any solution of the problem for the impteenth time in as many years.

But what perhaps is more staggering though less noteworthy in the public press is that a handful more of the world's children will be mutated, a few adults will die earlier deaths, and we are coming much closer to the day when milk decontamination will be standard operating procedure in all countries of the world.

And the world continues to build up its awesome arsenal of atomic death, death that in the building of more armaments comes closer and closer until it all could happen by accident, a mistaken blot on the radar screen, or a flase order, or something and then nothing.

What is inconceivable is that they didn't even try. All the unbiased reports from Geneva speak of the failure of either the Soviet Union or the U. S. to even atempt to reach an agreement, to even get started in breaking down the differences in principle on inspection that divides them.

The U. S. belatedly put forward a good plan, the neutral nations did likeswise, but both to no avail, and the situation remains as it did—deadlocked, bombs falling, and annihilation made all the more possible.

This is not written from a pacifist position. There are times when arms are unnecessary, when insanity or hunger for power run rampant and must be curbed by force, because there is no other way. Hitler, perhaps Verwoed in South Africa both provide good examples of this.

This is also not to say there are not significant differences between the Soviet Union and the United States. The Soviet Union is an example of state capitalism in its most bureaucratic of forms. It contains within it the denial of the first amendment guarantee that separates a liberal republic from a totalitarian one, and it denies the popular participation so necessary in a democracy. Moreover, it suffers from internal pressures forced on it by a position of world leadership that asks that certain successes be regularly accorded the government and the leadership.

And thus, there is a real battle going on, but it is unresolvable so long as the present Soviet leadership remains in power, so long as the recently appearing cracks in the Iron Curtain do not become so embarrasing as to a return to the Stalinist precepts, and so long as there seems to be developing a genuinely liberal community at least in the written arts within the Soviet Union.

It would be probably safe to say that Khrushchev does not want war. It is not safe to say that he wants peace, but pressures building from his estern appendage—The Peoples Government of Mainland China—may bring about a situation that a rapprochement is possible.

But it is possible only if neither side wants to claim a victory. If in a true sense competition leading inexorably to conflagration can be toned down to coexistence and the long waiting process that goes with it in which amelioration may be the result, then perhaps, we may have peace.

It is not known whether the American people or the Soviets have the patience for this—whether they have the courage to live in a twilight world in which neither national ambition or ideological message stand to be satisfied. There is evidence that Americans at least can't. The resurgence of the militant anachronistic right is but one indication that the American people have grown tired of waiting. It can be hoped that they realize that to get too tired is perhaps to bring about their own demise.

Meanwhile, Mao and the Chinese are building, and someday they will have the bomb, and then it may be too late, for theirs is a messianic revolution resigned to proselyte with the sword if the pen and mouth don't suffice.

What this means to the West and the Soviets in that the deadoline for man is fast approaching and may soon be passed. What ot means is that national interest must be sacrificed to the good of mankind, and it must come in a hurry.

* * *

What if the baby is yours or the early death is yours? What then?

Education And Council Discussed

Some Profs Don't Care

To The Editor,

Professors sometimes pretend to disturbed about the students' lack of interest in things of the intellect. It is time that someone got disturbed about the professors' lack of interest in the students.

He grew up in the environs of New York Cty and took his degrees at a big Eastern university. When he first came to Carolina 20 years ago Melvin felt somewhat like a missionary. He was going to bring the Word to the benighted South.

Over the years this feelng has left hm without his really knowing it. It is safe to say that Melvin has never really acquired any comprehension of the Southern community in which he has lived. He has not yet realized that it is a deep politeness and not understanding or appreciation that leads the janitor to chuckle at his scholarly jokes every morning.

It would be hard to get him to admit it, but Melvin is not really very interested in teaching. He hardly ever knows more than a few students in any of his classes. And those undergraduates!

Melvin is always glad when the class is over and he can dash back to his office, hoping to avoid the undergraduates and their pesky questions, and find out more about the obscure topic that he is going to reveal to the world someday.

(If you ask the undergraduates they will tell you that Melvin's class is an exceedingly dull one. "I thought that subject would be interesting," many will say.)

Melvin has a little trouble with practical things. In fact, his wife has managed the family for years. Yet Melvin can always tell you exactly how to run the Army, General Motors, or the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Melvin has probably never thought about why he became a professor. In fact, if someone asks him his occupaton he will not say he is a teacher, he will give the name of his discipline.

It is hard to tell exactly what purpose Melvin is serving in life. True, he has published articiles in several scholarly journals and was once asked to read a paper at the national convention of his disciplne.

Yet Melvin cannot help but harbor a belief that society is cheating him. Every time he gets hs paycheck he thinks how stupid the State of North Carolina must be not to realize that his services are worth so much more than that.

There are a number of intelligent, vigorous and dedicated men teaching at this university. There are also more than a few Melvins. Not a lot is likely to be done about student indifference until something is done about the Melvins.

McFadden On The Ping Pong

To the Editor,

At the present time the good people of New Orleans have plans to send a large number of Negroes, who are displeased with their present coditions in the South, North to escape their "unhappiness" with conditions here in the South. At some time in the near furture certain of these Negroes are going to find out that not everyone will be as sympathetic to these visitors as the people of New York City were to the first Negro to arrive. All of them will not receive a hundred-dollar a week job from persons who feel sorry for these unfortunate cases.

Sooner or later these displeased will find the grass not so green as they thought, and will want to return again to the South that has spurned them. Their tickets will no doubt be payed for by some beneficent organization on the other side of the Mason-Dixon line. This entire episode is rapidly reaching the stage where it will amount to nothing more than a game of Human Ping-Pong.

I feel that if a person is displeased with a place where he lives, and he has not the facilities to transport himself to a new environment, a more receptive environment then he should not depend upon the charity of his neighbors to facilitate his transportation. And if he does achieve this transportation, he should not express his displeasure with the fact that the grass is not always greener on the other side of the fence. But may be straying from the facts of the question as they will turn out; however, one organization in the North has already volunteered to send back any Negro who is not satisfied with his new environment.

UNC Drama Congratulated

To the Editor,

Who said the Uniersty wasn't doing much in the field of drama and playmaking? I just happened by accident to attend two evening sessions of the Carolina Dramatic Association University of North Carolina Extension division of the Bureau of Community Drama, the week of April 11-14. The six plays I saw were all good. I was somuch impressed with two plays that I regret that I didn't take in some others during the four day festival.

Trail of Tears, a presentation by the Goldmasquers, Goldsboro Senior High School, had the most effective stage-setting I ever saw. How they succeeded in giving the illusion of depth to the small, narrow stage of the Playmakers Theatre, kept me wondering during the entire performance. The stream between the brown stone cliffs, the water-fall over the dam, and the icy blue water, above and beneath the falls, gave a strong impression of reality. You felt as if you were looking at the real thing. The Indians, who popped up behind a broom-straw near the back of the stage, kept me wondering how they got there, for I was watching the stage every minute, and I never once saw an Indian take his place behind the broom-straw. I wondered how the rock boulders on the stage came to look so natural. If it is true that "Wisdom begins in wonder," then, judging by the way I wondered, this play was full of wisdom.

The Legend of Happy Valley, a ballet, presented by the North Carolina State Ballet Company, on Saturday night was charming. And Ca'line, written by Bernice Kelly Harris, presented by The Seaboard Community Players, was exceeding good.

We are constantly hearing—Cut out the frills from the public school curriculum. What do we mean by frills? Certainly not Physical Education courses. I can't conceive of a school system where children kept their noses to the grind stone all day. All children should be participants in games, not just spectators.

Something more than a fine mind in a fine body is needed. Spirit, mind, and body in equal balance, otherwise man's scientific inventions may very well be controlled by the ape man.

Award For 'Rome': Bad, Bad, Bad, Bad

By LOUIS LEGUM

"Rome Adeventure" (alias "Son of Summer Place"), now playing at the Varsty Theatre, is a perfectly horrible and simple-minded movie. For those who wish to regress to a sub-infant mentality, this Warner Bros. detergent opera is an excellent prescription. If anything, the producers are to be commended for making such an extraordinarily bad picture; one stumbles out of his seat more with a sense of awe than with a bad taste in the mouth.

The perpetrating villian behind all this nonsense is one Delmar Daves who deserves to be on the F.B.I. "Ten Most Wanted" list on a charge of blatant fraud. Daves, previously having given aborted births to "Parrish" and "Susan Slade," did the honors on both the screen play and the direction. Apparently, he has discovered an unbeatable formula—$$ equals girls and beautiful scenery and beautiful music and beautiful Troy Donahue.

Our Boy Troy has appeared in everyone of this Bobbsey Twin series of sexual antics. It's a good thing that he has such lovely eyes and wavy blonde hair (a permanent, perhaps?) to go along with his trusty red sweater and matching motor scooter. Othewise, somebody might figure out that he doesn't have enough acting ability to successfully peddle a box of Girl Scout cookies.

Actually, it's probably not all Troy's fault. Some of his lines may be the funniest in cinematic history. Example—in a Technicolor close-up backed up by a few strains of violin music, Troy whispers to a star-crossed lover, "Forgive me for being profound at this moment, but once more it's good to be alive." Merely warming up with that clinche, he does even better at the movie's merciful conclusion by telling the same girl, "From out of the blue, I flew" (translation: airplanes fly faster than troy can think).

The plot isn't worth mentioning, so I won't mention it. Suffice it to say that the picture takes place in Italy, and that romantic Mediterranean country never had it so good. As a travellogue "Rome Adventure" is nothing short of breathtaking; so if you don't have a couple thousand dollars to invest in a Grand Tour, the movie is a bargain for $.75.

A very pretty and charming young acress, Suzanne Pleshette, is introduced in "Rome Adventure." She may even be able to act, but you'd never be able to tell it from seeing the film. The rest of the normally competent cast are reduced to abject servility in their ludicrous roles. Angie Dickinson, Rossano Brazzi, and Constance Ford run around the screen with anxious, nervous grins, looking for all the world like they can't wait to grab their pay cheeks and get the hell out of the studio.

POGO—PEANUTS

ENROLLS 2,071 STUDENTS

Correspondence School Reaches Peak

The University of North Carolina reached a new high this school year, 1961-62, in the number of her students studying by mail. The Correspondence Bureau registered 2,071 students in 2,465 courses. Some students enrolled in two or more courses. Professors kept busy correcting 31,484 assignments.

The University offers more than 100 correspondence courses from which a student may choose and from which he may earn degree credit and quality points. Each course is prepared and taught by a member of the faculty of the University and parallels the equivalent course on campus.

The University accepts one full year's work by correspondence for credit toward a bachelor's degree but requires students to take the last year's work in residence here.

May Enroll

A student may enroll at any time, provided he is not attending regular University classes. He is permitted to take two courses concurrently. A course may be completed in a minimum time of seven weeks or a maximum time of thirteen months.

In addition to regular college credit courses, the Bureau of Correspondence Instruction offers Plane Geometry and Intermediate Algebra for the removal of High School deficiencies and English to remove a composition condition.

College study by mail enables students to receive additional credit while at home, working, or in the service. Interested students may obtain complete information from the Bureau of Correspondence Instruction in Abernethy Hall. Office hours are from 8:30-4:30 Monday through Friday and 8:30-12:30 on Saturdays. Summer registration begins the last day of classes for those currently enrolled at the University.

Harrington Gets SG Post

Tony Harrington, past president of the Campus Affairs Board, was appointed Executive Coordinator yesterday by President Inman Allen.

He will serve as a personal assistant to the president, according to Harrington. "I will be assisting Inman in special projects," he said, "such as student government-IFC relations, student government-faculty-administration relations and in the general area of the honor system."

George J. Moss of Pompton Lakes, N. J., has more than 200 antique flatirons in his home.

Philological Club

The Philological Club will meet on Tuesday, May 1st at 7:45 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of Morehead Planetarium. John E. Keller of the Department of Romance Languages will speak and present slides on "The Lighter Side of Mediaeval Spanish Learning."

DTH Staff Meets

A staff meeting for members and prospective members of the staff of the Daily Tar Heel will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4 in the DTH office, second floor of GM.

All persons who want to work on the Tar Heel staff this spring are requested to come to the meeting or see Co-Editors Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye before then.

The sophomore class finance committee will meet Monday at 5 p.m. in Roland Parker in Graham Memorial.

WAA SWIMMING

The Women's Athletic Association swimming intramurals will be held Monday night at 7:30 in Bowman Gray Pool.

Loan Students Should Check With Fund Office

All students who are indebted to the National Defense Loan Funds or to the University Loan Fund are required to complete necessary forms with the management of the Loan Funds office before they leave the University for any reason.

This responsibility rests on the student who takes out a loan. It is a basic requirement of the terms and conditions of the National Defense Loan agreement. Failure on the part of the Student to check in person with the manager of the Loan Funds office places the student in neglect of the loan requirements and may seriously jeopardise any benfits, rights or privileges that he may otherwise be entitled to under the terms of the Act.

Any student who is indebted to the Loan Funds, who intends to leave the University before the close or at the close of this semester should call at the office of the manager of the Loan Funds in 301 Bynum Hall advising the manager of when he intends to leave, his new address, and execute the required forms for the auditor's record and terms of payment, waivers, cancellations, or whatever may apply to the individual borrowing student's interests.

Writer Dennis To Aid Green Next Year

Ralph Dennis, now completing work on a master's degree in Communications here, will join the UNC faculty next year as an assistant to Paul Green.

Green, Pulitzer Prize Winner and one of the South's best known playwrights, has accepted the role as teacher of radio, television and motion picture script writing at UNC beginning next fall.

Dennis came to Chapel Hill in 1955 from Sumter, S. C., after serving four years in the navy. He was an honors graduate of UNC, in 1960, with an A.B. degree in English. He is former Poetry Editor of the "Carolina Quarterly" and his short stories, poems and radio plays have appeared in the Quarterly, the "Virginia Quarterly Review," the now defunct "Spectrums" and Bob Brown's magazine, "Reflections from Chapel Hill."

Dennis has won several prizes and awards for his writing and has a novel in manuscript. He has written numerous radio and television plays, a number of which have been produced by the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures at UNC. Among these are "The Boy Who Met Doc Blanchard," "The Golden Goose," "Walking Boy," and "The Squirrel Cage."

Dennis will instruct students in the department's introductory course to radio and TV writing, while Mr. Green will teach advanced writing. John Ehle, who has taught the courses in the past, will take a leave-of-absence next year to complete work on a new novel, to be his sixth book.

16 Paintings By UNC Artists In S.C. Exhibit

UNC student Timothy Murray, who had two paintings selected for the exhibit, was awarded one of five Honor Awards. Murray is a graduate student from Winston-Salem.

Of a total of 105 paintings submitted from students in Art Departments of schools in the two states, 37 were selected for the exhibit.

Other UNC students whose work placed in the exhibit include Henry Applewhite, a graduate from Stanstonburg; Dwayne Lowder, a graduate from Albemarle; Robert Rhoades, a junior from Franklin; Martha J. Rodgers, a special student from Greensboro; Robert H. Williams, a graduate from Durham; L. V. Huggins from Chapel Hill; and Eleanor A. Hembright, a junior from Gastonia.

Two senior students are recipients of scholarships from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation to support six years of medical education.

David John Goode, 21, of Winston-Salem was awarded the William Neal Reynolds Scholarship. This scholarship provides a $3,000 stipend for the first year of medical school with the amount increasing annually to $4,800 for the sixth year, a total of $23,400.

William Fred Harriss, 22, of High Point was awarded the Lucy Reynolds Critz Scholarship. It provides grants of $2,400 per year for six years, totaling $14,400.

Goode and Harriss will enter the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in September.

They were two of nine college seniors to receive scholarships, awarded annually by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

Selection of the scholars is made by the medical school committee on admissions on the basis of character, scholarship, potential as a physician and financial need.

Former UNC basketball coach Frank McGuire will speak to the Newman Club of the St. Thomas More Catholic Church today at 5:30.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

First field trip

LESSON 7- Keep moving

One of the most important rules of girl watching is this: keep moving. In fact, it is always a good idea not only to move, but to appear to be going somewhere. (This is especially important on group field trips.) Beautiful girls, although they enjoy being watched, are instinctively suspicious of strollers and downright fearful of loiterers.

The man who is walking briskly, who looks like he's "going places," makes a better girl watcher. For one thing, he sees more total girls and in the end he enjoys his hobby more. (If you are planning an extended field trip—to Paris and Rome, for example—be sure to pack a couple of cartons of Pall Mall.)

South Carolina's Coleman Stops UNC On Five Hits

By Ed Dupree

South Carolina's John Coleman, a 6-3 sophomore right-hander, hurled a five-hitter Saturday as the Gamecocks defeated UNC, 3-2.

Coleman scattered the five hits over five different innings and one of the runs off the tall pitcher was unearned.

Paul Swing was the only Tar Heel who could handle the pitching of Coleman. Swing doubled in a run in the eighth inning and was three for four for the day, raising his average to .345 for the year.

Dave Murr gave up seven hits and all three runs during his eight inning stay on the mound to suffer his second loss of the year against one win. Coleman's record is now 3-2.

Hoke Griner led the South Carolina hitting with two for five and a RBI. Bobby Smith and Jack McCathern drove in the other two USC runs.

Dave Murr retired the Gamecocks in order in the first, but the visitors took a one-run lead in the next inning.

The South Carolina center fielder George Epps walked with one man already out, advanced to third on a single by shortstop Jim Lanford, and scored on a ground ball hit by left fielder Smith. Len Dellolio fielded Smith's grounder at first and fired to second to force Lanford, but the return throw was not in time for the double play.

The boys from Columbia scored again in the fifth frame when 5-5, 130-pound second-baseman Griner singled to right field to drive in Jesse Ruff from second base. Ruff had singled and advanced to second when Coleman walked.

The Tar Heels made it 2-1 in the bottom of the fifth on a sacrifice fly by Bernie Isgett, scoring Dave Pope who had singled and advanced to third on a two-base throwing error by Coleman. Heyward Hull had walked and moved to second on Pope's hit, but was picked off of second on a throw from the catcher Charlie Williams to Lanford.

South Carolina's lead moved to 3-1 in the seventh with three singles coming after Murr had retired the first two batters. Coleman singled to center, Griner singled to right moving Coleman's courtesy runner Frank Knox to third, and Jack McCathern slapped one to right field to drive in Knox with the run.

UNC scored a run with two men out in the eighth to narrow the score to 3-2. Coleman got Isgett on a pop-up to shortstop and struck out pinch-hitter John Kouri, before the Tar Heels put a man on base. Buddy Tilden walked and Cronin Byrd was sent in to run for the stocky left fielder. Byrd scored on a double to the fence in left center by Swing. Jim Speight went down swinging to retire the side.

By Etadin Shrdlu

Spurred on by George Sokol's come-from-behind victory in the top singles match, the UNC tennis team pounded out an 8-1 victory yesterday over challenging Clemson to practically assure them of another ACC championship.

Coach Don Skakle's Tar Heels survived some rough spots to down their 20th consecutive opponent of the season and their 32nd over a two year span.

After four singles matches were complete ,with the Tar Heels winning all of them, Sokol wrapped up the contest for UNC with his win over Bobby Burns. Sokol, undefeated this year, lost his first set to the calm and collected Tiger ace, and came close to defeat by falling behind, 3-0, in the second set.

The blond sophomore then came out of his slump and rallied to tie the count. He broke Burns' service twice to take a 5-4 lead, and appeared ready at any time to tie the match. Sokol finally broke service on the fourteenth game to send the match into a third set, which he won easily by 6-1.

Lanky Bitsy Harrison, moved up to number 2, confounded Doug Steward with his unpredictable shots for a 6-4, 6-3 victory. Ted Hoehn, down to number 3, won the first set by three games and then took a love set from Malloy Evans.

"Cleanup man" Keith Stoneman and Charlie Shaffer posted identical 6-1, 6-2 wins over Fred Kraft and Dick Pregnall, respectively. Only George Christopher was able to win for the Cats, as he downed Morgan on the far court in the longest match of the day, 9-7, 5-7, 9-7.

On doubles court one, Stoneman and Shaffer merged their powerful games into a smooth unit to down the combo of Burns and Stewart by 6-3, 10-8.

Meanwhile, little men Sokol and Hoehn mopped up in the second arena by 6-0, 6-1 over Evans adn Christopher, Harrison and Stan Socke came back after losing the first set by 8-10 to win the second two, 6-0, 6-2.

Old-Timers Play To 4-4 Deadlock

For the second year in a row the UNC "Old-Timers" game ended in a tie.

The old-timers were divided into two teams, the "Yankees," composed mostly of players from the 1956-60 era, and the "Dodgers," with those players who were here before 1956.

The Yankees started the scoring, as the leadoff batter, Vaughn Bryson rapped the first pitch for a triple to deep center.

The Dodgers came back, as Emmett Cheek slammed an inside-the-park homer with a mate aboard, in the third.

Dr. M. D. "Rabbitt" Bonner of Greensboro, a member of the 1922 championship team, slammed a triple for the Yanks.

A. G. Whitener, leader of the North Carolina Conservative Party, will speak Monday night at 7:30 in 210 Manning Hall to a Young Americans for Freedom meeting.

Cricket Combo Nips Indians

A combined UNC-N.C. State cricket team defeated William — Mary in a one-inning game at Williamsburg recently. Cricket is usually a two-inning game, but in one day matches there is usually insufficient time for each side to complete two innings and the winner is then regarded as the side which led after the first inning.

William & Mary batted first and scored 44. The UNC-State combination replied with 76. The Indians batted a second time and scored 104 but there was no time left for the visitors to bat again.

The best Carolina performers were Dave Buckingham with 34 runs, J. Rao with 18 runs and Graham Milne who put out six W & M batsmen while giving away only six runs.

American Motors Means More for America

WHERE WILL YOU BE AT AGE 30?
Will You Be Earning $15,000 A Year Or More?
Will You Have A Capital Fund of $30,000 Or More?

These are realistic goals for you in the field of investment analysis if you have brains and are willing to use them.

INVESTMENT ANALYSIS must fascinate any thinking man. Whatever happens in any part of the world is related to the value of securities – a new upheaval in Africa, development of the European Common Market, Communist economic policies, military aggression in the Far East – all have an influence upon the value of securities on the New York Stock Exchange and the Over-the-Counter markets. In no other field of investigation – not even journalism – can a man find such quick identification with world-wide affairs as in the stock market.

To a small number of men who are about to graduate from college and who have proved by their scholastic records that they are capable of doing hard, intelligent work, the Value Line Investment Survey, one of the world's foremost investment advisory services, offers the following:

(1) a six-months course of training in security analysis, taught by the head of the Value Line organization and its top editor-analysts.

(2) the following minimum salary schedules:

For three months during the tuition period from July 15th to October 15th – $300.00 per month.

For the next three months – from October 15th to January 15th – $400.00 per month. And for ...

the first year following	$6,000.00
the second year	7,000.00
the third year	8,000.00
the fourth year	9,000.00
the fifth year	10,000.00
the sixth year	12,000.00
the seventh year	13,000.00
the eighth year	14,000.00
the ninth year	15,000.00
the tenth year	16,000.00
the eleventh year	17,000.00

The increases in pay are, of course, accompanied by promotions in title and responsibility as well. In perhaps no other securities research organization can the exceptionally able analyst advance so rapidly to a position of meaningful responsibility and stature.

If an analyst fails to receive the minimum advance indicated by this schedule, he will be on notice that his resignation is desired. It is probable that of those who are accepted most can and will go ahead faster than shown in this schedule.

In addition to the salary, the company provides a profit sharing plan which, under the minimum salary schedules, should result in providing a capital fund of around $35,000 to $50,000 (as a long term capital gain) at the end of the twelfth year of employment.

In addition, the company provides, entirely at company expense, the following insurance benefits: hospitalization, accident, major medical and life.

Only a few men will be selected for these positions. They will be selected from the tops of their classes, after testing that confirms our own investigation of their aptitude for the work.

This is a challenging offer to men who seek security as well as fortune in the relatively near future.

A security analyst with the Value Line Survey is not precluded from investing for his own account, provided his investments are bought or sold in a manner that is not in conflict with the interests of the service's subscribers or its clients.

Not only will the candidates receive careful instruction, enjoy the opportunity to meet top corporate executives of the companies whose securities they study, and have access to all current reports and news-articles in our library, but they will also have the benefit of exchanging ideas with experienced and stimulating analysts within the organization.

Those students, men or women, who feel that they may be qualified for the positions described above and who are interested in careers in securities research, increasingly the heart of the whole investment business, are requested to forward brief resumes of their college records including marks, class standing, etc., and of any revelant work experience to the address below.

CRAM COURSE NO. 4: BATHYMETRY

Continuing our series of pre-final exam cram courses, today we take up bathymetry—the study of ocean depths.

Admittedly, this is not a terribly popular course on most campuses. And small wonder. In the whole world there is only one bathyscape, and only two people can get into it.

Nevertheless, the study of ocean depths is of great importance. Why, do you realize that the ocean is by far the world's largest biological environment? The ocean has more than three hundred times as much living room as all the continents and islands combined! Unfortunately, only fishes live in it.

And small wonder. Who'd want to live some place where he couldn't smoke? Surely not I! I wouldn't give up my good Marlboro Cigarettes for the Atlantic and the Pacific put together. Nothing could induce me to forego Marlboro's fine mellow flavor, Marlboro's clean white filter, Marlboro's flip-top box that really flips, Marlboro's soft pack that's really soft. Let others repair to the spacious deeps. Me, I will stick with my Marlboros and the tiny garret I share with a tympanist.

But I digress. Back to the oceans. The largest, as we know, is the Pacific, which was discovered by Balboa, a Spaniard of great vision. To give you an idea of Balboa's vision, he first saw the Pacific while standing on a peak in Darien, which is in Connecticut.

Even more astounding, when Balboa reached San Francisco, he clearly saw the Hawaiian Islands! Being, as we know, a friendly cuss, Balboa waved merrily to the Hawaiians and shouted, "Great little ocean you got here, kids!" The Hawaiians, also, as we know, friendly cusses, waved back, declared a half holiday, organized a luau, built a cheery fire over which they prepared several gallons of poi, a suckling pig, and Captain Cook. This, of course, was the origin of Cooking.

But I digress. The Pacific, I say, is the largest ocean and also the deepest. The Mindanao Trench, off the Philippines, measures more than 5,000 fathoms in depth. (It should be pointed out here that ocean depths are measured in fathoms—lengths of six feet—after Sir Walter Fathom, a noted British sea measurer of the seventeenth century who, upon his twenty-first birthday, was given a string six feet long with which he used to go scampering all over England measuring sea water until he was arrested for loitering. A passion for measuring seems to have run in the family; Fathom's cousin, Sir Sol Furlong, spent all his waking hours measuring race tracks until Charles II had him beheaded in honor of the opening of the London School of Economics.)

But I digress. Let us, as the poet Masefield said, go down to the seas again. (The seas, incidentally, have ever been a favorite subject for poets and composers.) Who does not remember Tennyson's "Break, break, break"? Or Byron's "Roll on, thou dark and deep blue ocean, roll"? Or the many hearty sea chanties that have enriched our folk music—songs like "Sailing Through Kansas" and "I'll Swab Your Deck If You'll Swab Mine" and "The Artificial Respiration Polka." My own favorite sea chanty goes like this:

And she did weep and roar-ho!
Until she found a perfect filter,
And a perfect smoke—Marlboro!
Sing hey, sing ho, sing ring-a-ding-ding,
Sing tars and spars and patches,
Sing pack and box and lots to like,
And don't forget the matches!

Britt Elected SP Chairman Beats Harkness And Putzel

By HARRY DeLUNG

Robin Britt was elected Student Party Chairman last night after a run off election with Pete Harkness. Mike Putzle also sought the post which requires a majority vote.

In his nominating speech, Britt quoted UNC graduate Joel Fleishman who once said, "The Student Party is a party of discontent." The new chairman said that this tradition must continue if the S.P. is to continue its efforts for progress.

Dwight Wheless, seconding Britt's nomination emphasized the rising senior's history of support for the S. P. Britt ran for S. P. nomination for President of the student body this spring.

Each candidate was sighted for his emphasis on seeking S. P. support from the dormitories. In speaking for Britt, who is Chi Psi, Scott Summers recalled his role as Chairman of the Communications Committee in establishing dorm newspapers.

Seconding nominations for Pete Harkness were given by Rufus Edmiston. Beth Walker, and Haines McFadden. George Rosenthal and Curtis Gans spoke for Mike Putzle. Gans, a long time liberal, noted the irony in his support for Putzle who is the ex-president of the conservative Young Americans for Freedom.

An amendment to change the attendance requirement for party membership from two to three meetings was passed by the body. The amendment, which must be voted on again at next week's meeting according to S. P. rules, will not go into effect until after the 1962 fall elections.

NC Folk Festival Saturday

Wauldensians Give Dance Program

A bit of the old piedmont section of Italy will come to piedmont Carolina Saturday at the 14th annual Carolina Folk Festival in Memorial Hall beginuning at 8 p.m.

The Waldensian Dancers from Valdese, N. C., will perform a selection of spirited, lively dances to the appropriate mixture of Italian country music.

Julia Ribet, a native of Valdese and a singer of the old Waldensian folk tunes, will sing accompanying some of the dancers. Miss Ribet sings in the Patua dialect, the languaget of the Waldensian peoples. One of her songs is called "The Cuckoo," in which the sounds of the cuckoo bird are repeated throughout.

There will be 10 males and 11 females complementing the Waldensian dancing group. Miss Ribet will call some of the dances.

Miss Ribet Attended

Miss Ribet attended Flora Macdonald College where she graduated with a bachelor of music degree in 1956. She majored in voice. Following her graduation, she spent one year in Kings Mountain and aother year in Zebulon where she was working with church music. In 1960, Miss Ribet took a position with the North Carolina Tercentenary Commission in Raleigh.

Among her singing activities, Miss Ribet has performed with the National Opera Company in Raleigh and she has been a member of thet Raleigh Oratorio Society for four years. In the fall of 1960, she was in the musical play "Paint Your Wagon," performed by the Raleigh Little Theater. Although singing takes up a good bit of her time, Julia Ribet says her hobby is travelling.

Waldensian People

The Waldensian people of the piedmont section of Italy have a history going back to 1170 when, as an oppressed people, they took their name from a gracious merchant of their area, Peter Waldo. Their history is one of a persecuted people.

On February 17, 1848, King Charles granted the Waldensian people their freedom which was their beginning of religious and civil freedom. They came to the United States in 1893 and settled in Valdese.

The festival is sponsored by the UNC Folklore Council, with Kenan Professor A. P. Hudson as chairman.

Several Carolina lovlies practice for one of of the events of the Sigma Chi Derby to be held this afternoon. The annual affair features coed contests from the "Miss Modern Venus' 'beauty contest to pie-throwing activities. The derby is open to the public without charge.

Project To Register Negroes Set In Raleigh June-August

A pilot project to register local Negro citizens and at the same time to provide an educational experience for college students is to be held this summer in Raleigh from June 15 to August 12. The N.S.A. Southern Human Relations Project will sponsor the project which is hoped will raise the present registration level of Negro citizens which is now 18 per cent.

Cooperating in the program are the American Friends Service Committee and the Southern Regional Y.W.C.A.

As part of the project, the fifteen students will make a survey of registered and unregistered voters, encouraging citizens to register through a door-to-door campaign and through block precinct meetings; carry on a citizenship education program about issues, candidates, and political structures; facilitate transportation to the registrars' offices; and keep records on the campaign.

There will also be seminars, speakers, and forums for the orientation and education of the participants.

Applications are now available for the 15 places open in the interracial co-educational group that along with the Raleigh Citizens Committee make up the project.

Students will live together with their leaders in a house, doing their own cooking. Room and board will be provided free along with a $50 stipend and travel funds to cover personal expenses and to defray travel costs to and from Raleigh.

Applications and/or additional information may be had by applying to: Voter Registration Project, Southern Office, NA, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Room 701, Atlanta 3, Georgia.

A similar program will be held in Jackson, Tenn. Inquiries should be made to: Mr. Dick Ramsay, 1818 South Main St., High Point, N. C.

Applications must be received by May 12. Announcements of final selections will reach all participants by May 25.

DTH Meeting

Straughn Elected To NSA Position

Eight From Carolina Attend Regional Meet At Belmont Abbey

Bill Straughn, last year's National Student Association Co-ordinator on campus, was elected National Affairs Vice-Chairman for the Carolinas-Virginia region of N.S.A. at a conference at eBlmont Abbey College Saturday.

In addition to working with the rest of the regional officers on the semi-annual conferences, Straughn said that he hoped to promote plans for a fall conference of student body presidents and a spring human relations seminar.

The regional delegates met for the weekend in Belmont, N. C. Carolina's delegation included Harry DeLung, chairman; Anne Lupton, John Randall, Bill Bowerman, Ford Rowan ,and Hank Patterson. Bill Straughn and Fran Roth attended as alternate delegates.

Leo Jenkins, President of East Carolina College, spoke Friday night about the functions of student government. His keynote address was followed by a panel discussion which lead to spirited dissent by the UNC delegation on the subject of the administration's right to "pull the rug out" from any student govrernment operation.

Saturday night's speech was given by Tim Zagot recent Harvard graduate and presently the East Coast Program Vice President of N.S.A. Zagot, who feels that too much emphasis has been placed by past N.S.A. leaders on national and international affairs, divided the functions of N.S.A. into three areas: relations with local student governments, service to students and campuses, and expressing the opinions of delegates to the National Student Congress.

3 Students Refuse To Pay When Negro Not Served In Grill

Three UNC students were taken to the Durham police station at 2 a.m. Saturday morning after they refused to pay for food they had ordered at the Toddle House.

The students were Charlie Brooks, Henry Ramer and Jimmy Masters. Brooks is a Negro.

The students went into the Toddle House, according to Ramer, and asked if it would be all right for Brooks to eat there. The waitress said that it would be all right and she served them cokes.

No Food For Brooks

The waitress then served Masters and Ramer hamburgers and brought nothing for Brooks. Ramer said that after ten minutes he asked her if she were going to serve Brooks. He said that she stated she wouldn't serve him at the counter but that he could eat in the back room or outside.

The manager of the Toddle House said later that the waitress was a new girl and that she did not know the Toddle House's policy on segregation. The manager said that the woman who had been in charge that night had seen that a Negro was being served at the counter and stopped the order.

A police officer had also arrived on the scene, according to Ramer.

Not Served

When Ramer and Masters saw that Brooks was not going to be served they said they would not eat there. The waitress then asked them to pay for their meals. They refused. After a discussion, the manager of the Toddle House was called and he said that the students would not have to pay for the meals if they would leave.

Two Accounts

There are two different accounts of what happened after that. According to the police, Ramer, Masters and Brooks asked to be taken

Humber Asks Federation In The World

Without world government, "we are deficient in the organic structure of our world society," Dr. Robert Humber told the Orange County Bar Association and the faculties ,of the Law School and Institute of Government at the Association's annual Law Day program Friday night.

Dr. Humber is a long-time advocate of world federation, and is the author of the "Humber Resolution" in favor of world federation which has been passed by North Carolina's General Assembly and 16 other state legislatures.

A state senator from Greenville, N. C., Humber holds honorary law degrees from UNC and Wake Forest. He was a delegate to the San Francisco conference that founded the United Nations.

Tells Guests

Humber told the guests at the Law Day program (today is National Law Day) that the world is trying to achieve the impossible by trying to seek peace through diplomacy. "We are trying, in effect, to govern a world community with no government," he said. "The world now clamors for its founding fathers."

Dr. Humber expressed the view that in a governed world the individuals who broached the world peace would be punished: that in our present ungoverned world the entire nation in which an offender lives becomes the "target of annihilation." "The extermination of millions of people for the acts of the few is a crime against human sanity and our humanitarian history," he declared.

Not Supreme Law

Treaties are not the supreme law of every nation, and thus do not constitute an effective substitute for enforceable world law, according to Dr. Humber. He observed that, "treaties are disregarded by the arbitrary will of nations and are unenforceable except on the battlefield."

He told the attorneys that, "the greatest challenge to the legal profession and to our generation is to organize the world society and institute in it law and legal authority." "We must stabilize the world's destiny on the basis of justice," he concluded, "and establish a world society based on principles that can survive the cataclysms of our epoch."

McGUIRE AS A PRO COACH:

Nice Guys Don't Always Finish Last

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

A long, tough schedule, burdening responsibilities, and "problem" professional basketball players. These were the main obstacles Frank McGuire anticipated this past season as coach of the National Basketball Association's Philadelphia Warriors and their indomitable scoring machine, Wilt Chamberlain.

A living contradiction of Leo Durocher's famous "Nice Guys Finish Last" theory, Frank McGuire had some interesting observations Saturday, on his first year in the big league and the experiences that went with it.

Long, Tough Schedule

"The biggest adjustment for me in pro ball was definitely that long drawn-out schedule," McGuire explained as he relaxed in his home on the outskirts of Chapel Hill. "We played 92 ball games last season and prior to that, the most I had ever experienced were those 32 in '57 when we won the championship. The schedule really began to tell on me the latter part of the year."

Questioned on his responsibilities as a pro coach, McGuire did not hesitate. "I missed an assistant coach this year. Detroit has one but they're the only team in the league that does. Most of the duties of a club secretary were mine because I was the only one traveling with the team all the time. I had to arrange our traveling schedules, eating facilities and hotel accommodations in addition to coaching. It's a real job."

Winning Is Always Hard

McGuire, who also has a home in New York where he, his wife, Patricia, and their two children, Carol Ann and Frankie go in the summertime, had more to say on winning and the men who make it possible.

"Wilt Chamberlain is, without a doubt, the greatest athlete I have ever seen. He does it all. Russell (Boston Celtic center Bill Russell) is different. He's a defensive specialist. I would even rate Wilt better all-around than Elgin Baylor. But let's face it, they're all great in the NBA."

No Problem Players

Asked about the third of his expectations—the "problem" players, McGuire said he had been very impressed and surprised. "The boys were great. I had no trouble whatsoever. We had no smoking or drinking in our club. This amazed me. I mean, here we are dealing with pro basketball players—grown men free to do as they pleased in hotels anywhere, and not one smoker or drinker. Arizin (Paul), Gola (Tom), they're all very religious boys. We went to church together every Sunday. The whole team went to church. I even converted Al Attles."

What about Chambberlain?

"There was no problem with Wilt. I called him in the first day and said, 'Look, you've got a national reputation, Wilt. I think I'm the only coach you've ever had who also had a nationla reputation. Together, we can go far. Apart, we're lost in the woods.' The guy was tremendous the whole year."

Good Rookies ;

On the subject of next year's team, the man who guided Carolina in some of its greatest basketball moments, was less than positive.

"Our drafts look real good. We got Hightower (former Kansas star Wayne Hightower who last year played in Spain on the Real Madrid tem) and Hubie White from Villanova but I haven't talked to either of them yet. I hope Arizin will be back and that Gola can recover from his injuries, but I can't be sure about anything."

The conversation turned to baseball. McGuire, an avid fan, recalled that not many people knew that he had also coached baseball in college.

"In 1952, St. John's (St. John's University of New York City where McGuire coached both basketball and basebll) went to the NCAA playoffs and finished third. I'm real proud that I've been able to

Some Last-Minute Advice

SG Committees

Student government has always had a soft spot in its heart for new committees. Rather than let the work be done by an exiisting committee, ther is just something about setting up a special committee which has appealed to SG officers. There is rarely a cry during elections of "Too much bureaucracy," although the cry would appear to be justified.

Such committees as the Dance Committee and the Toronto Exchange can't possibly be active enough to justify special status.

Several of the committees for which students can now apply, however, are very worthwhile and bear special attention:

The State Affairs Committee will be responsible next fall for originating and coordinating student support of the 1963-65 Consolidated University budget requests. The committee has been active the past two years under the chairmanships of Davis Young and Tom White-Larry McDevitt. By working closely with President Friday and Chancellor Aycock the committee has been able to communicate student desires to the State. Next year's budget will include requests for a new UNC student union and higher faculty salaries ,among other provisions, all of great importance to the student body.

The Academic Affairs Committee has had its ups and downs, but in its better days has been one of student government's most creative agents. It deals with academic courses, what students think of them, how they can be improved.

The National Student Association committee has been partially ineffectual this year because it has failed to properly communicate with the campus. At its best, however, the committee is capable of instilling into students interest and enthusiasm concerning broad, major issues.

* * *

The Communications Committe's dtuy is to inform the campus of the activities of student government, through dorm newspapers, radio or other methds. The Campus Affairs Committee potentially can be a worthwhile agent in originating consideration of student problems.

Dr. Ralph Bunche's speech several weeks ago was sponsored by the Carolina Forum, which is responsible for such programs .The International Students Board seeks to improve relations "between the Carolina student and the international student community," and is responsible for administering the NSA, Goettingen and Tours scholarships.

The Attorney General's staff is responsible for investigating violations of the honor and campus codes. This group must have responsible ,sincere staff members.

* * *

It is very important that all students who have interest in any of these, or other worthwhile student government committees, apply for them.

A student government letter sent out before the Easter vacation urged all interested dormitory men to apply for committee membership. No experience is necessary. Interest and enthusiasm are most important.

Jazz Festival

This Saturday afternoon, May 4, the Interfraternity Council will spronsor a jazz festival for the entertainment of the entire student body. If the event is a successful one, there are plans for making it an annual one. And although the IFC has handled the mechanics of arangements, "the proof of the pudding is in the tasting."

The success of the event will depend upon the degree of student cooperation attainable. Everyone is wondering about the drinking that will undoubtedly take place. The IFC cannot police the crowds, they should, however, make a definite statement of the regulations, if any, to be enforced.

Necessarilly ,at times sadly, any sponosoring organization must stand to the responsibility of all incidents occuring at ther functions, social or otherwise. The nterfraternity Council realizes this .we are sure. However, to a certain extent, their hands are tied. They must rely on student cooperation, and this is not always forthcoming.

In the light of hopes for future expansion, with possibilities of excellent entertainment for the entire campus, some degree of conduct befitting the fading generation of "Carolina Gentlemen' 'ought to prevail. (cw)

Scuttlebutt

The problems surrounding self-help jobs on campus are varied and many. Certainly the time taken away from one's study hours is a considerable sacrifice. Many of us have trouble getting all of our work done, without assuming the burden of earning either part or all of our college expenses.

The amount of time that could be devoted to participation on various student government committees, or enjoyed by participation in other extra-curricular activtiies must obviously be curtailed by working responsibilities.

In light of these and other problems, it is with pleasure that we note that the students who work in the Scuttlebutt seem to enjoy their work ,and make stops at that establishment pleasant. (cw)

Toddle Incident Common

The remarkable thing about the incident involving Charlie Brooks and the Toddle House was that as an incident it was too common to be remarkable.

Incidents like it have happened before; they will happen again.

The trouble started because of ignorance. That is what the police said about it, and it is what the manager of the Toddle House said about it.

The police said that Ramer, Brooks and Masters were ignorant of the fact that a Negro and a white man do not eat together in the south.

The manager of the Toddle House said that the waitress who started to serve Brooks was ignorant of the fact that the Toddle House does not want Negroes eating with whites at the counter.

The ignorance was not solely on the part of the three UNC students and the waitress. There is an old axiom that fear is a matter of ignorance. There was a lot of fear involved in the incident; it was subtle.

The woman in charge of the Toddle House, seeing what the waitress had done, refused to let Brooks be served. She did it because she was afraid of what the manager would say if she let the order go through. She went one step further; she called the manager because she wanted to be certain that nothing went wrong. The manager told her not to serve Brooks because he was afraid of what the district manager would say. To make certain that he wouldn't get into trouble he called the district manager in Greensboro. The district manager said not to serve Brooks because he was afraid of losing Durham business and because he did not want to go against company policy.

Ramer, Brooks and Masters were ignorant enough to protest and to refuse to pay for the meals. They were ignorant enough to go to the police station in order to find out how they were ignorant.

We asked a police captain why the thing had happened and he said that the students had not understood. We asked him why the situation existed and he said that it always has, and in the end he didn't know except that Durham had had violence before and he knew that they did not want it again.

We asked an hysterical woman who worked at the Toddle House what had happened and she said that she did not have to answer any questions and that if we wanted to find out anything we should come back and ask the manager.

We talked to the manager who was a nice easy going guy who said that he liked Negroes every bit as much as he liked white guys and in fact he knew a lot of Negroes whom he thought were better than a lot of white guys he knew. We asked him why his restaurant had its policy on segregation and he said that it was a company policy. We asked him why it was the company policy and he said that they were afraid of losing business. We asked him why they would lose business and he said it was the south. "Things are different up North," he said.

To make the whole thing short we asked a lot of people why it is that everyone is afraid of a guy, whom everybody admitted could be their equal, sitting down and eating a meal at a counter with a bunch of white people. No one had a real answer.

There is an answer though. It is a fear that is a lot bigger than that of retribution from an employer to an employee. It is fear that a race which has been suppresed for over three hundred years will eventually realize its own power and strike back at its suppressers, legally, using their constitution and mores against them. It is a blind unreasoning fear that picks out school children and college students seating at lunch counters and people going to the movies. It breds on hatred and violence, complacency, prejudice and a maniac desire to stay away, to be cut off as much as possible from the enemy. It preaches over and over again the one concept that if the whites in the south hold on to democracy, if they hold on to liberty or to the constitution, they will be destroyed.

If the fear continues—and it will if the south has anything to say about it—it will destroy the United States. That was the real ignorance of the three UNC students. That is the real ignorance of this University and of most of this state.

All-New Pig Pen For U.S.

Dear Reader:

Isn't it fun to watch our present day capitalistic pigs wriggle and squirm in their new government-protected pen. The recent anti-inflationary tactics of the Kennedy administration (which only perpetrates "justifitable" inflation) has now completed the enclosure. The pen is not, however, protecting our America from the selfish money making motives of these egomaniacs.

It seems that the muddy plight of these dangerous porkers is this: If one pig sells his wares at a lower price than the others in his industry the government can step in and protect us because this is unfair competition. If another pig sells his products at a price higher than his competition the government can step in and protect us because this is inflationary. And, if still another pig sells his merchandise at the same price as his competitors the government can again intervene because this is obvious collusion and price fixing in this case.

The glorious price drop in the New York Stock Exchange of the past few days shows us that the great white protecting father is an effective builder of pig pens.

Edit Debate, Conservatism Discussed

Applauds For DTH Co-Editors

To the Editors:

I would like to commend the new editors of the DTH for the featured liberal-conservative debate between Earl Baker and Curtis Gans in their first issue. I think Jim Clotfelter's reputation for irresponsibility will be much improved if this type of dialogue between opposing viewpoints is continued.

It is indeed heartening when Conservatives are represented by a spokesman who is cogent and rational such as Young Republican President Baker, in contrast to the usual panic-stricken howls of the YAFmen. Gans' article, though not as pointed as Baker's, did effectively portray an emotional justification for liberalism.

Intelligent debate is all too often what is missing from political argument. It was provided for us on Thursday. Thank you.

—EDDY POWELL

Conservatism Is Libertarian

To the Editors:

I was glad to see the editorial page debut in last Thursday's Tar Heel. Earl Baker discussed the conservative libertarian position well. It was a good sign to see the traditionally liberal DTH invite such expressions.

* * *

The American liberal of today loudly proclaims his libertarianism. He claims that it is he who defends the First Amendment, it is he who fights for Negro civil rights, who stands up for minority groups of all persuasions. The liberal-political Establishment, with the aid of press and classroom, has convinced many Americans that only liberals love liberty and that conservatives are modified totalitarianists.

But in actuality the "freedoms" which liberals espouse are not freedoms at all—defense of the freedom of communist agents in Washington departments or of the bus-riding pleasures of CORE agitators is not my idea of libertarianism.

The libertarian is a person who is interested primarily in "freedom FROM . . ." He is interested in setting definite limits on the authority and scope of the Federal government and all other political forms above the level of the individual.

The right of the induvidual to as large as possible an area of inviolable freedom is the main concern of the libertarian . . . . the conservative. The individual must be free FROM unnecessary restraints by government, just as he must be free TO EXERCISE certain rights.

* * *

True libertarianism is admittedly negative in character. It seeks to protect the people from infringements upon their rights by government bureaucracy.

The United States Constitution, which both liberals and conservatives claim to safeguard, is more to be revered for what it prohibits than for what it authorizes. Richard Weaver of the University of Chicago has proposed that "a constitution is a series of 'thou shalt nots' to the government, specifying the ways in which the liberties of individuals and groups are NOT to be invaded." The Constitution was designed to protect against the kind of arbitrary interference to which government left to itself is prone.

Today the friends of liberty are the friends of constitutional government .The Constitution is the only accepted code of personal freedom—violations of it endanger libertarianism.

* * *

Liberals usually scoff at conservative defenses of the Constitution as somehow "reactionary." These liberal protectors-of-mankind seem to think they have far superior versions of what liberty is than did the framers of the Constitution. Any bypassing of Constitutional limitations is excused as "necessitated by the present situation" . . .

The liberals fail to see what the Founding Fathers saw—that some operating laws in the social, political and economic worlds cannot be changed or suspended by government fiat. And, in fact, the very act of legislation threatens the personal freedom which exists unless it is regulated away by liberals.

* * *

How do liberals threaten freedom?

—By their serious restrictions on the free enterprise system. (Liberals hope to see the day when store owners of even non-essential wares won't be able to select with whom they do business, when industrial companies will have no voice in the prices they charge, when all companies of profitable size have been broken up, when the Federal government will have dominance over business...)

—By their attempts to impose moral codes on unwilling populaces by legislation or Federal court action. No matter how "right" a proposed change, it is anti-libertarian to impose it by decisions from above.

—By refusing to be militant in behalf of the freedom and liberty of other, simultaneous attempts to take away the liberty of their fellow-countrymen. (Liberals refuse to become concerned about the Cuban Communist state and anti-freedom advances in other parts of the world.)

* * *

The conservative, contrary to the stereotype built for him by liberal propagandists, is not against freedom. In fact, it is because he wants to conserve the rights and liberties of induviduals that a person is a conservative.

Robinson's Ramblings

I hate to be a kill-joy, but THAT time is here again. And I don't mean 10 p.m. nature studies in the Arboretum. Exams, believe it or not, are less than three weeks away.

Some students look on exams the same way Oscar Wilde did: "It is the time when the foolish ask questions that the wise cannot answer."

Whether this is true or not doesn't matter. Just remember (I hate to preach but . . .) school beats working, the Army or even beach combing. An exception might be made in the latter instance if you have a rich mistress, but even this is risky.

Take the deep plunge, hit the books and before you know it, exams will all be over.

If you think you'll coast through there's a good chance you might be the subject of the following conversation when two former roommates meet:

"Howya doing old buddy?"

"Jus' fine. Couldn't be better."

"Have you heard anything from Blank?"

"Nope, not a word since he joined the Navy."

"What a guy."

"Ha, wasn't that the coolest though—the look on his face when he found out he got four F's and a D."

"Yeah, a real sharp guy."

Forced Attrition

Between the world wars, a U. S. commission was sent to a certain European country to study the personnel practices that produced such an outstanding officer corps.

When the study group reached the subject of officer classification and assignment the record shows the following discussion:

Q. "Now how do you classify your officers?"

A. "A very simple system. We grade them into two major categories as being either Stupid or Brilliant and either Lazy or Energetic."

Q. "How do you use these classifications in developing career patterns for your officers?"

A. "Quite simple. The Brilliant-Energetic officers are channeled into staff duties. The Brilliant-Lazy officers are kept in Command billets (positions) to keep the Staff Officers from going too far too fast. The Stupid-Lazy officers we find make good troop leaders. They are closer to the man and don't have imagination and ambition to exceed the limits of orders. It works quite well."

Q. "But you have left out the Stupid-Energetic category."

A. "Oh . . . well, we shoot them as we know who they are."

And into which category should former-General Edwin Walker be placed?

* * *

Texas: The Burns Detective agency has apologized to the American Association of University Professors for a letter sent from its Houston office to six college presidents in Texas offering to spy on "controversial" faculty members.

North Carolina: A group of prominent citizens headed by Norman Thomas, Robert Goheen, president of Princeton, Harry Golden and Reinhold Niebuhr are seeking a presidential pardon for Junius Scales, a former Communist Party official. He was sentenced to six years under the Smith Act, even though he had quit the party.

Reflections

"Anyway, colored people have to be outside the city limits before sundown."

THE LATEST issue of "The Church of God," publication of Bishop Homer A. Tomlinson, carried a dialogue between the Bishop and a student of UNC's School of Journalism. (Last year the Bishop crowned himself King of the University of North Carolina in ceremonies held in Forest Theater.)

The student wrote that the newspaper was: "(1) poorly printed, (2) that we distort the facts for our purpose," said the Bishop.

"For answer" the Bishop said, "and he asked me to answer in the church paper, I can say that he could not judge our printing so harshly if he knew as I feel what we are undertaking.

King Homer answered the second charge, saying "I am sure there can be different interpretations of history, depending so much upon how well informed one is, or nearness to the events described, meaning, of course, that I had opportunity to be present, while another would necessarily have to depend upon the word of others," he said.

'Planets On Parade' To Open Tonight

"Planets on Parade," a program pointing up conditions in our solar system as man contemplates explorations into space, will open at the Morehead Planetarium here tonight and run through May 31.

The physical features of the planets, their peculiar motions and their orbits are explained in the demonstration. Those of the planets visible to the naked eye this month are highlighted: for instance, Venus being both the morning and evening star.

In addition, the annual motions and relative positions of the planets are demostrated and explained. Only in a planetarium is it possible to compress these annual motions into a matter of minutes.

"Planets on Parade" will be given nightly at 8:30 o'clock and a.m. and 3 p.m. and on Sundays at 3 and 4 p.m.

U. Symphony Plays Dvorak In May Concert

Dvorak's "New World Symphony" will be the major work on the University Syhphony's program at its annual Spring Concert May 8 in Hill Hall.

The orchestra, under the direction of Earl Slocum, will also present Enesco's Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1 and Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat Major with Mrs. Enid Katahn as piano soloist.

The instrumentalists of the orchestra are music majors, members of the music department faculty, students and teachers from other University departments, and musicians residing in the tri-city area.

Professor Slocum has been conductor of the Symphony for the last 16 years. In addition to his duties with the orchestra he teaches composition and orchestration, and conducting in the Department of Music.

NEXT FEBRUARY

UNC To Host Model UN Meet

UNC will be host to a three-day United Nations Model General Assembly in February of 1963 that will be attended by delegates from 30 schools in the five states of the Middle South division of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

The Council, which is a national organization of colleges and universities, will co-sponsor the meeting with the YM-YWCA.

Any students interested in serving on planning committees for the event may attend a meeting tonight on the second floor of the Y building at 7:30.

Approximately 300 students from the Middle South district — West Virginia, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina —are expected to attend the Mock Assembly.

Each school will represent one, two or three countries and the delegations of each country will include seven members. All committee meetings and the General Assembly on the third day of the event will follow UN procedures.

The planners of the meeting will present a major speaker to the General Assembly—possibly Adlai Stevenson—but no final arrangements have been made.

The agenda of business the delegates will act on will be made up of business that is actually being debated in the UN at the time of the meeting.

Pacific Is Cleared For New Tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will set off three high-altitude nuclear shots over Johnston Island in June or July, the Atomic Energy Commission announced Monday. In part they will be aimed at devedloping an anti-missile missile.

A vast area around Johnston Island was declared an atomic test danger area Monday as the United States prepared to detonate the third blast in its new Pacific series. The first two nuclear bombs were exploded near British-owned Christmas Island last Wednesday and Fridaly.

The AEC said scientists throughout the world will be notified before each of the high Johnston shots so they can make measurements in the interest of science. The blasts may be visible in Hawaii, 711 miles away.

Government Warns

The government already has warned that some blasts at the American-held Johnston atoll will disrupt radio, navigation and special aviation frequencies. Some Pacific airline flights probably will have to be cancelled.

The AEC said the biggest of the three high Johnston detonations will be in the "megaton yield range"—equal to the force of a million tons of TNT or more—at an altitude of hundreds of kilometers. A kilometer is six tenths of a mile.

The police said that they then explained to the students the policy most Durham restaurants have on segregation and that they sent the students home after about five or ten minutes. The police said that the students were free to go at all times while they were down at the station. No charges were pressed.

According to Ramer, however, the police officer who had been first to arrive at the Toddle House and a lieutenant who had been called in afterwards told them that they would have to come down to the police station.

Ramer said that the officers accused them of being trouble-makers from out of state.

Leave Station

Ramer said that they left the police station by 6 a.m. and that they had not stayed in the Toddle House longer than 45 minutes, so he figured that they had been in the station over two hours.

Mr. Harold More, district manager of the Toddle House Corporation said that it was the Toddle House policy not to let Negroes eat at the counter. According to the manager of the Durham Toddle House a Negro can eat in the back room or take food out, but cannot eat at the counter.

Netters Play At N.C. State

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The University of Miami brings college tennis' longest winning streak to town this week, but the 2,500 fans expected to mob UNC's Monogram Courts will give odds that come 7:00 Friday evening, the Hurricanes' sting will be broken.

Miami, which hasn't experienced defeat since 1957, boasts the phenomenal mark of 103 consecutive wins over the past five years—a statistic that somewhat overshadows the 32-match win skein of Coach Don Skakle's Tar Heels. But Skakle isn't scared and says his boys will be ready.

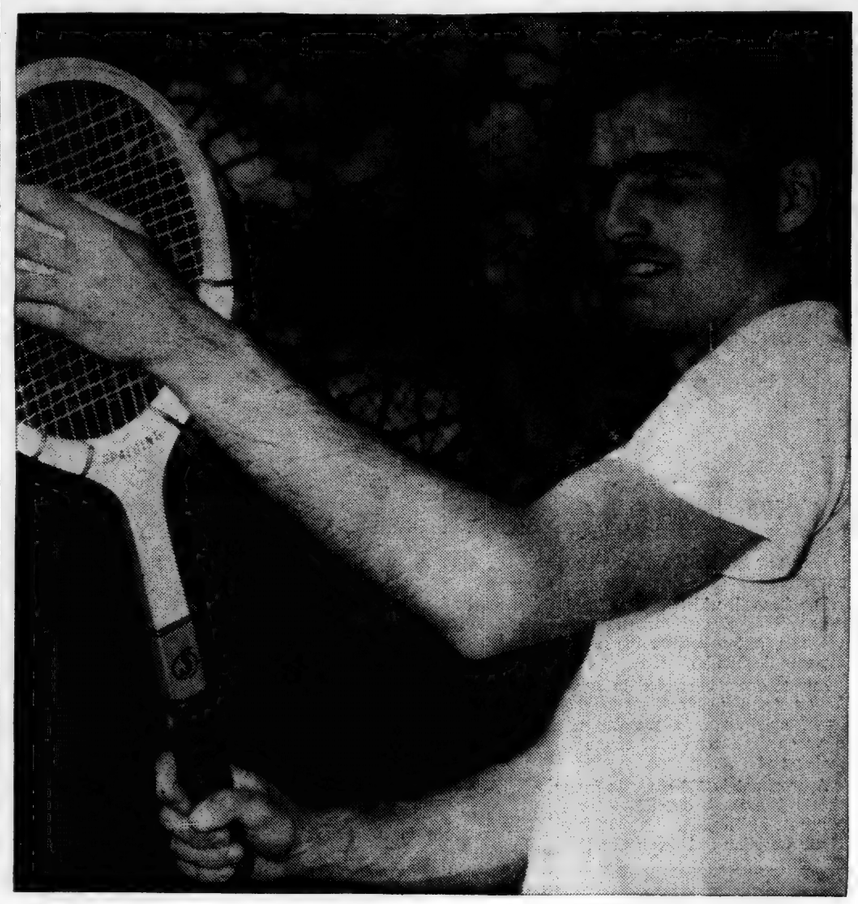
By "his boys" the Carolina coach is, of course, referring to the "firehouse five plus one" that makes up his highly-rated group of netmen.

The "Big Five" of junior Keith Stoneman and sophomores George Sokol, John "Bitsy" Harrison, Ted Hoehn, and Charlie Shaffer have dropped but five matches this year and Friday will be joined by junior Dave Morgan in their attempt to knock off the invaders from the Sunshine State. Sokol, the blond bomber from Bryn Mwr, Pa., has lost just four sets in winning every one of his twenty starts.

Miami, too, has an exhaustive supply of impressive individual accomplishments. Among their top five men, the Hurricanes feature the nation's 30th ranked singles player—John Karabasz. Astonishingly, Karabasz is the only one of the five to lose this year.

Beside the home court, perhaps the biggest advantage the Tar Heels will enjoy in this battle of tennis tartars, is the schedule.

While UNC rests with matches against outclassed North Carolina State today, host Wake Forest Wednesday, and meet Miami here Friday in the match of the decade.



CHARLIE SHAFFER, versatile UNC athlete, has posted an 18-1 record for the Carolina tennis team which has won 20 straight matches and 32 over a two-year span. Skakle's men go to N. C. State today, host Wake Forest Wednesday, and meet Miami here Friday in the match of the decade.

Heels, Devils Tangle Today On Duke Baseball Diamond

By ED DUPREE

It's a big step from sixth place to first in the ACC baseball standings, but that step is not an impossible one for Coach Walt Rabb's diamond men.

The 3-4 mark compiled by the Tar Heel nine over the first half of the conference schedule is far from impressive. At times Rabb's men have looked like the cream of the conference crop, and at times they have played the role of a typical cellar-dwelling team.

To have a shot at the league title UNC will have to defeat Duke twice, Clemson, Maryland, Virginit, South Carolina, and N. C. State. Carolina hopefuls remember the 1960 team which won one of its first four games and then rolled up ten straight wins for the ACC title and a spot in the college World Series.

But while Carolina needs to win seven straight, Wake Forest must lose two of its final seven games and Clemson and N. C. State must each lose one in order for the Tar Heels to catch up. Virginia and South Carolina each have 3-3 marks in fourth place, but neither has the pitching depth to win the conference title.

The first Duke-UNC battle will be this afternoon at 3 at Duke. Carolina was rated 14th and Duke 8th in the first national baseball pall—both are now tied for sixth in the ACC with 3-4 marks and haven't fared too well in non-conference action. In previous seasons the meetings between the heated rivals have usually been battles for first place in the league. Today the teams face a "must win" situation.

Jr. Class Picks Schnorrenberg Month's Teacher

'Teacher Should Make Himself Unnecessary'

John M. Schnorrenberg, associate professor of art, has been selected as the Junior Class Teacher of the Month. The decision was announced by class president Richard Vinroot and project chairman Louis Legum.

Professor Schnorrenberg was born in New York City in 931. Early in his life he moved to Asheville. He attended the University of North Carolina, receiving an A.B. in English in 1952, and a year later obtaining his M.A. in art history. After a brief interval as an eighth grade teacher, Mr. Schnorrenberg moved to Princeton where he studied from 1952 until 1958.

He taught for a year at Columbia, but returned to Carolina in the fall of 1959, assuming the position of associate professor of art.

Professor Schnorrenberg was principally recognized for his instruction in Art 33, a general survey of the history of painting. His most vital interest is focused upon the Middle Ages; "a study of the past," he believes, "helps in giving

MIGHT INFLUENCE 80 PCT. RULE

IFC Rules To De-Activate Members Who Don't Have C

'Individual, Not House Is Responsible'

A by-law which would de-activate all fraternity brothers who did not maintain a cumulative 2.0 (C) average was passed Monday night by the IFC.

The by-law was intended to put de-activation on an individual basis instead of on a collective or all-house basis, according to Charley Battle, IFC vice president. Battle said that under the present system members who "work to keep their averages up are forced to pay for those who do not."

De-activation would mean that a brother would not be allowed to participate in any fraternity affairs, pay bills, or be considered a member.

Battle said also that if the Faculty Council decides to repeal the 80 per cent rule the IFC will put into effect an IFC by-law which would deprive any fraternity whose members did not maintain an overall C average of rushing privileges.

The Faculty Council meets Friday to decide on whether the 80 percent rule should be repealed.

Assistant Dean of Student Affairs William Long said he could not comment on whether the new IFC ruling would influence possible repeal of the 80 per cent rule.

Any such decision would depend to a large degree on whether the Faculty Committee on Fraternity Affairs recommends its repeal.

Film Society Will Present Pablo Picasso Documentary

"Picasso" — a 50-minute color documentary of the 20th century art maestro—will be presented in two special out-of-series showings by the Chapel Hill Film Society Sunday evening.

The film, on which Picasso himself collaborated, uses 477 of his works to trace his career and his life from 1896 to the present.

Also shown will be a brief United Nations film on "Pablo Casals Breaks His Journey," during the cellist's visit to the UN, and another short, "Destination, McGoo" —a John Hubley Production.

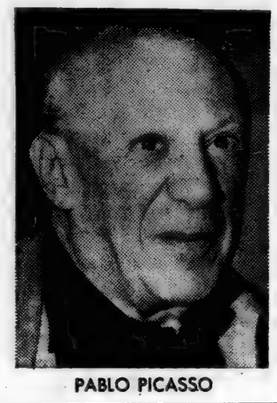
Showings will be in Carroll Hall at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

The Picasso autobiography pictures his work, his techniques and his manner of living beginning with his family sketches done in his teens in Spain.

It covers his Blue and Pink Periods, the Periods of Cubism, Neo-Classicism, Surrealism, as well as the recent vases and plates and the recreation of the 1952 War and Peace.

The film, which won the Silver Reel award at the American Film Assembly, is accompanied by commentary and Flamenco score.

In order to handle attendance at the two showings, special attendance passes will be available at the Y today through Saturday or from members of the Film Society sponsoring committee.



PABLO PICASSO

CONSERVATIVE SPEAKS TO YAF

Whitener Eyes 'Big Gov't'

"Big government must be bound with the chains of the Constitution," A. G. Whitener told a meeting of the Young Americans for Freedom Monday night as he defined the basic beliefs of the North Carolina Conservative Party which he heads.

The High Point businessman and Phi Beta Kappa graduate of UNC ranged over a wide variety of topics in an attempt to present his views on many of today's political questions. Whitener is a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the sixth district.

He said his basic position as a Conservative was just "a little right of center." The Conservative, he stated, is not basically a reactionary, but simply one who wishes to preserve the basic principles of constitutional government.

"Political action is necessary," he declared, "if Conservatives are to regain influence in national policies. There are too many "Prima Donna" Conservative groups around that refuse to enter the political arena."

He then charged both major parties with being built around the spoils system as he urged the audience to "vote for a man's principles, and not for the party or the man alone."

Reactions to Whitener's speech by YAF members, an organization of campus Conservatives, was varied as several thought he showed political unsophistication.

"He is not a good political speaker," one member commented. "Of course, he is basically a businessmen, and not a politician, but businessmen who are not politicians seldom get elected."

Whitener is campaigning on a platform of lower taxes and stricter Constitution interpretation in order to preserve personal freedom. "The Constitution is the rulebook of freedom," he stated. "Even children cannot play baseball without knowing the rules."

"The Constitution not only tells us what we can do, it also tells us what we cannot do."

He then criticized the growth of federal power by stating that the federal government threatens a monopoly over the states. "We must remember," he said, "power does not make men just, and I fear that those now in power have little concept of what made America great."

"When big government takes care of you, it is using money that has been taken from someone else.

"Our Constitution gives us the right to fail as well as the right to succeed. Those who succeed have an obligation to those who fail, but enforced giving through high federal taxes is not the just way to fulfill this obligation. This obligation should be met through Christian giving to private organizations."

On the United Nations:

"The world is not ready for a United Nations. Our forefathers wanted to escape from one-world tyranny. Alger Hiss wrote much of the charter, no sessions are opened with prayer, we pay most of the bills, and any scrap of land can become a nation.

"I suppose these opinions make me a nationalist, but I prefer the word 'patriot.' "

On New Orleans Citizens Council's Freedom Bus:

"My opponents call me a segregationist, but this is simply an act of bitterness by people who have become frustrated by the violation of their states' rights. This Freedom Bus idea is as wrong as the attacks on the South by the North."

On Major Roberts' speech to the DAR:

"President Kennedy is the commander-in-chief. He made the rules. Roberts broke the rules, and now he is a civilian. x

On the John Birch Society:

"I don't condemn the Society, but I feel they have been much too radical at times. Extreme groups on the left are just as bad as extremists on the right. There are many members of the ADA in the federal government, but they are called policymakers, not radicals."

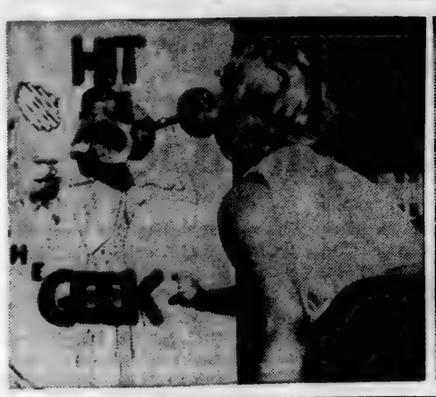
The Pi Phi's limboed lower, looked lovlier cavorted more cleverly to amass a greater number of points than the other contenders in the afternoon's competition. They won the Skit competition, the Miss Modern Venus event (both first and second places) and the Limbo contest and placed in the Mystery event—a cow-milking contest.

The Chi O's won the Grand National and Hit the Geek and placed in several other events to place second in overall competition. The AD Pi's rated third, proving most proficient at cow-milking.

Gail Venters was chosen Miss Modern Venus, with Charlotte Winstead running second. Cooky Cockran of the Nurses Dorm tied for third position with Carol Barber, an AD Pi.



Allen Outlines Goals For NSA; Seeking Committee Members

"The NSA co-ordinating committee needs to exploit its potential for making a substantial contribution to this campus," said Inman Allen yesterday. The student body President was commenting in reference to last week's National Student Association regional conference.

Allen, who received a comprehensive report about the conference noted that the national office of NSA had greatly increased their services available to member campuses.

He stressed the necessity of a capable committee to co-ordinate the association's activities at Carolina. Interviews for committee membership are being held weekday afternoon through next Tuesday in the student government offices.

Goals that Allen said he would like to see the committee work for include a series of seminars and debates similar to last year's "Operation Abolition" program, increased communication with the campus, and co-operation with other executive committees to utilize the services provided for student governments by the national office.

Urging a heavy turnout of applicants for the committee, Allen made a particular appeal to students who are interested in NSA but were unsure about their qualifications. He noted that membership on the committee is open to all concerned students regardless of their political views and that previous experience with NSA was unnecessary.

"Those who have had experience with organizations that have sponsored speakers on the campus will be particularly valuable," said the President, who commented favorably about the regional conference's decision to stress NSA's role in political education on the campus.

Spring Germans To Feature Sarah, Smothers Brothers

The international "Divine One," Sarah Vaughan, and the new comic team of the Smothers Brothers will be presented by the Germans Club at its spring concert this Friday.

When she was sixteen, Miss Caughan walked into the limelight with an appearance at the Apollo Theatre in Harlem. Since then she has appeared at Basin Street East, Birdland, and the Palace Theatre in New York, Storyville in Boston, London House in Chicago, Sciolas in Philadelphia, and many foreign cities such as Berlin, Paris, London, and Rome.

She has been presented to the U.S. many times on television and has turned out several albums on Mercury. She is in constant demand and has been brought back for return engagements by popular demand at many of her appearances.

Tom and Dick Smothers were introduced to a nationwide audience early in 1961 via Jack Parr's midnight coalition. Their brash, irreverent approach to folk music, combined with a genuine comic flair, elicited thunderous applause, as well as an outstanding comment from Paar, who immediately booked them for a return engagement.

Both brothers were educated in Southern California in high school and attended San Jose State College. They got a fifteen-month booking in San Francisco at the Purple Onion, then moved east to the Blue Angel in New York. They were warmly received and soon appeared on the Paar Show. Their gleeful dismantling of an old folk song, dealing with assorted animals of forest and barnyard, was their biggest success and is one of their standards.

Cooperation

When two parties must get together to work out equitable solutions to pressing problems, the approaches are going to be varied. Especially when one of the groups is in a position to categorically, perpetually, and uncooperatively reject every proposal presented by the other group.

There is the possibility that the two organizations will never agree on any suggested solution. There is the possibility that the more powerful group will continue to veto every action taken by the subordinate organization. Fortunately, such extreme possibilities rarely materialize.

We doubt if any two persons on this campus would offer the same explanation for the Faculty Council's action on the 80% ruling. Faculty members disagree, students disagree, and members of the administration disagree. Some say that the Faculty wants deferred rush, others hope that the faculty wants to improve academic attitudes, and some even suggest that the factulty wants to abolish fraternities. No one was or is certain of anything.

Throughout all of the heated discussions and attempts to change the situation, there seem to have been three phases of action and reaction. The reactions of the fraternities since the passing of the rule have fallen within range of what we would call the "three C's." Crying, compromising, and cooperating.

Initially all the fraternities did was cry about the "gross unfairness" of the ruling. They simply knew that they were being discriminated against, and that was their only concern. They merely cried.

Slowly, the fraternities began to realize that everyone wanted the matters placed in the hands of a responsible IFC. Slowly, the crying stopped and the compromising began. The IFC realized they could nt fight the faculty committee and that they must try to compromise.

Agreements were reached about visiting regulations and, more importantly, deferred rush. Although the latter program still lacks sound policies. There was an aspect of fear in the IFC's approach to the Committee.

Fear yields compromise, but inhibits cooperation.

As the two groups appear to be more willing to speak openly on matters, the final phase of cooperation seems just around the corner. The Interfraternity Council is approaching the solutions more realistically, and actually more sincerely.

We believe that the passing of the "accumulative C" by-law should tumble barriers previously preventing cooperation. (cw).

City Voters

Reapportionment of state legislatures and changes in state-national-local voting procedures threaten most Southern states as well as other scattered states around the nation. Since the Supreme Court decision striking down unfair Tennessee apportionment, the state legislature of Alabama has been instructed to reapportion and Georgia is holding a special session to discover a successor to its county unit system.

A federal court instructed Alabama that it should revise apportionment itself or fhe courts would be forced to do it. Alabama's legislature, like other states affected by the Court decision, is grossly overpopulated in favor of rural representatives.

In Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver, who ran on a platform of "no change in the county unit system" (just as he said he would never allow Georgia schools to integrate), proposed a compromise revision in the unit system. As it had stood the system made the vote of an Echols county (the smallest of the state's 159 counties) resident's vote worth 99 times the vote of a man from Fulton county (Atlanta.)

City representatives rejected the plan as too conservative.

But former Governor of Georgia and 1962 candidate for the same position, Marvin Griffin, called Vandiver's proposal "premature"—a sentiment undoubtably shared by other rural - supremists, that any change in the present institutionalized unequality is premature.

A three-judge federal panel ruled Saturday that both Georgia's old unit system and Vandiver's substitute, which had been passed by Legislature Friday, are unfair and cannot be used.

The judges issued an injunction banning future elections, under either of the systems, and the result is absolute confusion as to what laws will apply in the state's Sept. 12 Democratic primary. This brought cries of "sorry mess" from Griffin and "appalling" from Sen. Herman Talmadge. In one sweeping decision the political lives of every state and national representative was endangered and the spectre of the southern Republican and liberal Democrat grew more threatening.

They are worried about city voters.

They are worried about city voters who are Negroes—Negroes who are voting in greater numbers because of recent voter registration drives in Southern cities.

They are worried about city voters who are union members and who will not follow the traditional conservative leadership of the South.

They are worried about city voters who are middle-class businessmen, who will vote Republican.

They are worried about city voters who will vote against the rural-dominated state machine out of a feeling of new freedom and defiance of the Red-necks.

They have cause to be worried.

Hatred Taught As World Rides By

You have to be taught to hate.

It was proved again only a few night ago in Durham when an "inexperienced waitress served a Negro UNC student a Coca-Cola in a Toddle House in Durham only to be told by the manager that one doesn't do things like that there.

And who is right and who is wrong? Is it wrong to see no essential difference in men despite the fact that one skin is colored black and another white? Is it wrong to feel that a human being wherever he is and that he has a right to be accorded respect and dignity because he is a human being? Is it wrong not to hate?

Who are the leaders of our community? Is it Chuck McDew who has been in jail 24 times for the simple crime of wanting to be served in different places in the South or who is under charge of criminal anarchy in the state of Mississippi for bringing a book to a friend in jail—a book that the authorities thought was dangerous? Or is it state representative Eugene Hurst of the state of Mississippi who shot and killed a Negro father of 12 children for the Negro's crime of trying to assist in getting a few of his people registered at the polls?

But McDew is in and out of jail and Hurst walks and lives freely, cleared by a coroner's jury and receiving the universal approbation of his peers.

Who will make the contribution to the future? Is it Robert Moses who day by day works for little to see to it that qualified Negroes get the franchise by teaching them the rudiments to pass literacy tests, or is it the people who have beaten him, jailed him, and now walk free in the society and the proud tradition bearers of an unjust status quo?

We live in a country of paradoxes. We believe in individual intellectual freedom, but if you exert that prerogative before an investigatory committee, you are in contempt and you are in jail.

We are taught throughout our childhood to value honesty and truth and yet every day confront hyprocrisy and falsehood. And if we use our honesty to criticize, to suggest changes, or to awaken people to the inadequacy of their state, we are called rabble-rousers, "communists," or are simply asked, "Don't you like it here. If you don't, you know you can leave."

We are told that in a democracy to value courage, honest expression of ideas, and a free marketplace in which the whole of the country can reach a decision. But if your ideas are too critical, if they call certain norms, certain ultimate values into question, you are blasphemous, libelous, dangerous, and must be censored.

We are taught to put ourselves into a mold of practicality, to speak only if you have status and can't be touched, and to in the meantime live and let live even if living is lousy and what you see makes you uncomfortable every day of your life.

And so most of us sit and wait and do nothing, while the world rides by, decisions are made, and the world gets into a sorrier state day by day.

Then, an occasional voice, perhaps a Victor Brant of the UNC Board of Trustees, says talk, make use of your academic freedom, and help stimulate people to create a better world.

But in this society which theoretically prizes free universities and academic freedom, no voices are heard. They haven't published, they don't have tenure, or they have homes and families that can't be jeopardized. And so the incomprehensible happens and a free university is turned into still waters which may run deep but the depths are never explored.

One begins to wonder whether the ideals that are part of the American heritage have any meaning at all or whether there are any people willing to risk their necks to uphold them. Or more importantly are there any people in our society willing to make these ideas practical, to transfer them from the dreams and visions of men into their living existence?

While this is being written, horns are honking in Franklin Street heralding the beginning of the Sigma Chi Derby and pretty girls smile prettily from the rear seat of convertibles and people are laughing. Will they be laughing again soon?

'Integration Thru Excommunication'

The terrible fallacy of The Crusaes lives on.

The Roman Catholic Church in New Orleans at long last decided to take a stand on integration. It decided to change its policy from segregated parochial schools to integrated parochial schools. Three Catholics were foolish enough to openly challenge the change. They were excommunicated because they could not change their line of thinking.

Now much could be said about freedom of thought, but that is usually left up to those professional freedom of thought boys who are constantly moaning about the freedom of thought and expression denied those poor unfortunate communists. So far though, they have remained conspicuously silent.

Their silence is most curious. For every time a communist is being mistreated (?) they can be heard loud and clear. Every time a loyalty oath to the United States or an oath stating a belief in God is requested by some organization, they begin to foam at the mouth. In short, there is nothing quite so sacred to them as freedom of thought and expression. And yet in the case of the three excommunicated Catholics, they remain silent.

Why? Because these three Catholics were far more treacherous and evil than any communists, atheist, or possible traitor to this country. They were (shudder, gas pains, over flow of liver bile, heart burn, acid indigestion, athlete's foot etc.) segregationists! Oh! The absolute horror of it all! Three segregationists lurking insideously in the sanctuary of the Roman Catholic Church, saying their Hail Marys' and faithfully eating their fish every Friday just like they were regular Roman Catholics. Is there nothing these segregationists will stop at?

Of course The Church was quite unaware of the presence of any segregationists in its ranks—especially in New Orleans. And naturally when it changed from segregated parochial schools it could not imagine anyone protesting the act. Of course this brings up the question of why the parochial schools were segregated in the first place if it was so morally wrong. But these little inconsistencies should not be questioned. After all, did not God pass some sort of law back in 1954 saying that all schools should be integrated or was that the Supreme Court? Oh, well, what's the difference?

So "it is altogether fitting and proper" that the freedom of thought boys remain silent on this issue. For to speak out now would be to speak out against the two most prominent minority groups in the United States —Catholics and Negroes. They would run the risk of being accused of bigotry which is such a broad term now that it covers practically any human being who has the misfortune of being in the majority.

Of all of us who are NOT BIGOTS and have true compassion, understanding, and Christian love for our fellow man should remember that the only good segregationist is a dead or excommunicated segregationist!

Destroy the infidels and capture Jerusalem for the Christians!

It is the violence of their ideas and the blind haste of their passion that make men awkward when with women. A man who has first blunted his sensations, at first studies to please rather than to be loved—Georges Sand.

Robinson's Ramblings

In his book, "Humorous English," Even Esar points out that foreigners have a difficult time with the idioms and pecularities of our language. As a classic story to illustrate this, he tells about a visitor from South America who was attending an American dinner party. The man described his own country and himself, concluding, "And I have a sympathetic wife, but unfortunately no children. My wife, she is unbearable."

The others greeted this with puzzled glances, so he tried to explain. "My wife, she is inconceivable." Noticing that this did not clarify the matter, he finally smiled and said:

"I mean, my wife, she is impregnable."

To show what he means by ambiguity, Esar reports that the manager of a movie theater got a phone call from a woman who inquired:

"What have you got on today?"

"A blue suit," he answered.

"I am," he said.

After a pause for reflection, the woman said, "Oh, I've seen that picture already" and hung up.

* * *

I feel obligated in the public interest to let DTH readers become familiar with the by-laws of a new organization that is forming in the area. The by-laws of the organization, called UN-SANE, are as follows:

1. Anyone who disagrees with us is a Communist. There are no exceptions to this rule. This makes for easier, all-around classification.

For example, it is well-known that anyone favoring integration must be pinko," at least, and a "card carrier" at worst.

2. The best way to save the world for democracy is to incinerate it. There might be a couple of chunks left in orbit, even if a little messy. In other words, "Get there fustus, with the mostust," as that great American patriot and slugger former-Gneral Ed "Cornpone" Stumbler once said.

3. A hot war is better than a cold war, and the best solution to all our problems. This avoids the trouble of creative thinking or annoying arbitration. Do everything in your power to promote this end: Stamp your feet (preferably on a Negro), rant (preferably in the U. S. Senate) and be rude to foreigners (especially Africans, Russians and Asians).

This may not set off a war, however, you'll be doing other needed and worthwhile things. Best of all, the above acts help to relieve nasty ol' pent-up feeling in the pit of your stomach.

4. Anyone who supports the U. N. is a square and suspect. There are too many foreigners in it. And the U. N. makes it necessary to consider U. S. actions in the light of world opinion, and to give consideration to other countries This is an infringement on our sacred soveriegnity.

5. To fight the Communists menace we must adopt their methods. We must collect all manner of arms —B-B guns to bazookas—to fight the impending Russian landings on Myrtle Beach. These arms will also protect us from spies, subversives and unwed mothers.

6. We must stir up new interest in the Bible because it clearly teaches that integration is un-Christian. We can also gain support for the county unit system from the Blessed Book.

7. All members are required to take this oath, "We will drink one full glass of Strontiousm 90 daily without our oatmeal. We might get to like it. In fact, we will have to."

It is rumored that a gentleman named Simpy Chones from Durham County has been elected Honorary Chairman of the new organization. But it is not known whether Mr. Chones has accepted. Mr. Chones admires U.N.C. and occassionally favors us with his wisdom, especially in regard to faculty betterment.

Mikhail Yaffy, a brilliant UNC student, is a likely choice for the presidency.

Reflections

In East Germany one of the several Communist-led political parties is called the German Peasant's Party. It is described by a textbook as a "middle-class party." Perhaps in East Germany the peasants are middle-class.

Changes In U.S. Diplomacy

American diplomacy seems at last to be perfecting techniques needed to cope with permanent crisis, if the protracted conversations over Berlin are any evidence. The skills requisite to this sort of diplomatic maneuver do not come easily to our professional diplomats.

Since the Berlin crisis became ominous in April, 1948, it has been on and off the stage with various changes of costume and approximately the same script. It was on April 16, 1948, that General Clay sent to Washington his message warning that the West must maintain its presence in Berlin if it did not choose to yield Europe. Now, in another April, 14 years later, the Berlin issues remain unresolved. Over the years the proposals and counter-proposals have fluctuated but basically the choices of action open to the West have changed little .

In the earlier crises, Western diplomacy sometimes gave impressions of frantic and nervous search for a way through a maze. Tasks of negotiations were approached with a resolve to get somewhere, to find a way out, to perfect an agreement, to reach a solution, to deliver a settlement. One gets the impression that this traditional eagerness to find the answers quickly no longer is present in the talks that went on between Secretary Rusk and Foreign Minister Gromyko, or in the conversations between the Secretary and Ambassador Dobrynin. This is not just a matter of cynically accepting in advance the likelihood that a negotiation will fail. Perhaps it involves, rather, an appreciation of the fact that there can be no sesolution of a crisis like that in Berlin until there is a readiness for solution.

It has been necessary for American diplomats to suppress their impatience and to conceal their passion for settlement. The atmosphere enveloping the present talks suggests that if West and East have not learned yet how to settle issues they may be learning better how to exist without settling them. While each side has introduced variations in its presentation, basically each side has had only the same record to play back to the other. It may look like an exercise in futility but it is not without purpose or effect and nothing more indicates this than the eagerness that the Soviet Union has shown to keep the talks going.

We cannot know at this point what this eagerness means or if it means anything but it is profitable to wait and see. And we seem to be doing this sort of waiting with more calm than we have been able to do it in the past. It is a mark of greater maturity in our diplomacy. Perhaps it shows as well that American citizens are becoming more mature in their contemplation of foreign affairs. They have been an impatient people, historically. They have been so impatient in the kitchen that they have fillled copybooks with maxims about the "watched kettle" and so hasty in the diary that impatient maids were taught to sing "come butter, come!" to keep them calmly working at the churn. Slowly we seem to have brought to the conference table the hard lessons in patience once taught in the kitchen and dairy. Berlin has reconciled us to the facts of diplomacy. It may not be true that everything comes to the man who waits; but it surely is true that nothing comes to the man who cannot wait. These 14 long years at least have shown that we can wait out one inacceptable solution after another looking for a solution that can be accepted without fatal prejudice to Western interests in Berlin and in Europe. If that solution does not emerge in these conversations we can wait for it .

more meaning to the future."

He readily admits being content with his residence within the University community. Yet he has definite opinions about the student body and their limitations. According to Mr. Schnorrenberg, "the average Carolina student has beautiful manners and a great desire to please; but this quality is not strong enough to enable him to easily overcome laziness. He does not write well, not so much because he is unable, but perhaps because he is cautiously unwilling.

"Additionally, there seems to be a lack of motivation on campus—students don't seem to know what they want to do. They do the work they are asked to do, but not much more. I wonder how many people at UNC each day find out something for themselves, other than for a course?"

In regard to his profession as a teacher, Schnorrenberg has some very illuminating philosophies. He believes that "a teacher is a person to be used and to be discarded, if he has done his job well. The aim is for the teacher to make himself unnecessary, the sooner the better. Therefore, it is important that his position be challenged and questioned.

Blue Devils Pin 6-5 Defeat On Tar Heels

THE CAPTAIN. Keith Stoneman, captain of UNC's tennis team, had posted a 16-2 record going into yesterday's N. C. State match. The tall junior from Greenville, S. C., has teamed up with sophomores Harrison, Sokol, Hoehn, and Shaffer to form a solid big five for Coach Don Skakle.

By ED DUPREE

Duke's Blue Devils shoved North Carolina's Tar Heels into seventh place in the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball standings by taking a 6-5 decision from UNC Tuesday at Duke.

Carolina picked up a run in the first inning and pushed its lead to 3-1 by the fourth, but a single run in the bottom of the fourth and three more in the fifth gave Duke a 5-3 lead.

A pinch-hit double by Russ Hollers drove in Cronin Byrd from first, and a pinch single by Jud Spainhour scored Hollers as Coacth Walt Rabb's men knotted the score in the sixth.

The Methodists scored the winning run in the seventh frame. Bob Rankin walked and advanced to third on Dave Uebel's single. Larry Neal fielded Rex McKinlel's grounder at third, checked the runner, and threw wild to Len Dellolio at first base, allowing the deciding run to cross the plate.

Duke's Dick Densmore pitched the entire game. After yielding five runs and nine hits in the first six innings, he settled down and gave up only one hit over the final three innings. His record is now 6-2.

Larry Jenkins went the first 4 2/3 innings for UNC. Bobby Cox relieved Jenkins in the fifth. Jack Rees gave up only one hit over the final three innings, but picked up his first loss of the season. Rees now has a 2-1 record.

Paul Swing once more led the Tar Heels at the plate. After his third time at bat he was 3-3 for the day and 9-10 in three games. He finished the day at 3-5 and drove in one of the Carolina runs. In addition to Hollers and Spainhour, Heyward Hull and Neal drove in UNC runs.

Tar Babies Whip Duke, 6-3

By LOU ROSENTHAL

Bill Dannemann, right-handed pitching star of UNC's freshman baseball team, pitched and batted the Tar Babies to a 6-3 victory over the Duke Blue Imps yesterday at Emerson Stadium.

He also rapped two singles in three at bats, and drove in two runs, while pushing his batting average close to the .500 mark.

The Tar Babies opened the scoring in the first, as Dick Prindle singled, Ken Willard walked, and Frank Gallagher drove in his fourth run with a single. Dannemann drove in Babby Reagan in the second, after Reagan tripled, and courtesy runner Ronnie Stanley stole home for Dannemann.

Wake Today, Miami Friday On UNC Tennis Schedule

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Coach Don Skakle's UNC tennis team hosts the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest here this afternoon in its last preliminary before the big Miami test on Friday.

The Tar Heel netmen, unbeaten in 21 matches this season and 33 over a two-year span, can finish their second straight undefeated ACC campaign with a win today. Last year Carolina was 7-0 in the conference and won the ACC tournament with a total-point score of 24.

Skakle, expecting no trouble with the invaders from Winston-Salem, may hold some of his aces out of action this afternoon. This move would not only give the Tar Heels some added rest but also grant Wake Forest some needed mercy.

Wake coach Charlie Bryant brings four lettermen from last year's team that won but one ACC contest and two matches overall. They are Frank Fishburne, Andy Terrell, Alva Terrell, and Paul Caldwell.

Skakle's men, of course, cannot help but look ahead to Friday when they put their fine record on the line against the Hurricanes from the Sunshine State, winners of their last 103 matches.

Trackmen Nip Virginia

North Carolina's track team recorded its fourth win in five dual-meet decisions, Monday, as the Tar Heels romped past Virginia at Charlottesville, 90½-40½.

Tom Brooks and Jim Brown paced Carolina with two wins apiece. Brooks won the 100- and 200-yard dashes as UNC's John McNinch and Joe McLamb finished two-three behind him in each race. Brown took the low and high hurdle races in 15.5 and 24.6, respectively.

Coach Dale Ranson's cindermen captured 13 of the 16 first places on the way to their lopsided margin. Only Fred Stubblefield and Dave Grant were able to crack the UNC domination.

Stubblefield set a Virginia school record with his 1:53.4 clocking in the 880 while Grant posted a double in the discus and shot put.

Carolina faces Duke at Durham Saturday in its last meet prior to the ACC Championship Meet at Columbia, S. C. on May 11.

Shearing, Joan Baez To Show

Joan Baez, folk-singer, and George Shearing, internationally famous jazz pianist, are being brought to Memorial Hall this month by the GMAB.

Both concerts are free for UNC students with ID's. Spouses will have to pay $1, while everyone else will be charged $1.50 if there is any room left at 7:45.

Miss Baez, a widely travelled 20-year-old, will appear Wednesday night at 8:00. Her music (she accompanies herself on a guitar) has been enthusiastically accepted wherever she has appeared.

She was a big hit at the 1959 Newport Folk Festival and in the winter of 1960 toured Boston, New York, and Hartford with Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs.

George Shearing is an Englishman by birth but in jazz popularity polls he has been acclaimed the number one citizen (as far as jazz pianists are concerned) in the U.S., Japan, France, Australia, Germany, and South Africa, as well as in his native England.

Shearing, who will appear in Memorial Hall on May 16, is now a naturalized citizen of the U.S. and resides with his wife and daughter in Southern California when he is not on tour with his quintet or cutting records.

Stravinsky Discussed On TV Tonite

The third program in the series "Music Now" will be presented on WUNC-TV, Channel 4, tonight.

"Music Now" deals with the most important influences and trends in twentieth century music. It seeks to acquaint viewers with the reasons the various developments took place and why the results of these developments have made great difficulties for audiences.

Host for the series is Iain Hamilton, visiting Mary Duke Biddle Professor of Music at Duke University. Mr. Hamilton is a composer from London, England. In 1951 he received the Koussevitzky Foundation Award for his "Second Symphony." He also holds the Royal Academy of Music's "Dove Prize," and the Royal Philharmonic Society's Prize.

Recently, a program of three sonatas by Iain Hamilton was presented in Carnegie Recital Hall in New York. The New York Times said, "Mr. Hamilton is clearly an accomplished composer, and his music should be given more hearing in this city than it has in the past."

Tonight's program will deal with Stravinsky. Mr. Hamilton will show how Stravinsky tackled the problem of retaining tonality in new ways in his work and how he renewed the element of form and structure by use of classical procedures in neo-classical period.

Examples of Stravinsky's work will be performed by Julia Mueller, violin, and Ruth Friedberg, piano.

Legislature To Consider Fraternity Council Plan For Removal Of 80 Pct. Rule

AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Dr. J. C. Lyons Dies At 61

John Coriden Lyons, 61, professor of French and Italian at the University and author of volumes on the French Renaissance died at 2 a.m. Tuesday at the N. C. Memorial Hospital, after a long illness.

Dr Lyons, was Faculty Marshall in the University for over a quarter of a century and was a former President of the Faculty Club. He wrote and lectured extensively on his specialities, 16th and 17th century French literature and 14th and 18th century Italian literature, and was editor of "Eight French Classical Plays," and co-editor of "The Life and Work of DuBartas" and author of several textbooks in French language and literature.

Since 1923 when he first came to Chapel Hill, J. C. Lyons was a popular and gregarious member of the faculty and respected by several generations of students. He was graduated from William and Mary College in 1920, and received the M.A. degree there in 1921, where he was also an instructor in mathematics and later an assistant professor in French. He came to the University of North Carolina in 1923, receiving the Ph.D. degree at Chapel Hill in 1927.

Funeral services were conducted yesterday at the Episcopal Chapel of the Cross, the Rev. Thomas R. Thrasher officiating. Dr. Lyons is survived by his wife, the former Miss Mary Wadsworth of New Bern, his daughter and two grandchildren.

Money Bills Also Pending SL Approval

A resolution supporting the Interfraternity Council's plan for improving fraternity scholarship and the withdrawal of the 80% rule will be considered tonight by Student Legislature.

The resolution, introduced last week by Bob Jones, points out that the 80% rule, which provides that any house that does not have at least 80% of its members making a 2.0 average for two consecutive semesters loses rushing privileges, places the resulting financial burden primarily on those who made their grades.

Legislative approval will also be asked for a communication from the men's and women's honor councils which states the existing penalties. This is the first time that the penalties have been submitted for legislative approval.

An appropriation of $100 to be used to improve communication between legislators and their constituencies will be asked in a bill introduced last week by Rufus Edmisten. The suggested use of the funds is for mimeographed communications from each legislator to be sent to his constituents.

George Rosental's bill to amend the 1962-63 budget by providing for a more equitable distribution of Daily Tar Heel salaries will be acted on tonight. Also to be considered is a bill to establish a campus travel committee which would coordinate and centralize travel programs offered by various student groups.

ALSO PROGRAM PLANS

New GM Officers Announced

Bob Rearden, newly selected President of Graham Memorial, announced the names of the officers and chairmen of the Activities Board for the coming year. Rearden also announced plans for an expanded GM program.

The officers and chairmen selected by Rearden and officially confirmed by the Graham Memorial Board of Directors are as follows: Dan Moore, vice-president; Cecil Collins, secretary; Don Curtis, drama chairman; John Compton, Free Flick; Jack Hill, music chairman; Nelson Irvine, publicity chairman; and Bill Selden, social chairman.

Rearden stated that the various chairmen will be holding interviews for committee members next Tuesday and Wednesday from 3:00-5:00 p.m. A sign-up sheet for interview times will be placed at the GM Information Desk.

"I would like to urge every student who is interested in any of the Union activities to come by and sign up for an interview," Rearden said. "One of our biggest weaknesses during this past year was our shortage of committee members." More information on the committees and the interviews will be in Sunday's Tar Heel.

Rearden also announced plans for the installation of a new cinemascope screen for the Free Flicks. Further expansion plans call for a weekly combo party, a weeklong dramatic workshop, all-campus weekend, and the revival of a Sound and Fury production.

Rearden stated that regular office hours will be maintained, and that all comments, criticisms, and suggestions will be greatly appreciated.

T. Clark To Speak At Law Graduation

The 168th Commencement Program of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will be held June 2, 3, and 4, it was announced today.

Douglas V. Steere, professor of philosophy at Haverford College will deliver the Baccalauerate Sermon at 11 a.m. Sunday morning in Memorial Hall. Sunday afternoon the University Band will present a Concert on the Davie Poplar Lawn and Sunday night at 8:30 in Hill Hall the Chapel Hill Choral Club and Symphony Orchestra will play in concert Dvorak's "Requium."

The activities of Monday, June 4, include a morning reception given by the University for all Commencement guests, and an Alumni Luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Exercises for the graduating class in Medicine will be held at Hill Hall at 2:30. Exercises for the graduation class in the School of Nursing will be held at 2:30 in Carroll Hall. At 3 o'clock the awarding of Air Force and Navy ROTC Commissions will be held in the Forest Theater.

The Law School will hold its exercises at 4 in the Knapp Building with Associate Justice Tom Clark of the United States Supreme Court speaking.

In Beard Hall, also at 4 p.m., the School of Pharmacy will hold its convocation exercises.

Kenan Stadium will be the scene Monday at 6:30 for the second Band Concert. At 7:30 the formal University of North Carolina graduation exercise will be held. Ralph McGill, editor of "The Atlanta Constitution," will deliver the commencement address.

Campus Briefs

Graduate Orientation

A graduate student is needed to be co-ordinator of Graduate Student Orientation. Those interested should contact Bob Madry at the Orientation office before Thursday.

WRC

Women's Residence Council has granted a campus-wide 2:00 a.m. late permission for all coeds on May 5th, the Saturday night of Germans weekend.

Amateur Radio Club

Amateur Radio Club will meet tonight at 7:30 at the club station in Caldwell Y. Election of officers and other important business is to be transacted.

The annual Cosmopolitan picnic will be held at Hogan's Lake Saturday. Price $.35. Cars will be leaving from Y-Court at 1:45.

Intramural Fencing

The annual individual Campus Fencing Championships will continue Friday night in Graham Memorial at 7 p.m. with the competition in the sabre division.

Any male student is eligible to complete but must sign up 24 hours in advance at the GM Information desk or at the intramural office.

Foreign Students

Foreign student orientation counselors will meet Thursday at 1 p.m. in upstairs Y-Court. Those who cannot attend are requested to notify Susan Woodward.

Seniors

Caps and gowns may be ordered for the remainder of this week at the supply counter at Y-Court. Seniors attending graduation exercises should place orders immediately.

JFK's College Aid Program Clears Congressional Hurdle

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy's college aid program Wednesday cleared a congressional hurdle that has stymied it for three months.

The House Rules Committee voted 8-6 to let negotiations start with the Senate on a compromise higher education bill. This raised new hope among school aid backers for approval of some part of the President's education program this year.

At the same time, the committee voted 9-5 to defer action on a motion to send to the House floor a 10-year, $900 million bill to build new medical schools and provide federal loans to medical students.

This vote represented a turnabout as nine Democrats voted to defer action and five Republicans sought to push the bill.

Demos Unwilling

The Democrats apparently were unwilling to have two big-money bills, covering the same general subject, before the House at the same time. It was believed they would try to call up the medical school bill later.

The rules committee had held up a House-Senate conference on widely-differing versions of the college aid legislation since early February. It cleared the way to draft a compromise only after conservatives get assurances they would not be faced with an "all or nothing" choice on a much bigger bill than the House originally passed.

The school aid forces have been trying to set up a conference the Senate passed a $2.7 billion college construction and scholarship bill Feb. 6. On Jan. 30 the house approved a $1.5 billion bill calling for college construction only.

Single Objection

A single objection blocked the usually-automatic process of setting up a House-Senate conference committee and the matter had been setting in the rules committee ever since.

The House bill would provide $180 million in grants and $120 million in low-interest loans in each of five years to build classrooms, libraries and laboratories at both public and privately-financed colleges. It passed with overwhelming bipartisan support after House managers made no effort to add Kennedy's request for a $900 million scholarship program for talented but needy students.

LAST LECTURE

John M. Schnorrenberg, assistant professor of art, will deliver the Spring Last Lecture tonight at 8 in Carroll Hall. He will use slides to illustrate his subject, "The Last Enemy."

Texas Race Changes Edit Speaker Here

The primary election in Texas has changed both the speaker and the subject for the final dinner meeting of the N.C. Editorial Writers Conference to be held here this weekend.

Tom Wicker, former Tar Heel editorial writer now on the staff of the New York Times Washington bureau, was to have been the speaker for his fellow editorial writers and planned to discuss politics in Washington and the role of President Kennedy, but he has been sent to Texas to cover the primary for the Times.

Substitute speaker for the editorial writers will be Richard E. Mooney, who covers the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank for the Washington bureau of the New York Times. Mr. Mooney is considered an expert in the field of economics and plans to discuss the effects of President Kennedy's recent action in halting the steel price increase.

Playmakers Plan Capers For Saturday

The Carolina Playmakers will have their annual Capers Saturday, May 5, at 8:00 p.m. in the Playmakers Theatre.

Written and directed by Susie Cordon and Hank Johnson, Capers of 1962 will parody The Playmakers' productions of the past season and give drama students a chance to satirize Dramatic Art staff members.

The student production will be followed by the presentation of awards for 1961-62. These include the Roland Holt Cup Award and the Joseph D. Feldman awards in Playwriting; The Playmakers Mask Awards; Playmakers Master Awards; and the Alumna Award.

There will be no admission charge to the Capers program. The public is invited to attend.

Noted Editor To Appear In Doubleheader

Two public appearances will be made here this weekend by Pulitzer Prize winning editor Lenoir Chambers of Norfolk, Va.

He will address the "Friends of the Library" Friday night, May 4, and the N. C. Conference of Editorial Writers on Saturday morning, May 5.

For the editorial writers, Chambers will take part in a panel discussion on "Who Reads the Editorial Page?"

A long-time editor of the Virginian-Pilot in Norfolk, Va., Mr. Chambers retired last year. He has received an honorary degree from the University and was Commencement speaker last year. He is a native of Charlotte, a graduate of the University, once was director of the University News Bureau and a professor of journalism at Chapel Hill.

THE AMPHOTEROTHEN Society inducted thirteen new member in an annual ceremony held Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial. Bill Whichard, Janus, and Dennis Rash, Recorder, were revealed as officers for the past year. The Society is the second oldest honorary society on campus, founded in 1912 by the late J. G. DeRoulac, a UNC history professor. Originally a discussion and debating group, its function is now chiefly honorary. Thirteen men are admitted each year on the basis of excellence in forensics an doratory.

New initiates are the following: Hugh Inman Allen, Daniel McMullen Armstrong III, Timothy Brooks Burnett, George Worth Campbell Jr., Allen Thompson Cronenberg Jr., Walter Estes Dellinger III, Henry Newton Patterson Jr., Peter Anthony Thompson, Dwight Wheless, Joe Oppenheimer, William Franklin Farrell, John Jey Diefell Jr., John Carrvile Randall.

Student Action

Student groups already have taken up their campaign against the House Un-American Activities Committee, which last week began hearings in Los Angeles, its first on-the-spot investigation since May, 1960 in San Francisco.

The hearings were greeted by a protest crowd of 600 in Los Angeles the first day, more than 2,000 the third day, and student demonstrations on several major college campuses.

At the University of Michigan the anti-HUAC rally of several hundred students was organized by the Young Democrats and a campus political party. The rally was attacked by the University's Young Republicans Club and Young Americans for Freedom organization.

There were demonstrations in San Francisco, Chicago, New York, and Cambridge, Mass. and student rallies at Oberlin College, Wheaton College, Ohio State University and other schools.

* * *

The HUAC question is one of the most heatedly contested among national and local student groups. Students also have been very active in the "peace movement" and desegregation activities in the South.

These are issues which require an emotional commitment as well as an intellectual approach—participation is often of the non-violent "direct action" brand. Most students think issues of a more complicated nature—economics, general national policy and administration—are somehow out of their realm of thought, as being too complex and deserving of more mature consideration.

* * *

The thought that students are incapable of intelligent action in these areas has been fostered upon them by the adult world and the less interested segments of their fellow studentry. On one side students who are eager to involve themselves in matters of great concern are attacked as "immature" —parents tell them, "You have to finish your education, then you can start thinking about those things" —and on the other side, attacked as "egghead" or "bleeding heart."

Interested students. impressed by the cynical "wisdom," of their parents and fellows, often go to great lengths to be "responsible." Student groups, particularly of the national variety (YRC, YDC, etc) attempt to pattern their actions after those of their elders, afraid to make new inroads in any direction.

Local student governments are set up with all the paraphernalia of the real thing—president and vice-president, legislative body and a court system. But often they are given no real power. Officers go through the motions of passing worthless bills and making meaningless statements and holding empty elections. But any substantial action is avoided as "premature" or "unwise at this stage in our careers" or simply as "immature."

Student groups which have been called "irresponsible," then often make the mistake of going out of their way to prove their so-called responsibility by staying quiet, by remaining inactive. These students become, not responsible, but afraid; not mature, but stagnant.

Students must run the risk of being called immature and irresponsible by their elders and receiving nothing but snickers from their vegetable-mentality peers. Students are capable of intelligent decisions on issues of more complex nature than HUAC, peace movements, and sit-ins, and should exercise their intelligence. (jc)

'Germans'

Time was when the kids in North Carolina High Schools heard great things about the formal social festivities of a "Germans" Weekend. Time was when practically everyone in the state knew about the name bands and performers that came to Chapel Hill to take part in the gala occasions.

The festivities were in fact so formal and special that the horrible tradition of "importing" special girls became the accepted tradition. If a sweetie at WC or some swell place like Bradford could hold more liquor than the Carolina coed, well by all means she was the girl for a weekend as big as "Germans."

The concerts were purported to be truly good entertainment. The musicians performing took pride in being asked to come before the Germans Club audiences. Practically no band or indivdual performer was too "big" to be secured for the seasonal occasions. Bids were expensive, but very few resented paying what was asked for the top-notch performances.

The dances, too, were elaborate affairs. Dress being formal, an air of southern social grandeur prevailed for a while.

Of course it cost a bit of money to clean the tux, or rent one, if that was necessary. And, of course, the gymnasium wasn't overwhelmingly elegant. While, certainly, it got rather hot with all those people dancing around. And surely, everyone recognized that nobody could do those really terrific new dances in formal dress.

In short, since all the really "good" parties and all the really "swell" dances were going on elsewhere, why bother going to any sticky formal affair? Why bother having anymore sticky formal affairs?

Let's have those really bopping guys that do that really swell song on the jukebox come on down here to Chapel Hill. Then we can all go drink cases of beer, and have a wild time. (cw)

Racial Bars At W. Forest

"It's a great day for Wake Forest."

These were the sentiments of one of the members of the Board of Trustees after last Friday's decision to desegregate the College's undergraduate facilities. They also reflect the Old Gold and Black's reaction to the move and should represent the feeling of everyone connected with Wake Forest, students, faculty, and administration alike.

By their action, the Trustees have unequivocally and, we hope, permanently placed Wake Forest on a solid foundation of liberal, freethinking, and progressive higher education, a foundation upon which the College can grow and prosper in our dynamic and challenging age.

No longer will we be compelled to live under the shadow of segregation. No longer will Wake Forest students participating in sit-ins be met with cries of "clean up your own backyard first." No longer must we admit to being a Christian college which does not accept fully the principles upon which it was founded.

The complete desegregation of the College is perhaps the single most important step which could have been taken to consummate our pride in and respect for Wake Forest. For lifting the College from the mire of outmoded tradition and prejudice and placing it in a free and ubiased context of leadership, we extend to the Trustees our sincere gratitude, and our hearty congratulations for a job well done.

The struggle to integrate has been an intense one, but, all things considered, it has not been an extended one, and we are thankful that action has been taken in time for it to be meaningful. Though there may have been some slight mention of it earlier, the fight for integration really began at the start of the 1958-59 school year, when two Negro applicants to the College were turned down because the Board of Trustees had not authorized the College to admit Negroes.

Although the Director of Admissions said that the applicants were not qualified to come to Wake Forest even had they not been Negroes, the segregation policies of the College were made quite clear. The disclosure of these policies prompted Jerry Matherly, then editor of the Student magazine, to firmly advocate the immediate integration of the College. In an editorial in the October, 1958 issue, Matherly commented:

"Wake Forest College, if it is to continue to call itself an intellectual and Christian center for education, must integrate . . . it must admit any qualified applicant regardless of anything so irrelevant and unimportant as the color of the applicant's skin . . ."

The following year, ten Wake Forest students were arrested for participating in a sit-in demonstration in Winston-Salem, and segregation of the College was again attacked. Meanwhile, the Baptist State Convention had stated and restated its opposition to segregation in its related colleges.

Last year, the first forward steps were taken when the faculty recommended that the racial bars be dropped and African Edward Reynolds be admitted to the College The Trustees did not follow through all the way on the proposal, but they did direct the desegregation of the graduate schools and the summer and evening facilities.

The years of struggle have now culminated in the complete destruction of the racial bars to admission, both of Africans and of all qualified applicants "regardless of any thing so irrelevant and unimportant" as the color of their skin.

Momentous though the decision is for Wake Forest, there are in it implications which transcend the College and become important steps in the movement toward civil liberties and human dignity. By recognizing the equality of all races, the College has added its voice to the ever-growing and irrestible chorus which will eventually overwhelm and silence the irrational and feeble whelpings of the bigoted and the narrowminded.

We go still further and contend that by helping to reduce the amount of prejudice in the Unite States, Wake Forest has made a considerable contribution to the image of democracy in the newly-emerging countries of the world, especially Africa, and has struck a vital blow on behalf of the entire free world.

Letters To The Editor

Smith Complains Of 'Injustice'

To the Eeditors:

My two roommates and I live in an apartment at 44 Barclay Road which we rent from the Kutz Realty Company for 125.00 dollars a month. I believe this is an exorbitant price for three bedrooms, a bath, a living room, and a kitchen. It is a reflection, however, of the way the students are taken advantage of by the businessmen of Chapel Hill.

This letter though concerns a more specific instance of the high and outragous prices charged to students. Our lease provides that we are responsible for the mowing of the lawn and in accordance with that lease we were making preparations to mow the lawn the first of the week. But while we were away this past weekend, Mr. Kutz without so much as notifying us had the lawn mowed on his own accord. For this "service" he is attempting to charge us $10.00—$4.50 for the labor for two men who spent a little over an hour on the lawn and $5.50 for the rent of a power mower which was rented from Mr. Kutz himself. This price to say the least is ridiculous.

I believe this is an injustice and an injustice which I hope shows the need for the repeal of the Umstead Act which prevents the action of the University in such matters because of its prohibition of the University interfering in private business and an injustice which shows the need for student action to correct the abuses of the businessmen of Chapel Hill upon students. Action in respect to housing has already been taken by a committee headed by Dean Charles Henderson. I hope this incident shows the need for such action and for future action both by the administration and student government.

Silent Sam Never Fired

To the Editors:

Silent Sam has never shot his gun . . . The Old Well has dried up . . . The Davie Poplar almost was removed from the campus . . . about the only tradition on the UNC campus is the Arboretum, and that may be pruned.

We do not have the "Tecumseh" of Navy, or some such. Tradition on campus is shot all to Hell.

We regard Rameses as a "cute little goat" when we FIRST see him. No one have any nerve to try to get him back after Wake Forest students swiped him before the football game last fall. (He's back now.)

There "hasn't been a good panty raid in years." Carolina gentlemen campus-wide raid. All WE do is sit (Ha) don't have the guts to plan a on our backsides and think about how "nice" it would be.

Are we that stupid, or unintelligent? If so what are we doing here in the first place?

I propose that Student Government, which has a pretty good reputation everywhere except South Building, it seems, set up a Traditions Committee. The purpose of which is to further traditions that we have but ignore, and to set up new ones.

I would like to see the Old Well or some similar "hallowed ground" transformed into a place where a student could pitch coins at to get a good grade on a quiz or exam. Of course a minimum amount of studying would be necessary.

There are a number of other ideas that have been advanced as to other traditions. At Orientation, there could be a midnight raid by counselors, dressed in hoods, and take all the freshmen to Kenan Stadium for instructions about Carolina traditions.

The problems remain. If this campus and the student body wants anything it has to do it itself. It will take lots of hard work, but it can be done.

It's up to each individual student, whether he wants a school or a university. Do you want to make this a better place to study, work, and even have a little fun?

It's up to you.

Music Dept.; Working Hard

To the Editors:

Maybe the UNC music department hasn't produced an yworld-renown composers or directors. However, geniuses are born, not made. The old cliche that talent is that which is in a man's power, but genius is that in whose power a man is, means that we can develop and perfect skills, but we have very little choice about turning out a genius or two. We have first to get hold of the genius.

There is much being said about colleges these days insisting on so much conformity, that they miss a lot of bets in discovering the genius of a creative person. What I haven't found out is how they go about distinguishing the genius from the oddball. Whatever the method that is adopted, it looks like we are going to take the chance that some of the long shots will pay off.

There is no rest for the weary in the field of education. As soon as we work out the system of College Board Exams, and high IQs, etc., along comes some one and says we have to discover the genius, who by all normal standards, might not be able to get in the back door of higher institutions of learning. I will be much interested in how they go about picking the genius out of the crowd, but I am glad I don't have to do it.

A buck private who is always out of step, no doubt is very exasperating to his sergeant. Maybe the private is just a creative person. Keeping time to the drummer at the head of the procession is not for him. Dr. Taylor Cole of Duke University, writing recently on the problem of identifying and sustaining creative talent says "We shall have to view the potentially creative person in the words of Thoreau: 'he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music he hears, however measured or far away.' "

New Left Disbanded

To the Editors:

It is with regret that we the undersigned members of the Executive Committee of the New Left announce the dissolution of that group. Ideological and programmatic differences have made it impossible for the organization to continue operation on its past basis. While we feel that the organization has made a worthwhile contribution to an intelligent discussion of political issues here at the University of North Carolina, we also feel that there are certain limits which any such organization cannot exceed and still hope to render useful service. It is because we feel that these limits have been approached that we are taking the present action.

We would like to express our appreciation to Nicholas Bateson for the many services he rendered during the time he served as chairman of the New Left.

Reactions By Wuamett

Pagans, Derby

Long ago there were great pagan festivals on the first day of May in which all the little pagans came out and danced around a maypole naked and then went off and had a great big orgy to celebrate the coming of spring. But that was before the world had become civilized.

Now we have the Sigma Chi Derby.

We still have the maypole, but it is a modernized horizontal maypole, and instead of dancing around it, we dance under it in that fabulously exotic contest called the limbo. And then we have little races, and throw mud pies, and crown a (get this now), we crown a Miss Modern Venus.

Now ask almost any sorority girl and she will tell you the Derby is a waste of time, but that's really not the issue. The pitiful thing is not that all those people go out to Kenan Stadium and waste an afternoon in a mock orgy. These people wouldn't know what to do at an orgy if it were staring them in the face.

What is the purpose of your little festival, Sigma Chi's? Why not have an orgy instead of just playing at it? Those obscene old pagans may not have had any souls, but by god, they could throw an orgy.

They didn't parade around in little black hats, they danced naked around the pole. And if they had been doing the limbo, they would have at least had a little rhythm, instead of clomping along to the sound of 'limbo, limbo limbo like me . . . And they would not have made any cute little comments like "Let's see how far those girls can go down." They would have known the answer. Or at least they would have found out before the day was over, since that was the major reason for the festival in the first place.

And what was the purpose of those signs saying "No strong drinks allowed?" Do they ease your consciences and make you believe you are having a clean-cut-fun-in-the-sun program?

Hell's bells, why don't you load up a truck full of beer and drive to Hogan's Lake and throw a "Maid in the shade" Party or something. But tradition must be preserved so I suppose the Derby will go on for another 18 years. For boys will be boys—especially if they are Carolina boys.

U.S., Tito In Common: Undemocratic

* * *

We must realize that Marshall Tito was acting in the best interests of the established form of government when he imprisoned the subversive Djilas. And let us not be fooled for Djilas is part of the international conspiracy which is seeking the truth and a better society of man. He is part of that group of intellectuals which is constantly questioning and criticising the society in which they live and trying to improve it.

* * *

The point is that whereas under ideal conditions Djilas should be able to say whatever he pleases, certain practical considerations, such as the cold war and the threat, both internal and external, of democracy, have necessitated that his freedom of speech be abridged.

The distribution of Djilas' book and his unrestricted travel through the country would have been a direct threat to the Yugoslav government. The changes he was advocating can be corectly characterized as radical and not in accord with those of the existing government. At this crucial point in history the Yugoslav people must present a united front. They must eliminate subversives such as Djilas.

There is even a greater point to be made. That is that if you substitute the House Committee on Un-American Activities for Marshall Tito, American for Yugoslav, and Barenblatt (a former social psychology teaching fellow at the University who was called before HUAC for Djilas in the preceding paragraphs, you will be reading some of the sorry words that some people have been mouthing in the United States. And yet we are supposedly an undemocratic dictatorship.

I think we should be concerned that the identical arguments and justifications are used by both countries.

WILL HOUSE GEOLOGY DEPT.;

Ground Broken For Mitchell

Named for the scientist and UNC professor who fell to his death in 1847 while exploring Black Mountain, later re-named Mount Mitchell, the new structure will house the Department of Geology.

Professor Roy Ingram dug the first spadeful of earth in ceremonies conducted at the site of the "sciences section" of the University, near the Divison of Health Affairs.

Mitchell Hall will be built next to the present H. V. P. Wilson Hall, the zoology building: and W. C. Coker Hall, the new botany building which is now in the process of construction.

Geology is now taught in the New East Building, a century-old structure next to Old East. The Department of Geology and Geography is in the building.

UNC Netters Top Deacons, Point To Miami Showdown

By LOUIS LEGUM

Tuning up for their big Friday showdown with the University of Miami, the North Carolina tennis team put away an 8-1 victory against Wake Forest yesterday afternoon on the varsity courts. The otherwise insignificant match clinched the seventh ACC championship in the last eight seasons for the Tar Heels of Coach Don Skakle and brought their record to 22-0, 34 wins over two years.

As has been their habit so far this year, the Carolina netters completely dominated the courts. In the singles, only 25 games and no sets went to the visiting Deacons. The "Big Five," minus Bitsy Harrison, experienced no real trouble, although at times it was apparent that they were looking forward to the Miami encounter.

At number one, Wake's Frank Fishburne displayed a great deal of pluck and spirit in ultimately becoming George Sokol's twenty-second consecutive victim of the season. Fishburne fought a particularly strong first set, carrying the steady Sokol to a 6-4 score. However, the last set went a little easier for the Tar Heel sophomore, as he handily won, 6-1.

Basketball player Paul Caldwell of Wake also carried a determined game against Keith Stoneman, but the Carolina captain settled down to triumph 6-4, 6-2. The other singles were finished quickly. Ted Hoehn zipped through the Demon Deacons' Tom Williams by 6-0, 6-2, and Charlie "Chip" Shaffer romped over Dick Mills, 6-4, 6-3. On the last two courts, Dave Morgan took Andy Terrell, 6-0, 6-1, in the easiest match of the day, and Garland Carlton was a 6-4, 6-0 winner over Bill Hilton.

Fishburne and Hilton combined to take Wake's only point of the day with a close 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Carlton and Stan Cocke. In the other doubles, Kirby Jones and Sam Applegate beat Caldwell and Terrell, 6-1, 6-1, while George Zimmerman and Rich Henderson defeated Mills and Williams by a 6-0, 6-1 count.

Coed Tennis Day Will Be Held Here Saturday

The UNC Women's Athletic Association will host the annual Tennis Day, an all-day event with straight elimination tournaments in both singles and doubles, this Saturday.

The Tennis Day has been held with great success for the past four years with the best women's collegiate tennis in the state being displayed.

Registration will be in the gym from 9 to 10 a.m., tennis will be played until noon, and following a two-hour lunch break, the tournaments will be completed.

This year the participating colleges will be Duke, High Point, Queens, Appalachian, Wake Forest, Salem and UNC.

Skakle's Men Smash State

North Carolina State was UNC's 33rd straight tennis victim Tuesday as the Tar Heels rolled to an 8-1 decision at Raleigh.

The summary:

George Sokol (UNC) def. Mushtaq Saigal (NCS) 6-2, 6-4. Keith Stoneman (UNC) def. Jim Hart (NCS) 6-1, 6-1. Bitsy Harrison (UNC) def. Jim Emmons (NCS) 6-1, 6-3. Ted Hoehn (UNC) def. Walt Brown (NCS) 6-0, 6-1. Charlie Shaffer (UNC) def. Doug Cooper (NCS) 6-1, 6-2. Dave Morgan (UNC) def. Chuck Hyatt (NCS) 6-0, 6-1.

Saigal and Hart (NCS) def. Stan Cocke and Garland Carlton (UNC) 9-7, 2-6, 10-8. Kirby Jones and George Zimmerman (UNC). def. Emmons and Hyatt (NCS) 6-4, 5-7, 6-2. Sam Applegate and Rich Henderson (UNC) def. Cooper and Jim Lore (NCS) 6-3, 6-3. UNC—8; NCS—1.

Legislators Ask Withdrawal Of Fraternity 80 Pct. Rule

Approve Dellinger For Honor Council

By HARRY DeLUNG

Student Legislature called for the withdrawal of the 80% rule by unanimous vote last night. The resolution also supports the Interfraternity Council's plan to improve fraternity scholarship.

The resolution was introduced last week by Bob Jones (Ind.), Larry McDevitt (UP), Rufus Edminsten (SP), and John McMillan (UP). Jim Dillashaw, President of the IFC, answered questions about his organization's plans.

Walter Dellinger's appointment to Chairman of the men's honor council was approved by an overwhelming vote. Speaking in protest to the appointment were Dave Williams (SP, TM III) and Arthur Hayes (SP, DM IV).

Action was postponed on the resolution for campus bus service.

The resolution supporting the IFC action attacks the 80% rule for ignoring the individual's academic responsibilty and placing the financial burden of prohibited rush on the members who made a 2.0 average. It commends the IFC's action which will deactiviate members who do not make their grades.

Campus bus transportation is urged for the outlying areas of Victory Village, the medical complex, and Craige and Ehringhaus dorms.

The resolution also points out the need for service to the Woman's College in Greensboro to "partially solve" the campus social problem.

FRIDAY & SATURDAY

Senior Days Set Next Week

Free prizes, free entertainment and free class cuts for seniors will highlight Thursday and Friday of next week which have been officially designated as "Senior Days," class secretary Kathy Fulenwider announced yesterday.

Thursday's senior activities will begin with a class meeting at 10:30, when Mr. and Miss Alumni will be chosen, permanent class officers elected, graduation procedures explained and tickets for prizes given away.

Doug Clark's combo will play at a party Thursday afternoon and night at the Patio. The party will run from 2-11 and will be exclusively for seniors. Cash prizes and activity prizes will be awarded then, and food and beer will be served at reduced rates. Reduced rates will also be available at Major League Lanes, with free shoes provied.

Friday will be barefoot day for the seniors, although free class cuts will not be given. The day's activities will be concluded with a party at Hoenig's Cabin that will be open to seniors and dates.

Cosmo Picnic

The annual Cosmopolitan picnic will be held at Hogan's Lake Saturday. Price $.35. Cars will be leaving from Y-Court at 1:45.

Legum New Yack Head

The Publications Board yesterday selected Louis Legum, a junior from Norfolk, Virginia, as editor of the 1962-1963 Yackety Yack.

Legum has served on the staff of the Daily Tar Heel, the Yackety Yack staff, and as manager of the tennis team.

"In the Yack next year, I plan to show more dorm life, and in a better way," Legum said. "I also plan to show the fine academic record of this university and the fine student body we have, and not so much of the party side of life here."

Legum said that he also planned to depict the changing face of Carolina by picturing the "new look" in campus buildings.

IFC To Sponsor Five Jazz Groups At GM

Five area bands will play at the IFC's jazz festival tomorrow afternoon from 2:30-5 on the lawn in front of Graham Memorial. The concert is free and open to the public.

The concert will open with the Duke Ambassadors, who last year cut an LP record called "Beelzebub's Big Band." The 15-piece band is one of the oldest college bands in the nation and is under the leadership of Charlie Culbreath, who suggested the festival to the IFC.

"There should be a lot of interest in this concert," Culbreath said yesterday. "This area has a lot more talent than most areas of the South. These five groups have played a lot of dance music around here, but this will give them the chance to play the type of music they really do well."

Another group from Duke will be the Harlequins, a singing group whose style resembles that of the Four Freshmen. This eight-man group last week recorded their first album, entitled "The Harlequins."

The Frank Bennett Quartet, a group that has played in this area for a long time, will feature piano, drums, bass and tenor sax. Another quartet, the jazz Journeymen, will play with guitar, piano, bass and drums.

Rounding out the quintet of jazz groups will be the Bob Harrison Orchestra, a Raleigh group.

Barth To Give Only 1 Wesley Talk Tonite

Only one public Wesley lecture will be given tonight by Dr. Marcus Barth due to the presence in this country of his father Karl Barth, a European theologian who was recently featured in Time magaine's cover story.

Barth will also meet with chap the sanctuary of the University Methodist Church on "The Bible: The Authority of a Charter of Liberty."

Bartha will also meet with chaplains associated with the community of Lay Scholars (from Wake Forest, Duke, N.C. State, and East Sarolina College) Saturday morning and give a lecture to students in the Community of Lay Scholars Saturday afternoon before flying back to Princeton, where his father has been lecturing.

The speaker's monumental work written in German is "Baptism—A Sacrament?" His first full-length book in English, "The Broken Wall," reveals his "broad scholarship, spiritual insight and theological incisiveness."

Educated in universities in Switzerland, Scotland and Germany, he majored in New Testament and received his doctorate from the University of Goettingen in Germany in 1947.

He was Parish Minister of the Evangelical Reformed Church from 1940-53 in Bubendorf, Baelland, Switzerland and was visiting professor of New Testament at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Dubuque, Iowa from 1953-56.

Husband & Wife Publish Volumes Simultaneously

A husband-and-wife team, here, both of them economists, are the authors of books which have received simultaneous publication.

Dr. Clifton H. Kreps Jr., Wachovia professor of Banking at UNC, is the author of "Money, Banking, and Monetary Policy," just published by the Ronald Press of New York City.

His wife, Juanita Morris Kreps, now teaching at Woman's College in Greensboro, is co-author of "Principles of Economics," published by Holt, Rinehart, and Winston.

Dr. Kreps' 600-page textbook is designed to afford the reader a thorough understanding of the national economic significance of monetary and banking policy. Dr. Kreps 'discusses the concept of money, the problem of monetary standards, the structure of commercial banking, central banking as represented by the Federal Reserve System, and other aspects of the monetary system.

Discussions Begin Model Dorm Project

A discussion group moderated by Dr. Ransom Taylor in Ruffin dorm Wednesday night was the first of a series of discussions that are a part of an experimental IDC "model dorm" plan that will be carried out in Ruffin during the coming year.

Ruffin was chosen by the IDC for this plan after its residents succeeded in reversing an administration decision that would have made Ruffin an all-freshman dorm next year.

Besides the discussion groups, the dorm plans to hold parties with Woman's College dorms, receptions in connection with football weekends, and pizza parties whenever possible.

Voluntary Compliance

All residents of Ruffin will sign an agreement to the effect that they will abide by all IDC and dormitory regulations and voluntarily move out if the dorm residents or officers feel it in the interest of the dorm.

As an attempt to stimulate participation in student government the dorm will try to place a resident on the student legislature, urge residents to work on student government committees and seek a 100% turnout at all elections.

Dorm Plans

To build dormitory spirit Ruffin plans to continue publication of a dorm newspaper, to purchase space in the Yack if possible, to obtain physical improvement of the dorm, to strive for 100% participation in Intramurals, to buy dorm intramural jerseys, and to foster interdorm competitions.

The purpose of the entire plan is to promote a more fraternal atmosphere between dorm residents and to increase their participation in campus life.

Seniors

Caps and gowns may be ordered for the remainder of this week at the supply counter at Y-Court. Seniors attending graduation exercises should place orders immediately.

Value Of College Is Learning To Think Prof Says

The value of a college education "is not in what you learn, but is learning how to learn."

These were the words of Dr. Ransom Taylor of the Germanic Languages department as he moderated a discussion group in Ruffin dorm Wednesday night.

"The purpose of a liberal education," said Taylor, "is not to teach people to perform some skill. Its value," he continued, "remains in its cumulative effect. And this is something you can't measure until you're 25 or 30 years old or older."

Decision Of Individual

Taylor agreed with the group that college students face many conflicts in taking required courses they feel will benefit them little, if at all. And there are conflicts between classroom activities and extra-curriculars.

"It depends on what you want," he said. And the decision as to what is wanted is entirely up to the individual student. But, he added, "you'll never get anything out of a course except what you put into it."

The student, Taylor continued, "must assess his capabilities" and plan his life, in school or out, accordingly. "For everything you want you must give up something in order to have it."

Grades

Concerning the role of grades in this problem, Taylor suggested that they shouldn't be any part of teaching. "Teaching," he said, "is an exchange between minds and the only real teacher is experience and intelligent thought about experience."

Film Society Slates 2 Special Programs

Two programs of special-interest films will be presented by the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society in Carroll Hall Sunday and Monday nights.

Sunday's program, not included in the Film Society's regular spring series, is a color feature film on the artist generally considered to be the greatest of the Twentieth Century, Pablo Picasso. Directed by Lucianno Emmer of Italy, an international prize-winner of films on art, "Pablo Picasso" is a filmed biography of the revolutionary artist and his paintings from his youth in Spain to the present. Picasso collaborated in writing the scenario of the film and in its production, and the film includes sequences of him at work in his French villa.

Accompanying the Picasso feature will be a new John Hubley cartoon, "Destination Magoo," and UN's short on another Spaniard in exile, "Pablo Casals Breaks His Journey," on Casals' appearance at the United Nations.

In order that as many persons as possible may see these films, there will be complete showings at 7:30 and again at 9:30 Sunday night. Special reservations are available from Film Society Committee members and at the YWCA.

On Monday night at 8, the Society's regular series continues with the showing of F. W. Murnau's "Sunrise," starring Janet Gaynor, George O'Brien, Margaret Livingstone, Bodil Rosing and J. Farrell Macdonald. Shot at Fox in 1927, "Sunrise" is considered by many critics as the most completely poetic film ever made in Hollywood.

Though produced as a silent picture, the print has a sound music track. Carl Mayer's scenario, based on Hermann Sudermann's "A Trip to Tilsit," was circulated in Hollywood as a model of structure and continuity.

Alternative To Rule

"The purpose of this rule was to inform the fraternities that these were the conditions for their remaining on campus."

The "rule" being spoken about was the oft-commented upon 80% rule. The speaker in this instance was a member of the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities. The statement was made in reply to the suggestion that perhaps the Faculty Council had passed the 80% ruling in order to increase fraternity concern for academic performance.

As we have pointed out before, no one seems to know why the rule was put into effect. And it would seem that no one knows what the acceptable "possible alternatives" are. It would seem that the fraternal system, in effect the IFC, was put into a position that demands much scurrying about to please the "powers that be."

And the scratching around for acceptable alternatives has largely gone on without anyone really knowing what the Faculty Council wants. Judging from the above statement, "The purpose of this rule . . ." they weren't exclusively concerned with scholastic achievement. In fact, they seemed to be more concerned with the presence of fraternities on the Carolina campus.

However, the elimination of fraternities from our fair campus, absurd possibility that it is, would not seem justified by their not-so-substandard academic performances of recent years.

So, while laboring in the fog of uncertainty, we would submit that the end desired—the most acceptable "possible alernative" — appears to be the establishment of deferred rush. Gathering from the general gist of faculty-student conferences, all sides agree that this is desirable, if in fact not absolutely necessary.

And as the problems have been hashed over, the possibility, even though perhaps not originally intended, of placing the responsibility for poor academic performance on the shoulders of the individual rather than on the "house" has come to be of primary importance.

Everyone has been screaming about the gross unfairness of a ruling that punishes a group for the actions of an individual. The screamers have quite a good point. However, in many instances so many "individuals" are involved that in essence they constitute the "group." The "group" that complains about being unjustly held responsible for the actions of "individuals."

However, we do not wish, at this time, to argue that point. It is true that some individuals do suffer unjustly for the poor performances of other individuals.

What we would like to point out at this time is that the concentration of earnest efforts on the protection of the groups, however justified, has taken too much concentration away from the establishment of a sorely needed realistic program of deferred rushing.

We would like to see the IFC head its effective efforts in that direction. (cw)

Justice

Last year John Brown, Jr. was convicted of a $137 armed robbery of a beer depot in Louisville, Ky

Robert Jones, Jr. was convicted of a $200 armed robbery of a coal company, also in Louisville.

Both have been sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Two other men were convicted of the coal company robbery, but they testified for the state and received 8 and 10-year sentences.

The prosecuting attorney who presented the state's case against Robert Jones had said in public the year before, "The next time someone comes before me on an armed robbery charge, he is going to get the death sentence."

Jones is a Negro in Kentucky.

* * *

The other man on death row, John Brown, was convicted with his brother of the beer depot robbery, in which nobody was hurt physically or threatened with death. He has a substantial prison record against him.

Of his conviction, the Louisville Courier-Journal said, "It seems to us unwarranted punishment, considering the fact that no one was harmed in the robbery. It also sets a questionable precedent. Henceforth, a robber may feel less compunction about shooting his victim if he feels he is going to get the chair in any event."

* * *

But justice moves on, oblivious to these protests.

The domain of capital punishment is widened in a time when all other civilized nations, and uncivilized nations, are restricting or eliminating its use.

And in Louisville, in the United States, justice will soon kill John Brown, Jr. and Robert Jones, Jr. (jc)

Catholics And Integration

Professor-novelist John Ehle will testify to Alan Goldsmith's writing talent. His friends will testify to his personability and level-headedness. And any knowledgeable person who read his column (in Wednesday's DTH) will testify to his humanness.

In writing that article, I think Alan let his emotions run away with his reason.

Not that I'm a Catholic fanatic riled by Alan's perhaps heretical views, although I may be one of those "professional freedom of thought boys." (I'd have to see his definition to be sure.)

I just don't like to have inaccurate statements foisted off on me as facts. And in this case, as best I can determine, that's just what happened.

Those three New Orleans segregationists were not excommunicated for their views, but for actively opposing the Roman Catholic Church's authority as expressed in Archbishop Joseph Rummel's order to integrate the schools of the parish.

Further, Archbishop Rummel began telling his parishioners some 10 years ago that integration was coming, but that prudence dictated the present segregated situation continue for the time being. He is quoted as saying the parochial schools in his area would be integrated when the public schools were.

So he did not just pull the decree to integrate out of his hat and begin excommunicating people who "couldn't change their line of thinking" to coincide with his.

And, while I agree that in many ways "the terrible fallacy of the Crusades lives on," as Alan says, I don't think it lives on in Alan's article.

For as I'm sure Alan realizes, there is a great deal of difference between murdering someone and merely thinking about murering him.

And although I'm not much of a logician, so I can't be sure of it, I think Alan's argument comes down to this: you shouldn't punish someone for breaking the law.

And I know Alan doesn't believe in that.

I think he just doesn't like the law. But what he ought to champion, it seems to me, is changing the law, not advocating its violation, as he unwittingly seems to do in his article.

Reserves:

Americans Unprepared

Assistant Secretary of Defense Carlisle R. Runge has raised a serious question about the value of the six-month active training program for military reservists. When the Army sought trained men to bring its Reserve units up to full strength, Mr. Runge said, it could not find an adequate number among those who had had only six months of continuous training. From a pool of 54,000 "six-monthers" the Army could draw only 14,573 men with the skills required for placement in the mobilized reserve. No wonder Representative Hebert responded that this is an indictment of the six-month training program.

As a result of this paucity of preparedness among the six-month men, the Army found it necessary to recall men who had served two or three years on active duty. This was obviously unfair to the regulars, and it appears to explain a good deal of the grousing which accompanied the mobilization of Reservists and National Guardsmen becuse of the Berlin crisis.

Since young men have been permitted to join the Reserves for only six months of active duty, with subsequent weekly drilling and summer maneuvers, as an alternative to being drafted for two years, there ought to be some reasonable relationship between the preparedness of the two groups for actual military service when necessary.

But if nearly three fourths of the men taking the shorter period of continuous training are not prepared for mobilization as "fillers," some sharp adjustments would seem to be in order.

Communist Position

Peace Corps: 'Fairytale'

—Reprinted from the World Student News of April, monthly publication of the International Union of Students, the internatioal Communist student organization with headquarters in Czechoslovakia. The article was titled "Jack Fairytales."

Once upon a time there was a gauche American girl called Margery Michelmore who joined the "Peace Corps" and went to Nigeria.

At about the same time, an American boy called Charles Kamen also joined the "Peace Corps," but he didn't go anywhere. He just went home . . .

The story behind them is the real fairytale. But Mr. John F. Kennedy, U. S. President, hasn't found many people ready to believe it.

Margery Michelmore joined the Peace Corps, went through a hasty indoctrination course and left for Africa following an "academic and statistical briefing," as she said later on. However, when she got there she saw what things were really like. Apparently it was so terrifying different from the "American way of life" that she sent home a postcard slandering Nigeria and its people which, unfortunately for her, fell into the hands of Nigerian students. The campaign that followed forced Margery to leave Nigeria and proved to the whole world that the fears expressed on Peace Corps were justified.

Charles Kamen, 21 years old, a graduate in sociology and anthropology, was president of the Student Council at Brandeis University. He applied for the Peace Corps with the right recommendations and obtained high marks in the entrance exam. He was accepted as a trainee and his picture appeared in the papers as part of the propaganda drive of the Kennedy administration to induce more young Americans to join.

Unfortunately, on seeing it, some Miami Rotarians remembered that during the showing of the notorious McCarthy film "Operation Abolition"—produced by the House Un-American Activities Committee against San Francisco students who dared to demonstrate against Committee hearings in their city—Charles Kamen made the big mistake of clapping and laughing at the wrong places during the film. Poor Charles.

A whole campaign of vituperation was launched against him, an anti-Kamen Committee was organized and a peition was circulated asking that Kamen's mother, who happens to be a school teacher, be fired. Some members of the U. S. Senate even became "interested in the matter.

The neo-fascist organizations in the States began to lobby their highly-placed contacts. As a result, the U. S. Army refused the deferment usually accorded to Peace Corps members and Charles Kamen was finally dismissed from the new organization.

A statement was issued: "Like every volunteer in training, he will also be the subject of a full check by the FBI . . . The letters we have received ask for the dismissal of Mr. Kamen on the grounds that he is either UNSTABLE or a COMMUNIST." So much for Mr. Kamen.

These two incidents characterize the Peace Corps which has created such confusion, especially among students in the United States. In other countries, chiefly those of Africa, Latin America and Asia which have already been recipients of "glamorous", (new) U. S. policies, the Peace Corps, generally speaking, has been rejected especially by student and youth organizations.

The case of Charles Kamen proves conclusively that it is a political body, that it will be used as the long arm of the State Department, and as such, is to be strictly controlled by the FBI and CIA. Peace Corps trainees are required to know "Americanism", to be "politically reliable," and able to "provide a popular base for responsible American policies."

* * *

. . . Shriver's marriage to Kennedy's sister cost $100,000 — which does not quite fit in with the demands for sacrifices he usually makes on his subordinates . . . He was also one of the founders of the "America First" branch at Yale University. "America First" was one of the most active pro-Fascist and pro-Axis organizations before the Second World War.

(This magazine is circulated to the student governments of every major University in Africa, Asia, Latin America, Europe and the Unis is in competition with the Internais in competition with the International Student Conference, of which the USNSA is a member.)

Bus Conversation—2

(There was a factual error in my column of Saturday entitled "Bus Conversation." From all available evidence there were no UNC Kappa Sigs on the bus last Wednesday. And it is partly because of this that this column is written. The column would have appeared Tuesday, however, in order to allow the Kappa Sigs equal space at the same time on the editorial page, the editors and myself had to wait until the Kappa Sig leadership returned from a lacrosse trip early this week.)

* * *

Organized anger is an old phenomenon. Having it directed my way is not a new thing, but you never quite get used to it.

The latest incident concerns a column written Saturday about the vapid conversation of four vapid indiviuals on a bus returning from Easter vacation.

Three of the participants were identified in the article as Kappa Sigmas here, and during the weekend I was confronted with articulately irate members of that fraternity house on a number of occasions.

The showdown came in a late Sunday night meeting in which I was threatened with the collective wrath of Dean Long, Senator Estes Kefauver, and Hoagy Carmichael, although I'm not sure what the latter could do except compose an evil song.

When things cooled down a bit, however, they had substance to their gripe. They had polled the entire brotherhood and found none returning on a bus from High Point to Chapel Hill. And in so doing they missed the point of the article.

"Sure converstions like that go on in our fraternity house in Chapel Hill, and they go on in every other house here also." Kappa Sig President Duff Green said himself Sunday. An that IS the point.

The fact that three were or were not Kappa Sigs is somewhat irrelevant. Factul errors are never right, and in this case a particular fraternity's feelings were unjustly hurt.

* * *

But in a broader sense, it doesn't matter whether they were Kappa Sigs, Betas, Dekes, or any other particular denomination. This column wasn't written to slam a particular fraternity or even the fraternity system in general.

The conversation was a real one. It occurred in a particular place at a particular time, but in reality it is one of hundreds of conversations that go on every day all over the campus.

They occur in more organized fashion in the fraternities, and is a slightly more dispersed fashion in the dorms, but they are there, they're real, and they occupy a good portion of some students' waking hours.

They are a stark testament to the intellectual vacuousness, the lack of concern, the failure to gain or attempt to gain what can be received from a university and the inability of students in all parts of the campus to exert the slightest effort towards any sort of creative participation in their society.

But they are not alone. The students who sit for hours in Harry's or Bryon's and talk on a higher intellectual level of their neurosis, the sickness of society, the miserableness of the University, and their own failures to get recognized or do something "really creative," are as much to blame.

It matters little whether the cast of characters are expressing their cumulative ignorance in the dormitories and fraternities or their collective impotence in Harry's or Byron's.

The fact that one tries to escape via avoidance, phantasy, mundane conversation, and activities, while the other surrenders and moans does not change the reality that there is a world outside the fraternity house, Harry's, or the dormitory room, and that whether the student here is coming to grips with it or not, it is coming to grips with him.

The world contains within it the glorious prospect of man's realizing a dream of the full and happy life, of control over his environment, and of society built on peace, freedom, understanding and harmony in which each person can make for himself a self-satisfying creative existence.

It is also a world in which man may annihilate himself, in which freedoms may be restricted, and in which conditions may be created in which he has no choice but to live in a twilight of sterility and unhappiness.

* * *

Decisions are being made every day by people all over the world which vitally affect each individual's future. Some of these decisions will be almost irreversible, some are subject to change, but all are occurring without the participation of the students here and more often than not without their knowlege.

And here of all places there are the resources in which students can come to grips with their environment. Here is the possibility of a community where responsibility, forthright participation can become the rule rather than the exception. And here the individual student may find for himself the key to a richer fulfillment of his own person.

The world is in a bad state now. It is probably going to get worse before it gets better, but it may never get better unless the people here and in colleges throughout the nation begin to use their minds instead of their androgens an estrogens. It will never improve unless the leadership potential that is here makes use of the talent that they have.

* * *

But, they probably won't.

Even Sunday on Graham Memorial's front lawn 25 well-dressed Carolina Gentlemen enacted another chapter in the never ending spectacle of wasted time in Chapel Hill.

One was up in a tree, playing a treed cat with sound accompaniment. Another was imitating a dog in the art of relieving himself against a tree while most of the rest were making appropriate animal - like noises.

There is another case of a fraternity recently which became annoyed with two of their pledges. They laid both out on the front lawn, spread one with jelly, and another with peanut butter and made a simulated sandwich.

It takes imagination to pull a prank like that. If only just some of that imagination were put to creative use, the world would be a better place to live in.

Perhaps revelations will come sometime. Perhaps people will begin to see themselves as others see them. Perhaps they will begin to see the world as it is and the tremendous task it places on all of us to make it decent haven for humanity.

Perhaps all this will come. But it, unfortunately, won't be soon.

Miami Risks Record Win Streak

By Louis Legum

Friday, May 4. This is a date that Coach Don Skakle's undefeated netters have pointed to for a long time. The reason is what many believe to be the most significant intercollegiate tennis match east of the Mississippi in the past ten years.

The opponent is the University of Miami and its all-time national record of 105 consecutive victries. All this happens this afternoon on the varsity courts at 2:00 p.m.

The Tar Heels, unawed by the Hurricanes' impressive statistics, have been busy over the past two seasons compiling their own little streak which currently reaches 34. They wrapped up their fifth straight ACC crown Wednesday against Wake Forest, bringing this year's record to 22-0.

Skakle believes that his ambitious team is ready for Miami. "Everyone has been playing very well lately, and the morale and spirit of my boys have been just great. Although I believe our team has better balance and depth, we have to remember that Miami is one of the best teams in the country. Today is all going to depend upon how the shots fall. It's going to be a tough, close match all the way, and the spectators are going to be treated to some spectacular tennis."

Carolina's hopes rest principally upon the success of the "Big Five." George Sokol (22-0) will probably go against UM's Red Mandelstam in the feature contest of the day. The Carolina soph plays a game of consistent, pounding groundstroke shots that is much like Mandelstam's court tactics.

Ted Hoehn and Charlie Shaffer both held 20-1 records so far in their initial campaigns, while Captain Keith Stoneman and Bitsy Harrison are enjoying 19-2 and 16-2 seasons, respectively. The sixth singles player is most likely to be Dave Morgan (9-5) or Garland Carlton (6-1). Stan Cocke may see some action in the doubles.

In the past few days, there has been an unusual amount of activity around the courts. The seating capacity has been increased from 600 to well over 2,500, and a press box has been erected for visiting writers. Director of Athletics Chuck Erickson has announced that the gates will open at 1:00 p.m. and there will be a $1.00 admission charge. Students must bring ID cards to be admitted free.

By LOUIS LEGUM

The University of Miami has a tennis team that is unaccustomed to losing. Since 1949 the Hurricane netters have built up an extraordinary record of 233 wins and only two defeats. Their 105 consecutive victories in a row dating back to 1957 is the national intercollegiate record.

Dale Lewis, the Miami coach, hasn't tasted defeat since he arrived from the University of Indiana five years ago.

The 1962 Miami squad is regarded by Lewis as "potentially my best team ever." Going into its last match of the season against Carolina, the Hurricane has rolled over 16 opponents decisively, including such strong eastern powers as Princeton and Yale.

Like UNC Coach Don Skakle, Lewis has a youthful team, void of any seniors through the seventh position. However, Miami is not without a great deal of experience. The captain, 6-foot, 3-inch John Karabasz from Coral Gables, Fla., is ranked as the number 30 men's basz has a strong nerve and big player in the United States. Kara-Shackleford, a product of Danville, Va. A sophomore, too, he has perplexed his opponents with an unorthodox style of play that features everything from spin and drop shots to crisp volleying and backline lobs.

game, and has lost only one match this year.

Miami's greatest asset, though, is probably a pair of sophomores from Johannesburg, South Africa. Rod Mandelstam, a dark-haired counterpart of Carolina's George Sokol, has come on in the final stages of the year to grab the number one position from Karabasz. Using a strong backcourt game with smoothly-paced strokes, the 5-9 South African counts among his triumphs a brilliant victory over United States Davis Cupper Whitney Reed and the title of one-time Wimbledon juniors champion.

John Hammill, Lewis' other recruit from across the Atlantic, also boasts excellent credentials. The 6-1 soph has held the title of junior champion of South Africa, and like Mandelstam, has not lost a match this season. His big serve and forceful net game has teamed with Mandelstam's versatile shots to form what is regarded as perhaps the best doubles combination in intercollegiate tennis today.

Hammill and Mandelstam have been playing together since they were 10 years old.

The other undefeated member of the Miami squad is colorful C. W. Hugh Quinn and Joe Schwartz are the fifth and sixth court players. Junior Quinn, from Philadelphia, Pa., lost his first match of the year this past Tuesday against the University of Georgia. Schwartz, a second-year man who comes from Miami Beach, has been reached but twice this year for a loss.

Despite the abundance of talent to work with, Coach Lewis is very apprehensive about meeting North Carolina this afternoon.

BITSY HARRISON, 6-5 sophomore from Richmond, Va., is one of four second-year sparklers who will play today for Coach Don Skakle's tennis team. Harrison has 16-2 mark for the unbeaten Tar Heels.

...for American sophomores and juniors. But which year is best? That's up to you—and your advisors.

Institute programs offer sophomores the opportunity to broaden their background in general studies and the liberal arts, juniors the opportunity to specialize among the liberal arts.

VIENNA Attend English- or German-taught liberal arts courses. Discover European culture at its roots by living in a Viennese home. Visit nine European countries on three field-study trips.

Prerequisites: you must be a sophomore or junior and have a C-plus average (no language prerequisite). European Year Fee: $2,230.

PARIS Attend French-taught classes. Investigate France and the Benelux countries on a field-study trip. Live in a Parisian home.

Prerequisites: you must be a sophomore or junior; have one year of college French and a "B" average. Honors Program Fee: $2,475.

FREIBURG Attend German-taught liberal arts courses. Live in a German home. Be introduced to Western Germany, Switzerland and Italy on two field-study trips.

Prerequisites: you must be a junior; have a C-plus average and be proficient in German. Das Deutsche Jahr Fee: $2,125

VOLVO announces... new engineering advances with new B-18 power series

Volvo continues to make changes and improvements where they really count.

Take the new B-18 power series, for instance. Under the hood of the popular two-door and four-door models, Volvo has added five more horsepower, plus greater efficiency and as much as 10% more economy.

Add to this other new engineering advances: new fade-resistant braking system, 12-volt electrical system, new interior appointments, five main bearing crankshaft for longer engine life. Blend in the same fine Swedish quality for which Volvo has been known—solid Swedish steel, complete rust-proofing and under-sealing, numerous coats of paint, standard extras that others call optional — and you have the quality yardstick you'll measure the other cars by.

Test drive one of the new B-18 power series. You'll see for yourself. And if you're planning a trip to Europe, be sure to ask about picking up a new Volvo while you're there.

By LOU ROSENTHAL

Jerry Davis, behind great defensive work, ran his scoreless inning string to 20 2/3 innings before giving up a run in the ninth as the Tar Babies rolled over Wilmington Junior College, 6-1 yesterday for their eighth win.

Davis struck out two and walked two, while giving up seven hits to the Seahawks. But the saving factor for the Cramerton, N. C. native was four double plays made by the Tar Baby infield.

Bobby Reagan of Kingsport, Tenn., knocked a 340-foot homer over the right field fence in the fourth and added a single in the sixth to lead the freshmen.

The Tar Babies started the scoring with two unearned runs in the second, as Davis walked and Dick Fleming laid down a sacrifice bunt. But a throwing error by Seahawk pitcher Larry Edens, let Davis score, and the right-fielder overthrew third and Fleming came home.

After Reagan's homer, the Tar Babies didn't score again until the eighth. Jerry Clark got his second single of the day, and went to second when the leftfielder bobbled the ball. Bill Taylor slapped a double down the leftfeild line, scoring Clark, and the leftfielder let the ball roll into the bushes just outside the foul line to let Taylor score.

Golf, Track, BB Nines Travel

By ED DUPREE

While UNC's tennis team hosts Miami today in the match of the year, the other spring sports teams —baseball, golf, and track—all are on the road.

Coach Walt Rabb's baseball team, dwelling in seventh place in the ACC as a result of Tuesday's 6-5 loss to Duke, plays at eighth-place Maryland today and moves on to Charlottesville for a contest with Virginia Saturday.

Rabb's men return home Tuesday for a return engagement with Duke and close out their season with games at Clemson, South Carolina ,and N. C. State. The Tar Heels need at least five wins in the six games to get into the conference's first division.

Suspension Of 80 Per Cent Rule Probable

Randall Challenges Board Selection Of Yearbook Editor

Former SL Parliamentarian Says Correct Procedure Not Followed

By BILL HOBBS

Former Student Legislature parliamentarian John Randall yesterday formally challenged the appointment of Louis Legum as editor of next year's "Yackety Yack" yearbook on the grounds that the Publications Board "did not follow correct procedure" in appointing Legum Thursday afternoon.

Randall's challenge will be heard by the Constitutional Council next Wednesday afternoon.

The challenge is based on Randall's contention that "The provisions of Article 2, section 2 of the law governing the Publications Board were not followed." He said specifically that the Board did not give enough publicity to the fact that it was selecting an editor for the Yack.

'Publicity Lack'

Randall charges that this "lack of publicity" may have kept some students from applying for the job because they did not know it was open. The law states that the Board must "publicly announce" vacancies on the Yack and other publications.

The second point of his challenge, also rising from the law concerning the Publications Board, is that the Board "followed improper voting procedures" in the actual selection of the new editor.

The law establishing the procedure of the Pub Board, Student Legislature bill No. B. W. 31-31, says that "The Selections Board (which appoints the Yack editor) shall be composed of all voting members of the Publications Board excluding the editors and business managers." Randall claims this provision was violated.

Members of the Publications Board present at the selections meeting said Thursday that the Board had suspended its By-Laws for the voting on Legum's appointment. Randall charged that the by-laws, since they were established by the student legislature, could not be suspended or changed except by the legislature.

"I have nothing against Legum, and do not mean this to be any reflection on him," Randall said. "To the best of my knowledge, he is qualified, and will be appointed again when the Board follows the proper procedure if the Constitutional Council rules in my favor."

Randall explained that his interest in the case stemmed from the fact that he had been the author of the legislation which changed the position of Yack editor from a campus-wide elective post to one appointed by the Publications Board. That legislation, passed this year, is now in effect, and Legum's appointment is the first of its kind.

Editors Appointed

The Pub Board has for many years appointed the editors of the Carolina Quarterly and the Carolina Handbook.

Randall, who was a representative from Dorm Men's II (lower Quad) at the time he introduced the bill concerning Publications Board selection of the Yack editor, has figured in challenging Student Government actions before.

Last fall he discovered the error in the General Elections Law which eventually led to the Constitutional Council's invalidating the entire elections law and forcing the fall class officer election to be postponed a week.

Legum and members of the Publications Board were not available for comment on Randall's challenge.

TO CUT DOWN A TREE AROUND HERE:

'It Almost Takes An Act Of Congress'

By CHRIS BELL

"It just about takes an Act of Congress to take a tree down around here."

Joe Hedgepath looked over at his two companions working on a broken down saw, took a drag on his cigarette, and talked about the problems of cutting down trees on the campus.

Joe and his co-workers. Jim Simpson and Howard Haule, have been working for the last two days cutting down the big ash tree in back of the Old Well. All three are employed by the Armstrong Tree Service of Chapel Hill.

"They're taking down more trees than ever before," Joe said. "I guess they're getting scared of them.

"Our boss, Mr. Armstrong, comes over and examines the trees on the campus. He then tells the University which ones should be cut down. The University then decides.

Twice As Tall

"I'd guess this ash tree we've been working on was twice as tall as that building over there (Old West). I could look clear over the building when I was at the top of the tree."

Howard Haule, the foreman, kept working silently on the chain saw while personable Joe Hedgepath talked.

"I've been working on trees for the last five years. Howard here has been on them quite a bit longer than that, while Jim has only been with us several months.

"When I started I got dizzy," Joe said.

"Dizzy?," I asked Jim Simpson.

"Man, I was scared," exclaimed Joe, "but once you get used to it you're all right."

Shrubs and closeness gave the three men more trouble than the actual cutting down of the tree.

Six Trips

It took a truck six trips to haul all the limbs away and Joe predicted that another two or three truckloads would be required to haul away the sawed-up trunk.

Asked if he had any funny experiences in the tree business, Joe said, "There was a lady down in Camden, S. C., who wanted us to prune her tree only she didn't want the limbs to hit the ground."

The Armstrong Tree Service works on the campus three months out of the year. All their men are insured against accidents.

The saw was almost fixed as Joe pointed down in the direction of Graham Memorial and said, "See that oak tree down there? That's coming down next.

"The Davie Poplar? That one will never come down."

Debators Tie For First Place

UNC's affirmative debate team tied for first place with two other teams in a cross examination debate tournament at the University of Georgia last week end.

Haywood Claton and Mack Armstrong, the Carolina team, defeated W. Ga., Maryland, Georgia and Birmingham-Southern.

They met defeat from Florida State University and Louisville-Bellarmine.

The topic for the last tournament of the season was "Resolved—that labor organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation."

Any student interested in working for next year's debate team may see advisor David Springen at his office in Caldwell basement.

Legislature To Consider SG Appointments

Dwight Wheeles, defeated candidate for Student Body President, was one of nine students appointed to head Student Government committees by newly elected president Inman Allen. Wheeles was named chairman of the State Affairs Committee.

His appointment, like that of the eight other proposed committee heads, must be approved by the student legislature. The appointments were submitted to the legislature Thursday night in a message from Allen.

Scott Summers, chairman of the legislature's Ways and Means Committee, said his committee would investigate the proposed appointments this week. The legislature is expected to act on the appointments next Thursday.

No 'Rubber Stamp'

Summers said, "In the past, approval of appointments has been too much of a rubber stamp affair. We hope this year to set a precedent of more careful scrutiny of presidential appointments. The Ways and Means committee hopes to take an active part in investigating these appointments."

Summers' statement was similar to those voiced by several legislators Thursday night when the legislature considered the appointment of Walter Dellinger to the Men's Council. The Ways and Means committee had considered Dellinger's appointment and reported on it favorably to the legislature. The body passed that appointment with few dissenting votes.

Other Appointments

Other appointments submitted by Allen were: Bob Spearman, chairman of the Communications Committee; Trawick Stubbs, Attorney General; Bob Clawson, chairman of the Campus Affairs Committee; Harry DeLung, UNC Co-Ordinator for the National Student Association Committee;

Tony Miller, chairman of the Honor System Commission; Chuck Oberdorfer, Associate Director to the Merchants' Association; Archie Davis, Assistant to the Attorney General for the Men's Council; and Robin Farr, Assistant to the Attorney General for the Women's Council.

Allen has not yet announced his appointments for the Academic Affairs Committee, the Elections Board, the Library Committee, the International Students Board, the Student Audit Board, the Consolidated University Student Council, and the Carolina Forum.

(The Daily Tar Heel will publish biographical sketches of the proposed committee heads and other appointees, along with a description of their posts, next week.)

Folk Music Program At Memorial Tonite

Domestic and imported folk music will be heard tonight as the 14th annual Carolina Folk Festival opens in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. The festival is sponsored by the UNC Folklore Council.

Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House will present words and music following a welcome dance by the Glenn School Dancers of Durham. Arthur Palmer Hudson, chairman of the folklore council, will extend a welcome.

The festival features folk music, dances and ballads from the South, the mountains, the West, and other countries. Admission for students is 50 cents.

"The Chicken Farmers" will be a special feature. The group was formed here by Cherrill P. Heaton, graduate in English, and is described as "a flexible group of fiddlers, banjo masters, guitarists, autoharpists, gut bucket strummers and mandolin players." This will be the third public appearance of the group.

No Practice

Most of the time, according to Heaton, the players gather at the home of Woody Wolfe for their musical sessions. "We don't need any practicing," he said. "That's the

Faculty Council Gives Authority To Subcommittee

By GARRY BLANCHARD

The Faculty Council yesterday delegated authority to suspend the "80 per cent" rule, together with the right to reimpose it, to the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities.

The action was tantamount to suspending the rule as of the end of this semester in favor of Intra Fraternity Council regulation of fraternity academic standards.

As Dr. Clifton H. Kreps, Jr., chairman of the Committee on fraternities and sororities, put it, "the probability is overwhelming that we'll vote to suspend the rule on Tuesday.

"The specific purpose of our meeting is to discuss and act on the question. We would never have gone to the Faculty Council if we hadn't proposed to act on it once we had the opportunity."

But should the rule not be suspended Tuesday, Kreps said, "it probably won't be done at all."

IFC President Jim Dillashaw, meanwhile, pledged his group will do its utmost "to justify the confidence which the faculty has placed in us," but said, "we feel it would be better if we could have the matter placed entirely in our hands in sort of a trial period, rather than having it hanging over our heads."

The Faculty Council, meeting as usual in executive session, took nearly an hour to pass the measure.

"It was very thoroughly discussed," said council secretary Dr. A. C. Howell. "Many people spoke to request information."

Although the motion passed by a clear majority, he said, "there was a scattering of no.'s."

Assessing the action, Dr. Kreps said:

"What it amounts to is this: The Faculty Council has told us, 'you can suspend the 80 per cent rule. If it doesn't work out, you can put it back into effect.'

"Now, our feeling is that we're perfectly willing to give the IFC the opportunity to demonstrate they can enforce the regulations they've set up. They've committed themselves to impose standards of academic performance on fraternity members that in my judgment are more strenuous than the 80 per cent rule.

"In a sense, what we've got here is a trial marriage. We'll be working with the IFC very closely to see that they carry out their regulations.

"Basically, we're hoping that the Carolina student government tradition will be effective in this area, as it's been in others. It's much better for students to regulate themselves than have the faculty do it."

The "80 per cent" rule provides that a fraternity lose its rushing privileges should 80 per cent of its members not make a C average two semesters in succession.

The IFC regulations designed to replace the rule, basically require that individual fraternity members must be deactivated unless they maintain a C average over a two semester period.

The Faculty Council motion passed yesterday read: "By action of the Faculty Council at its May 4th meeting, authority was granted to the Committee on Fraternities and Sororities to suspend the university's present fraternity - sorority scholarship regulation—the so-called 80 per cent rule—as of the end of this spring, 1962, together with the right to reimpose it should such action subsequently seem wise."

Oettinger Elected

Elmer Oettinger, associate director of the Institute of Government here, has been elected Secretary of the nationwide Society of Cinematologists.

The election of Mr. Oettinger was made during an April meeting of the Cinematologists in New York City. The Society, founded five years ago, is an organization of motion picture critics, scholars, and historians. Its purpose is to promote better film scholarship in the United States.

SL Confusion

While elections are away, the mice do play. And Thursday night the mice in Student Legislature scurried around to an even more confusing and, to a defender of student government, humiliating degree.

One of the more experienced legislators called the meeting "the worse I've seen in two years in Legislature." Several other legislators pleaded with Tar Heel reporters not to print what went on—"We'll never have any respect again," one said.

* * *

The session managed to pass one resolution, the request for withdrawal of the "80 per cent rule," and approve the appointment of two presidential appointments. The remainder of the three-and-a-half hour meeting was devoted to individuals sharpening up on nonexistent knowledge of parliamentary procedure, other individuals making inane objections to motions which were, by and large, also inane, and still more individuals giving pep speeches to the legislators on what aspects of what question they should consider in voting.

* * *

The following instances were notable:

* * *

—A legislator said he was registering his protest vote against Walter Dellinger for Honor Council chairman for "one reason"—"because of his negligence as chairman of the Last Lecture Committee." The legislator neglected to say what in the world the lecture committee had to do with the Honor Council.

—At least forty-five minutes was devoted to consideraion of a "message," which had no legislaive status whatsoever, was neither a bill nor a resolution. During this time the Legislature was a "committee of the whole," in which time one non-legislative visitor asked six questions.

* * *

—One legislator challenged the decision of the Speaker twice within fifteen minutes and was beaten both times overwhelmingly.

* * *

—Twice "division" was called in voice-vote questions which required two-thirds vote against. Nowhere near half of the legislaors voted "against" in each case.

* * *

—One legislator claimed an amendment providing for two more bulletin boards (to be added to a bill for three bulletin boards) would "change the intent of the bill"—a statement technically true, but splitting hairs.

* * *

—The bulletin board bill, after forty-five minutes of heated debate, taking up valuable legislative time, was withdrawn.

* * *

—Near the end of the session the legislators got so tongue-tied that the Speaker announced that one amendment had moved "female companionship is in bad taste."

* * *

Legislators would do well to act more sensibly in the future, with regard to parliamentary procedure, but less concern for the technicalities of Robert's Rules of Order. (jc)

Complaint

Yesterday we had a complaint.

Ordinarily, a complaint in the DTH office is about as unusual as ignorance in Mississippi, and hardly worthy of comment. This one, however, struck a chord of sympathy in our usually unsympathetic breast.

A student was upset at the array of Carolina womanhood which has honored our pages of late. "Bathing beauties," the lad said, "are unnecessary."

While we believe Freud, Kinsey and 99.99 per cent of the campus males would disagree with him, our aim is always to please—particularly since the young man's sensibilities were apparently shocked.

To save him future embarrassment, we commend to him the complainer's cutout below. The next time he gets bugged at a picture of a coed in a bathing suit, we hope he makes use of it. (wk)

Letters To The Editor

Cemeteries, Teachers, And Sun

Unlawful To Curse, Spit

To the Editors,

It has come to our mind that in general neither the Chapel Hill merchants nor the University students fully understand the town ordinances which govern the relationships between them.

We have investigated to find ordinances which both students and merchants seem to know very little about. Among some of the interesting ordinances which we studied we found that:

The Armistice which ended World War II also made it unlawful to sell books and camera supplies and to rent bicycles.

— It is unlawful to curse or spit in a public building or assembly in Chapel Hill.

— You may carry a can of beer into a public place so long as you keep it concealed and do not display or consume it there.

— The only ordinance dealing with segregation in Chapel Hill applies only to the cemetery.

— ROBERT BULLARD

Thou Shalt Not Litter

To the Editors,

During the last few weeks the cult of the sun has returned to the Carolina campus. Not that it had ever really disappeared from the mind and thoughts of its loyal followers, but the outward symbols, the suntan and the sun itself, had grown weak with the passing of fall and the long winter. Now, with the "coming or resurrection" of the god in full force the congregation, stripped to the skin (almost) prostrates itself before the tanning rays—the life giving rays from the source of life. Cast like flotsam on the grassy seas of Carolina's campus, they wait, white an pale, ready fo rthe moment of hatching when the new man will be born again—tanned, athletic, and full of life. I believe this phenomenon represents more than just a search for a sun tan. It carries with it ideals that most Americans truly worship—the good life, materialism, and full physical and (sometimes) intellectual development. This set of beliefs seems to be much closer to the Greek ideal then to the ascetic and sacrificing Jesus of Christianity. If it is, then the sun should be the symbol in our churches on Sunday, not the cross. Yes, let us worship our true beliefs on the "Day of the Sun" as well as during the week.

With this new religion let us not forget an ethical system to go with it. Christian ethics with a little revising to reflect the search for the complete life would do just fine. I would like to suggest one addition of my own which anyone who has walked around the dorms after a daily worship session would aggree with. Cleanliness is next to Sunliness—Therefore Thou Shalt Not Litter.

Junior Choice 'Perhaps Amazing'

To the Editor:

I noticed on the front page of Wednesday's Tar Heel (2 May) a story concerning the selection of the Teacher of the Month by the Junior Class. This selection of Professor Schnorrenberg was certainly interesting, perhaps amazing.

According to the story Professor Schnorrenberg was "principally recognized for his instruction in Art 33, a general survey of his history of painting." Well, I do not know about Art 33, but I have had experience with Professor Schnorrenberg in Art 31. My criticism is of the position he puts himself in as a teacher, a position which I shall assume he maintains in his Art 33 class also.

Professor Schorrenberg's philosophy of teaching is in part quoted in the Tar Heel story. He states that a teacher's aim is to make himself unnecessary. And I would suggest that he carried this too far. He has not succeeded in making himself unnecessary but he certainly has succeeded in maintaining an aloofness from his students. As a result, the students respect his knowledge—and that is all. Because he has failed to establish an identity with his students, he has failed to stimulate them. It is no woner that he asks, "I wonder how many students at UNC each day find out something for themselves, other than for a course."

But my real complaint is not so much with Professor Schnorrenberg. After all, he does know his subject, and he is better than the average instructor at this great university. But how in God's name was he selected as the best teacher of the month? Was there no one more qualified? Are there too many months in the year, or is the Junior Class making a farce of the whole thing?

Buckley Answers NC Charge

(Note: The interview story with Ralph Bunche, who spoke here earlier this month, was written by Garry Blanchard, DTH Contributing Editor.)

Mr. Ralph Bunche of the United Nations recently gave an interview to a reporter from the Charlotte (N.C.) Observer denouncing in vigorous terms (a) Mr. William Buckley; (b) the Katanga Report of the American Committee for Aid to Katanga Freedom Fighters; and (c) Professor Ernest van den Haag. Mr. Buckley's sins, said Dr. Bunche, are legion and scarlet, but today's offense was to have written a syndicated column recommending the Katanga Repart which is "erroneous from beginning to end," the "deliberately distorted" product of Professor van den Haag.

* * *

Now we have come not to bury Dr. Bunche (though some day we might have to take time to do just that to him and one or two other UN mercenaries), merely to answer his charges. It must be said that Dr. Bunche's convulsive distortions suggest either a sick mind, or else a cynical propagandistic maneuver designed to discredit a document which sets down the inglorious record of the United Nations Army in Katanga last fall. Dr. Bunche, who was professionally trained as a scholar, says that van den Haag "saw and talked with no one on the UN side"—but the report gives the names and summarizes, with great understanding, the arguments of UN officials whom van den Haag met with at length. Dr. Bunche says "there's nothing to establish that the UN had anything to do with the atrocities which Haag's photographs purport to show that UN forces wantonly committed"—yet the report reproduces signed affidavits from on-the-spot observers of UN atricities Dr. Bunche denounces the Katanga fighters as "well-paid professional killers"; and so dismisses the patriotic activities of a population described by the New York Times as "99 per cent pro-Tshombe." Dr. Bunche implies that Tshombe was grateful for the UN intervention—in the teeth of Tshombe's repeated denunciation of the UN's activities and atrocities, in terms heard 'round the civilized world . . . .

What goes on? It is impossible to believe that Dr. Bunche read the pamphlet he denounced so slanderously. Unless one is prepared to believe that Dr. Bunche will willingly lie for his international fatherland. Well, Dr. Bunche is not the principal problem here. The problem is the meek acquiescence with which so much of the press and public have met the sustained efforts of the government and the Liberal Establishment to pull down the curtain over the events of last year in the Congo.

* * *

Even so the evidence against the UN continues to accumulate. Lord Colyton gave an extensive speech in the House of Lords a few weeks ago, reporting on his investigations in Katanga. All his conclusions, and many of the details he gave, corrobrated the report of Professor van den Haag for the Katanga Committee. An Austrian socialist paper has published another report to which the International Red Cross contributed — again tending to confirm van den Haag's report.

It is the opinion of the editors of NATIONAL REVIEW that the Report of the Katanga Committee is one of the most revealing documents of our time. Its qualities are a relentless sobriety (in such vivid contrast to the tendentious bombast of Dr. Bunche); a profound understanding of the relationship of forces in the Congo; microcosmic revelations about the growth of United Nations power, and its relation to the cause of the West; and the great insight it gives into the role of the UN in the Cold War. It is inconceivable that anyone who reads this document will be unmoved by it, or be easy prey for the propaganda of UN-firsters. Here is where one finds by all the odds the most reliable account of the great forces in motion within the United Nations.

The report is still available from the American Committee for Aid to Katanga Freedom Fighters, a non-profit organization. Cost: $1.50; address: 79 Madison Avenue, New York 16. Send copies to your newspaper editors, your local legislators and schoolteachers. Send a copy to Dr. Bunche (address: United Nations, New York.) Above all, read it yourself.

Reflections

CHICAGO (UPI) — Prize cattle may soon be transported to the slaughterhouse by air freight, the magazine Traffic Management believes. The magazine said it has learned several packing companies are investigating the possibility.

Two Views On Sigma Chi Derby

Mr. Wuamett:

There is no doubt in our minds as to the purpose of your article on our Sigma Chi Derby. In your opinion the Derby is a farce, without meaning or achievement. You delivered your point well while at the same time you created a clever, witty article. No doubt many students who continue the tradition (and will continue it for possibly 18 years) of reading The Daily Tar Heel had a good laugh at your comical abilities—we did.

Perhaps we should once more attempt to explain our rules and conduct, as we have done continuously since the Derby began.

No sorority girl, Stray Greek or nurse is required to participate in the Derby. Drinking and naked persons are not permitted at the Derby because we made an agreement with the Administration not to allow things of this nature. The events we have are clean events as well as funny ones. We honestly believe that it wuld take a restless, unstable mind to conjecture any other purposes for their presentation.

We do try to achieve an afternoon of humor and entertainment. It is our belief that the Sigma Chi Derby, through its entertainment, advances sorority-fraternity-dormitory relation. Perhaps we are mistaken, but if we are, we have not learned about it.

You stated that almost any sorority girl would say that the Derby is a waste of time. We will not contradict you because this is an important statement which you would not make unless you were absolutely positive of its truthfulness.

Did you have the endurance to remain at the Derby throughout its entirety, Mr. Wuamett? If so, did you notice the reactions of the two runners-up who came so close to winning? Ask these girls if the Derby meant anything to them. Also, ask the winners, who worked for weeks in order to get what they achieved. Their jubilance was indicative of a desire to win.

We regret that we disappointed you, Mr. Wuamett, with the conservative nature of our activities. We are not pagans. However, if you ever learn of the establishment of an orgy such as you prefer, we would be interested in attending. Then we might understand why our Sigma Chi Derby should be replaced by one such as you described.

—FREEMAN BARBER
The Sigma Chi Fraternity

To the Editor:

What was the purpose of your little article, Bill Wuamett, in comparing the Sigma Chi Derby to a pagan orgy? All it seemed to prove, on close examination, is that you do not think the Derby measures up to old time orgy standards. Of course, it did not, because it can in no reasonable way be compared to such an orgy, either in its purposes or its activities.

Concerning your statement about the limbo, the "little" races and the "mud" pie throwing, we would like to point out that, according to all modern educators, games are the most wholesome way of releasing energy in a mental as well as a physical sense. That is why a physical education program is considered such an integral part of the public school program in this country.

We are sure your statement that any sorority girl will tell you that the Derby is a waste of time is pure opinion and should not have been written as fact. How many sorority girls did you ask? We called several sororities that participated in the Derby during their lunch hour yesterday, and they all stated that it was not a waste of time, but exciting and fun. That is why they voluntarily participated.

To know so much about the Derby, you must have "wasted" an afternoon at this "mock orgy" yourself. The afternoon would seem wasted for anyone who could not feel the spirit of competition between the sororities and their enthusiasm over having something different and organized to do. The same kind of enthusiasm that goes along with a football game (By the way, how could you think that more drinking went on at the Derby than at any football game?)

If you want a true life orgy so badly, why don't you advertise your own "Maid in the Shade Party" for immoral rather than recreational purposes; then see how many coeds want to participate?

Every year after the Derby, it seems, there is someone to protest it, although the school authorities, themselves, have not seen fit to do away with it. Probably the reason for his protest is within himself, rather than in the Derby. To have such a sour outlook spoils the beauty of spring!

As sorority girls, we would like to THANK the Sigma Chis for giving us the opportunity to participate in something so unique and fun.

Warren, Black 'Vote RED'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said Wednesday that Chief Justice Earl Warren "decides for the Communists" whenever there is a clear-cut Supreme Court decision to be made between them and the security of the United States.

Eastland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, made the charge during Senate debate on civil rights legislation, the administration's literacy test bill.

Eastland read to the Senate what he called a "box-score" of each associate justice's votes in decisions which he said involved communism or subversion.

Eastland assigned each justice a pro and con "box score." The scores, he said, measured votes against positions advocated by the Communist party or Communist sympathizers in the case in question.

Easterland's box score read as follows:

Justice Hugo L. Black: 102 pro; 0 con.

Justice Felix Frankfurter: 69 pro; 34 con.

Justice John M. Harlan: 30 pro; 35 con.

'The Last Enemy Is Death'

By BILL DOWELL

The last enemy is death, John Schnorrenberg, UNC associate professor of Art, said at the last lecture of the Last Lecture series for 1962, Thursday night.

"We know that civilization will die," Schnorrenberg said, "When men come to an end so do their creations. If the end is for a good cause and if it is faced boldly, not morbidly, then we do not need to be dismayed. The last enemy is death. An enemy exists to be vanquished. We can vanquish death by living. We vanquish it by the way our living becomes it. If we are conscious of its coming, if we are able to meet it, then its coming does not matter, even if it is the final one.

"These are my last words to you," Schnorrenberg said in conclusion, "be conscious that you will die. Be conscious that your world will die. Live justly, intently and debonairely."

Two Besides Death

Schnorrenberg chose two other categories besides man's realization that when he dies his civilization dies with him, to illustrate his lecture. The first was death in vanity and the other was the "memento mori" or the memory of death.

Schnorrenberg said that the category of vanity either brought all men to an equal footing, i.e., dust, or it raised them to a new level which they were never capable of reaching in life, as the heroic position of Marat in Jacques Louis David's depiction of Marat's assassination.

The "memento mori" Schnorrenberg described as the realization by the artist and men that everyone who is born will die.

The third category—the artists realization that civilization will die when men die—Schnorrenberg illustrated with a picture of the Pyramid of Kufu and the prostitution of the tomb built by Gaius Sextus in Rome. Sextus, ignorant of the meaning of the shape distorted it into a mockery of the original, which stood hardly taller than the other tombs in Rome.

Symphony Sets Concert For Tuesday

The University Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Earl Slocum will present its spring concert in Hill Music Hall Tuesday at 8:00 p.m.

The program will include Dvorak's Symphony No. 5 commonly known as the "New World" Symphony, Enesco's spirited Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1 and Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat Major with Mrs. Enid Katahn, nationally known pianist currently teaching piano in the Department of Music, as the pianist.

The instrumentalists of the orchestra are music majors, members of the music department faculty, students and teachers from other University departments, and musicians residing in the tri-city area.

Professor Slocum has been conductor of the symphony for the last 16 years. In addition to his duties with the orchestra he teaches composition, and orchestration, and conducting in the Department of Music.

The concert is free and the public is cordially invited to attend.

History Prof Recipient Of Guggenheim

Dr. James E. King of the UNC history department has won a Guggenheim Fellowship for a study of the origins and evolution of the concepts of welfare in the modern Western world.

The announcement was made Sunday by a John Simon Guggenheim Foundation spokesman. A total of 270 scholars, artists and scientists are sharing $1,410,000 awarded for advanced study by the foundation.

Duke University professor, Dr. Simon Kahn Heninger, also won a Fellowship for a study of the influence of Pythagorean thought in the Renaissance.

GM Interviews Scheduled

NEW GMAB executive officer and committee heads met yesterday to discuss plans for Graham Memorial next year. Bob Reardon, new president of the board announced that interviews would be held next week to fill positions on the publicity, Drama, Music, Social and Free Flick committees of the board. These interviews will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday in GM's Roland Parker Lounges II an III between 3 and 5 in the afternoon. Reardon stressed that persons appointed to the committees would have "an active voice" in the planning of next year's GM activities. "This will not be just leg work," he said, "and we hope that all interested persons will apply."

Dean Long Releases '63 Dorm Advisors

Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, William G. Long today released the list of dorm advisors for the next year. There are three types of advisory positions which will be filled by over 50 men serving as part-time members of the staff of the Office of Student Affairs. The classifications are Housemasters, Head Resident Advisors, and Resident Advisors.

Housemasters are married students engaged in post-graduate work. Each has responsibility for the day to day operation of the multistoried dormitory in which he works. The position requires a minimum of 25 hours per week and pays a stipend of $2,000 a year.

Head Residents are single post-graduates who work a minimum of twenty hours per week in other dorms and assume responsibility for the life of the dormitory to which they are assigned. Their stipend is $1,250.

Residents assist the Head Residents and work a minimum of ten hours per week. They are single senior or post-graduate students and receive a $500 stipend.

The position of Dormitory Manager has been abolished and its duties consolidated into those of the advisors. Laundry and dry-cleaning will not be handled by advisors but will be given to other students on a self-help basis. This is to prevent the conflicting interests that some dorm managers have faced.

James B. Ribenbark will be Housemaster for Ehringhaus Dormitory which will be all-freshmen next year. Russel Hollers will be the Burton-Craige Housemaster.

Resident Advisors include Leon Barber, George Benseh, Bertrand Bishop, James Bolin, William Bonds, Charles Britt, Henry Bromme, James Clark, William Criswell, Gary Dalton, Walter Dellinger, Davin Entin, Douglas Eury, David Evans, John Faunce, James Finison, Howard Garner, Jerry Gilbert, Forrest Green, John Gould, Drew Grice, Bobby Harwell, Phillip Holt, Robert Jones, Edwin Kowl, Durand McDonald, Michael McKee, Paul Matthews, Henry Mayer, Bruce Phillips, David Rouse, William Sawyer, Myron Simmons, Donald Stapleton, Charles Taylor, Charles Vaughn, John Ward, George Wells, Dwight Whelless, Ralph Whisnant, William Whisnant, John Whitley, and Ralph Yates.

Sokol Loses First Match

Miami Throttles Tar Heel Netters By 6 To 3

By Harry W. Lloyd

Miami's powerful tennis team scored heavily in the singles matches here yesterday to whip the UNC Tar Heels by 6-3 and extend their winning streak to 106 games and five seasons.

The Hurricanes of Coach Dale Lewis, led by a Florida boy and a pair of South Africans, won five singles matches and one doubles match. The defeat was the first of the year for Coach Don Skakle's team, which had won 22 already this season.

It was win number 17 of 1962 for the Hurricanes, who ended their season here. They will not play in the national finals.

A crowd of some 3,500 filled every available space on Kenfield Courts. Additional stands were added on the sixth court to take care of the large crowd of spectators expected for this nationally monitored match.

Despite the optimism of the Tar Heel charges for breaking the Miami streak, the only Carolina wins came in the number six singles, by Dave Morgan, and in the number two and three doubles, where Charlie Shaffer - Keith Stoneman and Bitsy Harrison-Stan Cocke triumphed.

In the top attention getter of the day, Carolina sophomore George Sokol was whipped for the first time in his career by a smooth-stroking South African, Rod Mandelstam, by 6-1, 6-1. Mandelstam, the 30th rated player in the U. S., who is also a sophomore, relied on devastating smashes and a lightning fast net game throughout the match.

In the first set, the dark-haired Hurricane sophomore got off to a blazing start to win a pair of love games before Sokol could catch his breath. It wasn't until Sokol scored on a smash to start the second game that the UNC ace could get a point.

Mandelstam had practically wrapped up the set with a 5-0 lead before Sokol broke service, but Sokol double faulted at set point and the first set of the afternoon went to the visitors.

It was Sokol who took the first advantage in the second set, but he wasn't able to hold it for long. In the first game, he took a 30-0 lead, then Mandelstam tied the match, and Sokol took vantage with a neat backhand shot. Sokol then slipped one over the net for the game point. But the power and finesse of the South African told the story. Mandelstam won the next six consecutive games, and the best that Sokol could do was to carry the fourth game to deuce. A powerful smash for a love game wrapped up the second set for him.

Even before Mandelstam had disposed of Sokol, Carolina's Bitsy Harrison, playing number two, was beaten by John Karabasz. Karabasz, the Hurricane captain who has only lost once this season, aced the first set and broke service twice in the second to win by 6-3.

In the third match of the day to be completed, John Hammill, number four man for Coach Lewis, trounced UNC captain Keith Stoneman by 6-1, 6-4. Stoneman won the third game of the first set and had the second set tied at 3-3, but Hammill, another South African, finished with a flurry to hand Stoneman his third loss of the season.

On court five, Charlie Shaffer just missed on winning the first set and then was beaten decisively in the second. Hugh Quinn, from Philadelphia, grabbed the last two games of the first set to win, 7-5, and then won all but the third game of the final set.

The Hurricanes actually wrapped up the win when C. W. Shackleford, a Danville, Va., sophomore, recorded a 7-5, 6-3 upset over Ted Hoehn. Hoehn took a 3-2 lead in the first set, but then lost three games in a row and couldn't catch up.

He fell behind by 4-0 in the second set, then won three straight, but lost the final two games. With his loss, the Carolina winning streak of 34 games over two seasons was broken.

The Tar Heels had won 22 consecutive matches this year. Yesterday's match was their last of the '62 season before the ACC championships start next week in Raleigh.

Dave Morgan, whose number 6 match with Joe Schwartz couldn't begin until one of the first five matches had ended, kept up the spirits of the home fans as he rallied to win the first set of the afternoon for UNC and eventually the first match.

In the first set on the number two court, Schwartz moved ahead from a 5-4 disadvantage to win by 7-5. Morgan then drew a lot of attention from the number one doubles match, which had already started, by winning the second set, 6-3, and the third by a similar score.

The Miami pair of Mandelstam and Hammill, considered by many to be the best doubles combination in collegiate tennis, countered the sometimes-brilliant shots of Ted Hoehn and George Sokol to capture a pair of 6-2, 6-2 sets. The Carolina combo won the first and third games to take a 2-1 lead in the first set, but the Hurricane couple, who have been playing together for over 10 years, swept the last four games.

Sokol and Hoehn took a 1-0 lead in the second set, but their advantage was quickly swept away.

With the number one court vacant again, the Shaffer-Stoneman vs. Karabasz - Shackleford match, the number two doubles, was moved up under the noses of the crowd. This match proved to be the best of the day as far as the UNC followers were concerned.

Shaffer and Stoneman, who had both lost their individual matches, played well both at the net and from the baseline in winning by 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

In the final match of the day, Harrison and Cocke took a two set victory over Quinn and Schwartz, 6-3, 9-7. In the second set, they had a 5-3 lead and match point, but were pressed to keep the match from going into a third set.

"We Did Good Job" Says U. Of M.'s Dale Lewis

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

A sweet dream of tennis glory was turned into a nightmare here yesterday afternoon as the University of Miami, relying on five singles wins, methodically crushed North Carolina, 6-3.

The surprisingly-easy win not only marked the Hurricanes' 106th victorious match in a row but also stopped the Tar Heels' unbeaten string at 34.

The estimated 3,500 tennis buffs (largest crowd ever to attend a college tennis match in the state) squeezed into UNC's Kenfield Courts, witnessed some fine and at times, spectacular play but the final margin was evident from the beginning.

From the time South Africa's Rod Mandelstam rolled up five straight games on George Sokol in their number one singles match to sophomore C. W. Shackleford's match-clinching lob shot on Ted Hoehn, the Hurricanes of coach Dale Lewis completely dominated the action.

Lewis, who in five seasons as head coach has yet to see his team suffer defeat admitted that he was a bit apprehensive before the "big" match. "We definitely were a little worried about UNC but I just let the boys read all the papers about Don's (Tar Heel coach Don Skakle's) club and they were determined to come up here and do a good job."

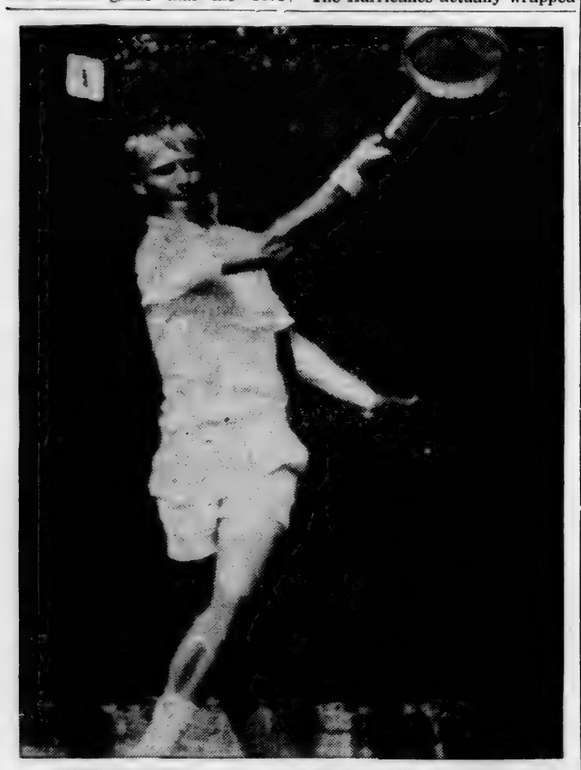
Lewis, sporting a deep tan and smoking his ever-present pipe, basked in the glow of his last victory of the season and added, "This is definitely the biggest crowd we have ever played before. We couldn't even find a place to park this afternoon—the whole place was just jammed."

When asked if there may have been any "psychological effect" on his players, the Miami coach had this to say, "When we came in here and saw this fantastic crowd, one of the boys said 'Well, we're either going to choke or chew 'em up.' I think that set the tone for the whole day."

UNC coach Skakle had nothing but praise for both teams.

"This is, without a doubt, the greatest college team I've ever come up against. Miami really showed its class out there today by taking those first five singles matches. I had expected to do better 'down the line' in the singles but I'm certainly not ashamed of my team."

Skakle concluded, "We could have been sharper today but I'm proud of the boys' showing this season and I know they appreciated this crowd. Miami just had too many horses."



GEORGE SOKOL returns a smash from Miami's Rod Mendlestam during their singles match yesterday. Mendlestam beat Sokol 6-1 and 6-1, giving him his first college defeat.

Golfers Start Slow In Athens Tourney

UNC's golfers got off to a slow start Thursday in the 25th Southern Intercollegiate Tournament at Athens, Ga., posting a total score of 301 for the top four men. The Tar Heel team score placed them in ninth place in a field of 29.

Houston's always tough golf team rolled up a 286 team score to take the lead after the first 18 holes. Another 18 holes were to be played Friday, with the final 36 in the 72-hole tourney being played today.

Wake Forest topped the Atlantic Coast Conference entrants and placed second in the opening day action with a 292 score. South Carolina, losers to UNC by 18½-8½ in a dual match Wednesday, was sixth with 296, behind Georgia of the Southeastern Conference with 293.

Kermit Zarley fired a 68, four under par, to take the first round individual lead.

Abe Andes and Pete Green of UNC fire two over par 74's to lead the Tar Heel golfers.

For Coed Swim Championship Tri Delts Edge Chi Omega

Actor Will Open Twice Same Night—Here & In Goldsboro

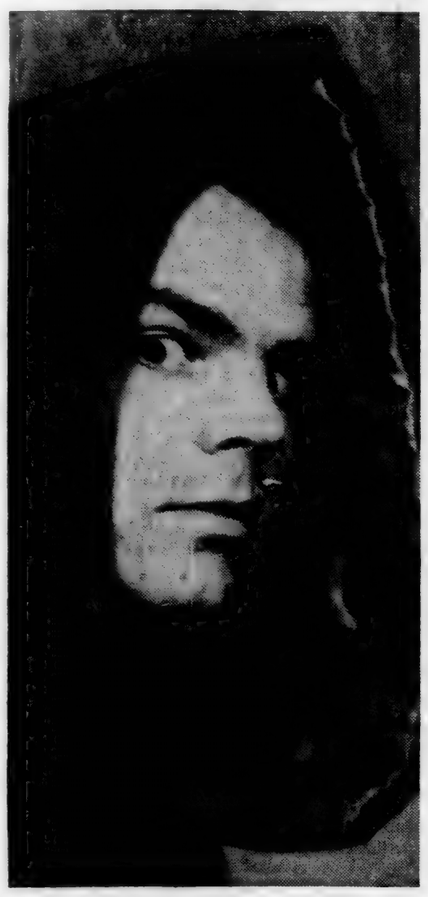
Gold, a 21-year-old University of North Carolina drama student and Charlotte native, is playing Mephistopheles, Lucifer's chief servant, in The Carolina Playmakers outdoor production of Marlowe's "Doctor Faustus" here May 18 and 19.



At the root of evil

And while he is onstage in the Forest Theatre here May 18, his recorded voice will be doing the dramatic narration in the premier performance of "Unto the Least of These" in Goldsboro in a pageant depicting the beginnings of crippled children's hospitals.

Gold finds his role as Mephistopheles the most challenging he has ever tried. The young actor has played major roles in "The Great Diamond Robbery," "Under Milk Wood," "South Pacific" and "The Deadly Game" at UNC. He plays the Historian in Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" on Roanoke Island each summer.

"Mephistopheles," he says, "is a self-assured devil who regrets being thrown from heaven with Lucifer. In 'Doctor Faustus,' disguised as a Francsican frier, he represents evil and temptation, something always present in life. He does not force Faustus to fall; he simply waits, knowing Faustus will doom himself eventually."

Gold doesn't limit himself to the stage with his performing. A former announcer for radio stations in Charlotte, Sanford and Southern Pines, he does sound track recordings for films produced by the Department of the Interior. As a radio interviewer, he made several tape-recordings with Eli Wallach, Art Lund, and members of the Old Vic Company in New York.

Gold, who recently completed a television film for the Civil War Centennial in which he played Jeb Stuart, has been acting since his early high school days. While a student at Myers Park high school in Charlotte, he acted in several productions, including "Romeo and Juliet," "Our Town," "Finian's Rainbow' and "The Glass Menagerie."

Curtain time for this "under-the-stars" production of "Doctor Faustus" is Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19, at 8:30 p.m. There are no reserved seats for the Christopher Marlowe spectacle, set in 16th Century Germany. Tickets will be available at the Forest Theatre box office prior to show time each evening.

APO Sponsors 12th Annual Parents Day

Parents, friends, and girl friends of Carolina students will face a full day of festivities and welcome today as the University observes its twelfth annual Parents Day.

Service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega sponsors the event and will maintain information booths in South Building and Graham Memorial where members will assist visitors during the day.

"The first Sunday in May," said George Rosenthal, a member of APO and former chairman of Parents Day, "is usually set aside so parents can enjoy the beauty of the Carolina campus in springtime."

Schedule for the day is as follows:

12:00—Lunch. Parents may have picnic lunches on the campus if desired.

1:00—Open house in all fraternities, sororities, and dormitories.

Air Science building open for inspection.

Zoology Museum exhibit at Wilson Hall.

Geology and Anthropology exhibits at Person Hall.

SENIORS

Graduating seniors have been reminded that payment of a $10 fee to cover costs of graduation must be paid before diplomas can be granted. Payment is to be made to the school or college in which the student is enrolled.

Library exhibits at Louis Round Wilson Library.

Ackland Art Museum exhibits.

Chemistry exhibit at Venable Hall.

Physics exhibit at Phillips Hall.

Morehead Planetarium, three shows in afternoon and evening.

1:30—Review of Air Force ROTC on Fetzer Field.

2:00—Faculty reception — Graham Memorial lawn.

2:45—UNC Glee Club and WC Chorus, Hill Hall.

4:00—Address by Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House at the Old Well, followed by UNC Band concert. (In case of rain, both in Memorial Hall.)

Dorm Officers Are 'Hanged' When Girls Fail To Appear

Mike Putzel, vice-president of Cobb dormitory, was hung in effigy Friday night after a dorm party planned for Saturday night was cancelled.

A burning cross lighted the hanging which took place in the parking lot between Cobb and the tennis courts.

The dummy, which hung from a tree in the parking lot, was decorated with signs saying, "Where are the girls, Mike," and "Putzel is a DIP"

The party was cancelled Thursday night when the officers were unable to arrange for a busload of girls from an area girls school to attend the party. It had been planned for a busload of girls from Woman's College to attend the party, but a spokesman for WC contacted Putzel Thursday and told him the girls would be unable to participate.

"We're very sorry the party fell through," Putzel said yesterday, "but we were the victims of circumstances, and I don't think we were to blame for the party's failure."

The actual hanging was attended by about six persons, Cobb resident Marvin Mason said yesterday. When the cross was lighted, however, the fire attracted about 30 or 40 onlookers.

Avery Sponsors 'King For A Day' Contest

Some Carolina male will be crowned "King for a Day" Wednesday when an Avery dormitory officer draws out the stub of one of the contest tickets that are now being sold for a quarter apiece and three for a half dolalr.

The winner will be honored Fridy during a day that will include breakfast in bed, lunch at the sorority house of his choice, steak and wine at the Rat, and a date with one of five campus beauties.

The winner will also be provided with a car and cheauffeur and a personal valet to shine his shoes and handle all arrangements for the winner's day.

Tickets for the contest may be purchased from officers of Avery dormitory, or in the Avery social room any night after 10:30 p.m. Proceeds from the contest will go to the dorm social fund.

Art From The Hungry

Painters Just Like To Eat

By HUBERT HAWKINS

"We are not commercial—just hungry!" The sign advertises the Chapel Hill Art League's sidewalk art show on Franklin Street. "These paintings are priced to Sell, Sell, Sell!"

"People come up and ask me where my paintings are, and I won't tell them," said girl-artist Guerry Matthews in the second day of the three-day show.

"I want them to see all the rest of the art," she explained. "And then I like to peek over their shoulders and hear their comments. I'm really excited about it."

People wandered through the exhibit in bewilderment or ecstacy. One girl stood before a work called "Myriads," by Dick Mendell, a grad student in art. Scratching furiously, she complained, "It just makes me itch all over!"

Artist Mendell exhibited a sculpture called "Bag Contains Red," a paper bag full of a mysterious red solid, running out at one corner. Asked how it was done, he smiled slyly. "That's my bag of tricks."

Many Purchases

The Chapel Hill Art League is composed of artists and interested persons in the University and community. Dwane Lowder, head of the group, reports purchases "exceptionally high, both price-wise and in numbers.

"But that's not our main interest," he added. "We want to get all kinds of art, all media and all styles, out where people can see it.

"Realistic paintings as usual have sold best, and predominantly water colors. But abstractions have been received better than ever before in the three shows we've had."

Although the artists insisted on our not profaning their work with mention of prices, some price tags are of interest. Lowder's own painting is set at $1500. It is an untitled work in burlap, clay, and rice paper. He describes it as "an experimental work in landscape, broken up into rectilinear patterns of color."

New Trend

Lynn Deal, art teacher at Chapel Hill High, was standing in the sun drinking iced tea. "There's a definite change in the climate of Chapel Hill's art interest," she said. "I think it all shows an encouraging trend."

Other connoisseurs wandering through the show commented:

"Interesting. You know, so nice to see things—like that—around . . ."

"Well," said a lady with a sigh, "I guess I'm just not very modern . . ."

R. D. Radford was leading his two children through the show. One asked him about a work entitled "Study No. 62."

"Well, it looks like a sort of technicolor cloud-chamber," he answered with authority. "But then I'm sure the guy's never seen a cloud chamber." Mr. Radford is with the Chemstrand Research Triangle.

Many Tastes

Mac Proctor, a special student in art, commented on the various tastes shown in the exhibit. He pointed out an especially popular painting of a tree in the moonlight.

"This was done by a technician. It's a fine painting. But while it has a sort of impact value, it will always look the same. You might not want to live with it." Contrasting this with more abstract works, he continued.

"Some people must have things

Jazz On A Warm Spring Day

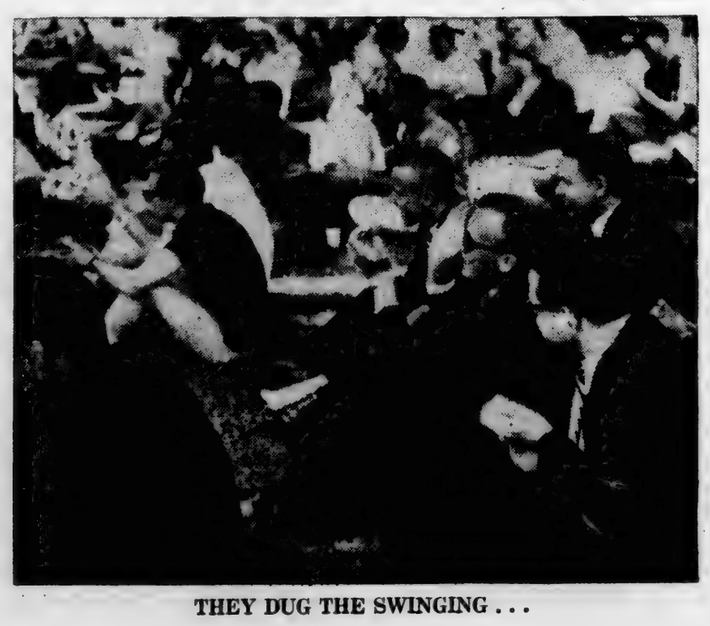
THEY SWUNG . . .



THEY DUG THE SWINGING . . .

A crowd of about 400 sat on blankets, watched, listened, read newspapers, played bridge and drank beer.

The festival boasted the big band sound of the Duke Ambassadors, group vocals of the Harlequins and combo work of Bob Harrison's Quartet.

The Ambassadors started the program with Count Basie's "Everyday." The audience responded enthusiastically to the 15-piece band as it played tunes by Basie, Les Brown, Stan Kenton and originals.

Charlie Culbreath, leader, said he was pleased with their reception. "I like the informal nature of a lawn concert," he said.

Second came the Harlequins, an eight-man vocal group from Duke. Styled after the Four Freshmen and the Hi-Lo's, the octet performed ably with and without instrumental backing.

Dick Dozier, leader of the group, drew laughs from the crowd as he introduced their program, including originals.

The Harlequins have recently released an album which sold 800

Let's Prove It

The highly probable suspension of the "80 per cent" rule should warm the hearts of all students working diligently for the continuation of a "sometimes - absurd" "sometimes - responsible" student government.

Fraternity scholarship aside, the suspension, if forthcoming, will serve as a weak vote of confidence for student self-government in all areas. The Interfraternity Council now has the responsibility and opportunity to demonstrate that students are able and willing to enforce all regulations on students.

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities has stated that it will be working closely with the IFC to see if they are able to enforce the undeniably stiff regulations.

In a sense this is good. The "trial marriage," as Dr. Kreps called it, should serve to further the bonds of communication which have been increasing, through necessity, between student government and the faculty.

In another sense this is bad. It would seem that the faculty is not ready to step aside and place the matter entirely in the hands of those who must, and have sworn themselves willing to, accept responsibility for the enforcement of the regulations.

However, in addressing himself to this particular problem, Dr. Kreps stated what every student wants to believe about every problem, and what every student seems to think that only students want to believe. That is, "It's much better for students to regulate themselves than have the faculty do it."

Now then, the "faculty" has said it. Let us prove it. (cw)

Success

The IFC sponsored Jazz Festival was a pleasant event. The crowd hovered around 200 people, and was reservedly well behaved. The music was good and the program in excellent taste.

The weather was balmy, and the grass soft.

But above all other pleasant conditions, what made the event such an enjoyable one was a relaxed air of student cooperation. The audience did not hoot, boo, or clown to the "ass goods" as most Carolina student crowds usually do.

Perhaps because of the pleasant weather, perhaps because of the music, perhaps because of hangovers, the audience appeared receptive.

There was an obvious lack of madras jackets, and the drinking was not evident. The few paper cups that were to be seen could have contained milk.

The committee, headed by Buddy Schiff, responsible for the success of the program is to be highly commended. The grounds were completely cleaned within thirty minutes of the last melodious note of muted jazz. (cw)

Call....

First is the matter of Daily Tar Heel circulation, or rather the lack of it. We have received numerous complaints about the inadequate circulation. We have had phone calls and have been stopped on the campus by students and professors who expressed a desire to see an issue of the DTH occasionaly. For this poor circulation, we must apologize. However, the matter is practically out of our hands, at the moment.

There are two bits of information about the publication of the Daily Tar Heel which ought to be made clear.

Since on Friday there were 336 undelivered Tar Heels in Graham Memorial, and approximately 43 in the back of the DTH truck, we would suggest that, until we can improve the situation, you come to GM for your undelivered issues.

One other slight suggestion, all of you might give John Evans (circulation manager?) a call at 968-0698. If you are being deprived of your already-paid-for DTH, he must surely be willing to explain why.

Secondly, if the ad department fills pages three and four with ads, there is nothing we can do about it. We must give the print shop twenty-four hours notice to put out six pages, and occasionally this isn't possible. You might call the ad department next time! . . .(cw)

Audience

Everyone assumes that Germans Club audiences will be inattentive, impolite, and immature.

Friday night the Spring Germans audience came through, true to form, possibly even worse than usual. Couples walked in and out—mainly out—of the hall throughout the concert.

So . . . this year two more performers, the Smothers Brothers and Sarah Vaughn, left Carolina with a remarkably low opilnion of UNC students. (jc)

Lost . . .

The campus is full to the top of its mimeograph capacity with committees of little or no value, most of them under Student Government.

Two groups, however, got lost somewhere, and were not found until this weekend: the "Combined University Student Committee" and the "Television Committee." . . . Anyone knowing the whereabouts of the chairman or any members of these groups should contact student government as soon as possible. (jc)

Image Of Japan Today—I

The Peace Corps' main objective is, according to the President, to create a new image of America in foreign countries, by sending young energetic Americans to the rapidly emerging countries. He tried to change the image of America characterized mostly by rich travelers or heroes and heroin in gorgeous houses in Hollywood movies and TV programs.

Sometimes they are called by such stigmas as "Dirty Capitalists" or "War Monger" by students in the underdeveloped countries. In Japan, Zengakuren leaders have kept on calling Americans "Capitalistic, Monopolistic Imperialists." However, these labels are easy to be removed, since these have no deep roots in the minds of the people in the foreign countries.

It is fair to say that these make a wrong image of America today. On the other hand how about the image of Japan in the United States? Ninety nine out of one hundred people whom I met here in these eight months did not know the name of the present prime minister of Japan. This is a kind of extreme example, but it might be generalized that the majority of the people here are, by and large, indifferent to Japan.

* * *

Having studied eight months in the United States, particularly in the South, I have watched with interest the people's prejudices and discriminations. I tried to discover what kind of images they have on Jews, Negroes Germans, Japanese and so forth. Sometimes it was very difficult to find or feel it in formal discussion and superficial shallow human relations. I associated with very frank and open friends on the campus in an attempt to enjoy fruitful discussion on that subject. Some of the ideas which were brought to me by them are indeed unreasonable and illogical ones. But it seems to me that to some extent these kinds of irrational prejudices play quite a great role in our way of thinking and pattern of behaviors.

When two different animals face together, at first they show a kind of symptom: fear and hatred. And then they start gradually investigating each other, using nose, ears, eyes and so on. But man should be different from animals. Man is the lord of creation. We do not have to use those primitive organs, when two men meet. We can use such a beautiful thing like a brain which can remember, calculate, scheme, doubt imagine, or THINK in one word. At the same time we must admit another fact that we have such a beautiful thing like prejudice and preconceived ideas as a product of the brain.

Before an American meets a man of a different race, he has them labeled out as environmental prejudice: Negroes are dirty, Jews are cunning, Germans are brutal, Japanese are sneaky. This must be the case of extreme and very emotional feelings of a small number of uneducated people in the United States. Nevertheless this is the case in most of the countries all over the world.

* * *

In this short essay I shall focus on the American images of Japan in both its negative and positive aspects from the Japanese point of views.

It would be unfair under the title to ignore the influence of Japanese flower arrangements, tea ceremony, Kabuki and Noh play, Haiku poem and Zen Buddhism in this society. I used to find a couple of books either Zen or Haiku in the stacks when I visited the home of the students here majoring in Literature, philosophy or art. Furthermore the unique aesthetic criteria of Japan, Shibui has recently been introduced to architecture and interior decorations. Japanese gardening and house keeping are going to be popular in this country. But in my impression these influences are so small scale and superficial in the daily life of the people. Obviously these phenomena are observed only in minority group. I am not sure they will change the phase of the life in the same degree as American did in Japan.

Why does the Oriental way of life, culture and civilization not prevail all over the world? Why does, at present, Western civilization dominate every corner of the world?

* * *

When I try to characterize the Orient, I can point out the foundation of it in Eastern religion. From the point of view of the westerners, the Orient constitutes the world of unscientific irrationality. From the beginning of civilization Asian people had never tried to conquer Nature until quite recently. Rather they found their world in It. To them, the nature and human beings are unseparable unity in the beautifully harmonized world. And then with the beginning of exchange with the West, the Orient had to expose itself to such a dynamic way of thinking and pattern of life. Introduction of Western culture symbolized by scientific method, logic and rationalism gradually infiltrated the quiet stationary world of the Orient. In my judgment the colonialism which prevailed all over the southeast Asia and Middle East from the sixteenth to twentieth century indicates the fact that the emerging force of Western civilization defeated the Orient.

Under these circumstances Japan put an end to the isolation policy and it hastened to westernize all institutions and systems of the state in an attempt to defend its land and catch up with the West. The development of the state was organized under one objective; to maintain national prestige. In order to materialize the goal, Japan did not hesitate to adopt aggressive militaristic way. Then came the result of desperate defeat and destruction of the country after the World War II. But looking carefully at the phase of the change occurring in contemporary Japan, observers can easily notice one way of introduction of culture and civilization. Japan has been so busy adopting western ways of life, the rapid social change did not permit, the people to stop to reconsider and reevaluate their own culture. Or it might be better to put it this way: Dynamics of the Western civilization forced them to forget their tradition whether it might be good or bad.

Man On Horseback

Dorm Men Needed In SG

To the Editor:

Recently while waiting for some information at the Graham Memorial desk, I saw a young lady come by and drop a handful of meeting notices in the campus mail box. I recognized her as being on the orientation committee, and having a moment to spare, as well as being curious as to the people on the committee, I thumbed through the 25 names. Then I noticed, to my dismay, that everyone, except five girls—not one boy—were affiliated with a Greek house. Having been exposed to the antagonism between dorm men and Greeks, having gone through a political campaign when such matters were discussed, having read in the DTH on this issue, I began to wonder if perhaps the dorm man deserves such a position on campus.

Being the first to agree that we are not here just for etxtra-curricular activities, I feel these organizations need some more diversifed ideas in order to serve a campus which doesn't contain just one type of mind—or does it?

This past year I have seen that many committees are dominated by Greeks. I have heard of the unfortunate nature of organizations as the Toronto Exchange, Graham Memorial Activities Board, Orientation, Symposium, Consolidated University, Student Council—should I go on—being literally dominated by Greeks who composed a minority on campus. The argument was that the dorm man was discriminated against, but is he? Perhaps a look at the sign-up sheets on the G.M. desk will clear this up also. The ratio is about the same as the membership of the committees, largely Greeks.

Perhaps we'd rather sit in the dorm sulking about our inferior position—we can't date because we don't meet girls; we have no place to take them when we do "luck up" and get a date. So what do we do on week-ends? We curse under our breath at frat pins, and wind up going to the flick, and intoxicatedly singing songs on the way home from the Patio or the Tempo.

Occasionally, we get an idea to join and contribute to something. For example, Cobb's dorm week-end or BVP's housing three Russian students. But how many work for these—three or four? We don't have pledges to force to work; however, have we not condemned this "forced labor" in other discussions of the evils of the fraternity system.

Let's for once put down the negative axe we are grinding and look at the question positively. First, we stated that we don't have dates. A large percentage of these members of committees are girls. Now where would be a better place to meet these members of the opposite sex? Who knows, it might even be possible that they would like to meet one of us, presently outcasts. Secondly, there is the possibility that someone might actually come across, in these unorthodox discussions (because of the new type members), an activity which could be enjoyed by both non-Greeks as well as Greeks. From having worked on the staff on G.M., I have seen the committee members (2 or 3) frantically search for ideas for week-ends which would get attendance of enough people to justify the money spent. At any rate, the point is—one of you has an idea now for a new type event which G.M. could carry out. She has the machinery, but only you have the idea.

Over and above this, there are committees which cover a range of activity from evaluating courses to trying parking violations. Wouldn't you like to devote just one hour a week to see your pipe dream in action? Perhaps you had rather confine yourself to one area, yet have only one hour a week to spare—a suggestion—one of the two political parties as a sounding board for your ideas. They are open to all, and free also. Who knows, you might get so interested you'd even contribute the price of one show's ticket as dues.

This week the sign-up sheets are on the desks at G.M. Why not come by on the way up town? Will Mrs. Fambrough at the desk see the same flow of fraternity pins come by as last year or will she see some new, different, interested faces?

S. Party Nothing To Say

To the Editors:

The Student Party is presently suffering from a grave illness. That illness is not a lack of good people or an inability to win; it is the lack of having anything to say to the students on this campus.

* * *

The present chairman recently stated that the Party must build candidates—rot. It is not the duty of the Party to take a piece of clay and shape him into an attractive, vote-winning form—one which will appeal to the girls and present an image to the men. It is not the duty of the Party to write speeches for the potential candidate and tell him how to handle different situations and keep from getting put on the spot.

If the Student Party thinks that it can get away with this wishy-washy, non-commital kind of politics, is in for a big surprise. The voters on this campus are not all that stupid. As a matter of fact, some of them have a hell of a lot more insight than the people who present the candidates to them. It has been the policy and tradition of the Student Party to take a stand when it felt that an important issue needed support. What are those issues now, and where is the Student Party?

* * *

The Party seems to think that if it takes a stand, it will alienate the voters. Well, let's look at some of the SP candidates who have taken stands: Hank Patterson, Mike Lawler, Jim Clotfelter, Chuck Wrye. And those who have not—people like Dwight Wheless—have not succeeded in fooling the voter, or accomplishing anything for this university or the students in it.

And now I ask what is more important: winning elections with equivocating candidates (which is not an easy job) or promoting the purposes of the Student Government and increasing opportunities for advancement and expansion of the individual on this campus?

* * *

What good is winning if there is no reason to win beside that of keeping the name of the Party on this campus or gaining personal prestige by tacking the name of an office onto that of a heretofore nobody?

We, the Student Party, should win, and we will win—but we must remember why we are going to win and why winning helps us do what we think is right.

College Paper Censorship

In recent weeks several college newspapers have suffered editorial and administrative resericions or began to act against them. Instances from three universities are here presented.—Eds.

* * *

MICHIGAN

Note: All but one of the editors of the Michigan Daily, the student newspaper of the University of Michigan and generally considered one of the nation's best, resigned last week because of interference with editorial policy by the University's overseeing Board. The Student Council has so far not taken a stand in the controversy. New editors of the Daily have not yet been appointed.

(A letter was written by David Riesman, co-author of "The Lonely Crowd," and printed in the Daily. Following are excerpts from the letter:)

It is, as you know, often assumed in the world of the private universities that the big state universities such as Michigan, subject to legislative and budgetary controls, cannot be free and that their student papers must be house orgns, carefully watched over by understandably cautious protectors, lest some segment of local opinion, not excluding influential student opinion, be offended.

Since the days of Henry Tappen over a hundred years ago, the University of Michigan has had an extraordinary record of vigor and freedom. And when I have read The Daily, which I regard as one of the two or three most vital, most distinguished and most interesting college papers, I am happily reminded of that tradition, and I often mention it to students who are considering graduate or undergraduate work n Ann Arbor.

It is often said that students today are cautious and afraid to take risks, that they don't believe in free enterprise. Interference, heavy-handed or subtle, from adults who are put in a position of buffers between The Daily and its critics is not a way to encourage fre enterprise at Michigan or anywhere lse, and the long-run dangers of such interference would seem to outweigh whatever short-run alleviation it might bring.

—PROF. DAVID RIESMAN
Harvard University

IOWA

(Following is an editorial from the Michigan Daily concerning editorial freedom at the University of Iowa):

The report states "Our view of the educational process leads us to the conclusion that a maximum of freedom and responsibility should rest with students in production of the Daily Iowan."

However, further recommendations of this report nullify this "maximum of freedom and responsibilty."

The committee recommends that a board in control of the Iowan be set up directly under the president of the university and charged by him with the responsibility for the policy and operation of the paper, including editorial policies and the selection of student editors.

Further limitations include agreements with the journalism school concerning "arrangements for the use of position on the staff of the Daily Iowan for SUPERVISED experience for students of journalism in conjunction with their professional work" and the requirement that a faculty representative be present in the news room when the paper goes to press.

Thus, the responsibility and freedom for running the paper lies with the board and journalism school and ultimately with the president of the university. The policy and operation of the paper is decided by these three powers.

Further, the report cites the right of the faculty to express "their individual concerns regarding articles, editorials, reviews and other features . . . in full confidence that corrective action will be taken if warranted."

What type of freedom can be held with fer of "corrective action" hanging over the newspaper's head. How free is any student going to feel to express his true beliefs?

Under this framework, the paper is a group of articles "representative of the total university, reflecting the interests and outlook of the whole university," as the report stated.

This is not freedom of the press. There is no place for the individual student to express his beliefs if they happen to be critical. There is only room for editorials expressing ideas favorable to the "university image."

It is natural for the university to be concerned with its image. But, how can a university keep a good image if it refuses to progress? How can it change and progress if it refuses criticism?

Di-Phi To Debate NC Law Against Mixed Marriages

A resolution advocating the abolition of North Carolina laws prohibiting interracial marriage will be debated Tuesday night by the Di-Phi Society in the Di-Phi Hall on the third floor of New West at 7 p.m.

The resolution refers to Article XIV, Section 8 of the State Constitution which refers to interracial marriage as an "infamous crime" and provides punishment of imprisonment of not less than four months and not more than ten years.

Harriss Wins Award For Leadership

William Graham Harriss has been chosen as the recipient of the John J. Parker, Jr. Awrd. This medal is given annually by the late Judge and Mrs. John J. Parker in memory of their son, John Johnston Parker, Jr., class of 1937, who rendered distinguished and sacrificial leadership as President of the Student Council in one of the critical years in the history of Student Government.

This medal is awarded by a special committee appointed by the President of the University "to that member of the graduating class who has demonstrated most clearly the highest qualities of leadership in perpetuating the spirit of honor and the process of student self-government."

Harriss is a Morehead Scholar who has maintained a "B" average since enrolling at the University. Harriss' election as Student Body President and the exemplary leadership he displayed while in that office was the culmination of an outstanding college record.

He is a member of the Order of the Golden Fleece and The Order of the Old Well. He was also appointed by Governor Sanford to chair several state student groups during the course of the year.

Symphony Performs Tuesday

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Earl Slocum, will present its annual Spring Concert on Tuesday evening at 8 in Hill Hall. Featured will be works by Antonin Dvorak, Franz Liszt, and Goerges Enesco.

The orchestra will open the program with Dvorak's "Symphony No. 5," in E minor, more popularly known as the "New World Symphony." Dvorak's inspiration for this work came from the Negro songs to which he had been introduced by one of his pupils at the National Conservatory of Music in New York.

Following intermission, the orchestra will perform the "Concerto No. 1," for piano and orchestra, by Franz Liszt.

The "Concerto No. 1," in E-flat major, written around 1849, was first regarded by Viennese pianists as a sure bid for failure. But it was revived in 1869 in Vienna with considerable success and has been a favored tour de force for concert pianists ever since.

Soloist for this performance will be Enid Katahn, noted pianist, whose playing has been described by the New York Herald Tribune as ". . . a gem of elegant radiance, with an ease and security altogether remarkable."

The University Symphony will conclude the program with Enesco's "Rumanian Rhapsody No. 1." Rumanian folk music and the music of Rumania's serious composers were little known outside of that country before Enesco.

It is music that throughout has an exciting momentum, beginning slowly, then working up through successive stages to a final outburst of uncontrolled vigor.

Anthropology Researchers Needed In CH

Qualified undergraduate students who wish to spend one or both semesters next year studying cultural anthropology through doing research, should contact Professor John J. Honigmann as soon as possible.

Unfortunately the research will keep the student in Chapel Hill rather than allow him at this time to visit the Eskimo or to do field work in the South Seas.

A National Science Foundation grant allows research participants to be paid up to $150 per academic year. The purpose of the grant is to attract more highly qualified persons to anthropology as a scientific career.

spelled out for them, and be sure they know what they're seeing. Any ambiguity, like the fear of something in the dark, makes them afraid. You might pick up a piece of tin on the street and hold it to the light, just because you like the color and shape of the rust on it."

Security and Adventure

He cited the abstract shapes discovered under the microscope, which no one would recognize as anything "real." "In things that you can recognize like a photograph, Norman Rockwell's paintings for instance, there is just so much. In these definite, familiar forms there is security; there is adventure in the other."

Proctor notes increased interest here in original works. "People had rather own an original, even by a student, than an expensive print."

He said that a painting is much more than just the colors and shapes. It affects by all sorts of associations, and just the knowledge that it is original puts the viewer much closer to the artist and his art.

Duke Trackmen Win, 72-64

Tommy Clark Sets New School Mark With A 6-7 Jump

Tom Clark set a new school record with a 6 foot, 7⅛ inch leap in the high jump, but the Duke track team prevailed in the running events to sweep a 72-64 upset from the Tar Heels in Duke Stadium yesterday afternoon.

The loss to Duke meant a third place finish for the season for coach Dale Ranson's team.

Hurdler Jim Brown was a double winner for UNC, with firsts in both the 120 highs (time, 15.4) and 220 lows (24.3). Brown ran the last leg of the winning mile relay, along with Bob Hart, Scott Brent, and Charles Little. Their time was 3:24.2.

Duke's strength in the individual running events proved the difference between the closely matched teams. Van Dyck and Nourse finished in a dead heat in the mile in 4:18.6, and Nourse won the two mile in 9:15.6.

John Zweiner matched Jim Browns feat with firsts in the 100-yard dash (10.1) and 220 (21.5), and anchored the winning 440 relay team. The relay time was 42.8 seconds.

Carolina's other winners were John O'Bannon, who captured the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet, 4 inches, and Heath Whittle, who won the pole vault with 13 feet, six inches.

Duke's other winners were Barry Howe in the Javelin (197 feet, 8 inches), and Dick Gesswein in the discus (155 feet, 8¼ inches) and the shot (56 feet, 4¾ inches).

4 Championships Are Here Next Year

Four Atlantic Coast Championships will be held in Chapel Hill next year, it was decided at the Conference meeting in Greensboro Friday.

League officials voted to hold cross-country, indoor track, outdoor track, and tennis events at UNC. Only indoor track, which has been at Chapel Hill every year but one, was held here this year.

The dates for the events are as follows: cross-country, Nov. 19; indoor track, March 9; outdor track, May 10-11, and tennis, May 9-11.

Other championships set were the basketball tournament, Raleigh, Feb. 28-March 2; wrestling, Charlottesville, Va., March 1-2; swimming, Raleigh, March 7-9; and golf, Hot Springs, Va., May 10-12.

In other action, the ACC officials voted unanimously to endorse the new United States Federations, an NCAA-sponsored group formed to oppose the National Amateur Athletic Union.

The conference refused to take action on a proposal introduced by Duke that the minimum college board score for scholarship winners be raised from 750 to 900.

The award policy was also changed. Individual trophies will go to the members of the conference football champion, and only the winner and runnerup in the basketball tourney will receive trophies.

The league also voted to open the spring sports season five days earlier, on March 15.

Decidedly Is Derby Winner

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Decidedly, a big gray colt from California, shattered the 22-year-old track record at Churchill Downs Saturday with a tremendous run through the stretch to win the Kentucky Derby and erase Whirlaway's almost impregnable mark from the record books.

With jockey Bill Hartack in the saddle Decidedly came up from far back with a lightning burst of speed that carried him to a two and a quarter length victory in the sparkling time of 2:00 2-5. The time easily beat the record established by Whirlaway in 1941 when Mr. Longtail was timed in 2:01 2-5.

Roman Line, tabbed as a speed horse who never could last for the Kentucky Derby distance of a mile and a quarter was a surprise second while favored Ridan was third in the field of 15 of the best 2-year-olds in the country who were able to get to the post.

Friday afternoon a highly talented Town Trojans soccer team won the all-campus intramural championship by defeating St. Anthony Hall 2-0. The Trojans, composed mainly of graduate students, suffered only one loss on their march to the championship.

Willard Hits 2 Homers

Tar Babies Defeat Deaclets In Pair

By LOU ROSENTHAL

Clutch hitting and fine relief pitching were the major factor for the Tar Babies as they won two games from the Wake Forest Frosh, 10-9, 9-2, Friday at Winston-Salem.

Ken Willard smashed a 390-foot homer in the first game, and topped it off with a 400-foot blast in the second, as he drove in six runs for the day.

Mel Sechrest, had only pitched one inning before Friday, came on in relief of Joe White and starter Bobby Reagan in the opener, and retired all six men he faced in order to get the victory.

Ward Sparkles

Then Walton Ward came through with a sparkling two-hitter to win the second seven-inning contest. Ward struck out 11 men and walked five. The two runs scored off him were both unearned.

In the first game, the Tar Babies scored a single tally in the first, but the Deaclets matched it. Then the Deacs went on to score eight more, putting the freshmen on the short end of a 9-1 score, going into the top of the fifth.

Then the Tar Babies started to roll. Joe White got on by an error. Dick Fleming singled to drive him in after Ron Stanley, courtesy runner, stole second. Dick Prindle walked, and Willard crashed the first of his two round-trippers.

The next inning, Billy Taylor walked as did Ken Boykin, and White did the same. Bobby Reagan got on via the error route, scoring Taylor and Boykin. Fleming got on on a fielder's choice ,and after Prindle's long fly to left, Willard singled home Reagan.

Score Knotted

The score was 9-8 going into the seventh ,and Jerry Clark started by getting to second on an error. Taylor laid down a bunt, but the Wake pitcher made a great play getting Clark out at third. Then Merle Kruer, who replaced Boykin behind the plate, rapped a double down the right field line, putting runners on second and third. Stanley, pinch-hitting for White, was intentionally passed, and Reagan tied the score with a sacrifice fly to right field.

In the eighth Prindle walked and stole second, and Frank Gallagher got his second single of the day to drive in the winning run.

The second game was a lot easier on Coach Bruce Crump's nerves, as the Tar Babies got two runs in the first on Taylor's bases-loaded single.

Wake tied the score in their half of the first, and it stayed 2-2 till the fourth.

Willard's 2nd Homer

Then after one was out, Kruer singled and Reagan doubled him home. Ward walked, and Stanley singled to drive in Reagan. A throwing error by the center fielder put runners on second and third, and Prindle cleared the sack with a single. Willard was up and responded by cracking his second homer, and third of the year.

The Tar Babies got another run in the seventh, as Ward singled and went to second on an overthrow. Jackie Booker walked, and on the Wake catcher's bad throw back to the mound, Ward's courtesy runner came home. Willard almost had a third homer, when he hit a long fly that just curved foul.

The Tar Babies had 21 hits in two games, 17 of which were singles.

Civil Rights Leaders Call For New Democratic Policy

"The movement must move from the realm of moral protest to direct political participation in our society," declared Bob Moses of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, sounding the theme of a three-day weekend conference here.

Over 70 student leaders from all parts of the country gathered during the past weekend to discuss the future of the desegregation movement and its long range political ramifications.

The meeting, hosted by The Daily Tar Heel, and sponsored by Students for a Democratic Society, featured Michael Harrington, author of "The Other America," as its main speaker.

Harrington outlined the need to put concrete social and economic goals within the realm of the student protest movement.

"Our society has built-in discrimination economically which hits hardest at the Negro race in particular," said Harrington.

"Our welfare programs give diminishing returns as one goes down the social ladder, and thus, the Negro who has always been economically depressed, receives less and continues in the same state.

"We need to organize the discontent that does exist for concrete economic and social goals and we must see to it that the federal government gives them to us," he added.

The conference was held behind closed doors at Gerrard Hall and Graham Memorial.

"The meeting was held in order to allow free and open discussion on all relevant topics," Robert A. Haber, president of the sponsoring organization said.

"We felt that the presence of the press might inhibit a number of students from deep south states which at times have made it a crime for just participating within certain civil rights organizations.

"We felt also that participation of the public would detract from the main purpose of the conference, which was to have these people discuss in as small a group as possible what the future of the region was and how they saw their role in creating that future," Haber added.

A recurring theme in the conference was the need for American politics to begin to be honest.

"You need nothing more radical than the Democratic Party platform of 1960 to work with. If we could simply organize people behind that and see to it that the Democratic Party does not back down from its proposals, we would go a long way toward achieving a desirable society," one participant said.

Tom Kahn, author of "The Unfinished Revolution," a pamphlet on the sit-in movement called for a realignment of the two political parties.

"People who cast their votes honestly for creative programs don't want them to be destroyed by an Eastland within the same party," he declared.

"We need to rid the party of the Eastlands and replace it with liberal leadership capable of building a democratic society," Kahn said.

The participants to the conference came from 11 Southern states, New York and Michigan. Most have been involved consistently during the past two years in civil rights activity.

Di-Phi Debate Will Be Open To Any Speaker

Interracial Marriage To Be Debated

The question of whether or not the proposed Di-Phi resolution would tend to represent the entire student body or merely the Di-Phi was brought out yesterday by several members of the Di-Phi.

The resolution condemns anti-interracial marriage laws in the state and in particular Article XIV section 8 of the state constitution which prohibits marriages between whites and Negroes. The Di-Phi debates the resolution tonight at 7 p.m. in New West.

Conditional representative William Dowell said that it would make no difference whether the resolution seemed to reflect on the rest of the Student Body or not since the public will be allowed to speak out on the resolution at the meeting tonight.

Copies of the resolutions will be sent to most of the major newspapers in the state, to the State General Assembly, the Governor and the New York Times, if it is passed.

The basis of the resolution is that the laws prohibiting interracial marriage are outdated and based on bigotry. Their retention, Dowell said, indicates either a "cowardly or a negligent Legislature."

Dowell went on to say that the state does not have the right to interfere in the personal affairs of a private citizen unless the public welfare is involved. He said that he had every reason to believe that the southern white man would be capable of restraining himself without the help of the state in the matter.

Dowell went on to say that there was the question of constitutionality. The question has not been brought before the supreme court yet, he said, but the chances are that when it is the laws will be revoked.

Faculty Committee To Decide Fate Of 80 Pct. Rule Today

Soviet Planes Land Supplies At Captured Laos Villages

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — A high Laotian government official said Monday Soviet transport planes already were landing supplies at captured Muong Sing and Nam Th in northwestern Laos and warned of an imminent rebel offensive in the south.

The statement was made by Acting Foreign Secretary Sissouk Na Champassak who cut short a mission to friendly Southeast Asia nations with other government leaders to fly back here in view of the latest civil war crisis.

He reported earlier government statements that the pro-Communist rebels who captured the two towns near the border of Red China had the support of Chinese Communist troops and said a Red sweep through the two towns would have "formidable political consequences."

He said another Red offensive was shaping up around the provincial capital of Saravane, nearly 300 miles south of Vientiane and midway between South Viet Nam and Thailand where Laos is about 100 miles wide. He said the rebels had captured outposts east north and west of Saravane and cut one of the two important roads leading to the town.

Rebels Take Over

Muong Sing, only 20 miles from the Chinese border, fell to rebel forces last Thursday and American military officials said some Chinese may have been involved. Nam Tha, 30 miles from Muong Sing and 12 miles from the Chinese border, fell Sunday to overwhelming forces.

The State Department said in Washington it is consulting with Britain "in an immediate effort to have the cease-fire re-established" in Laos. Britain and the Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the Geneva Conference which achieved a cease-fire in Laos May 3, 1961.

The United States repeated its charge that the capture of Nam Tha was a "serious violation" of the cease-fire but officials in Washington said they still had no confirmation of rumors Chinese Communists troops were involved.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesman called the capture of Nam Tha a serious breach of the cease-fire and that "we think the next step is for the International Control Commission of India, Canada and Poland to carry out an investigation on the spot."

Reds Help Rebels

Sissouk told a news conference Monday that Nam Tha was taken by forces which included four battalions from Red China's 43rd division and seven battalions from Communists North Viet Nam.

He criticized the United States for trusting Russia's ability to control the country as co-chairman of the Geneva Conference and asked angrily, "what can we say about our friends who have confidence in the Communists?"

Sissouk called the occupation of Nam Tha an "insult" to American diplomats who have received personal promises from neutralist Prince Souvanna Pheuma and pro-Communist Pathet Lao leader Prince Souphenouveng that the town of Nam Tha would not be taken.

Diplomats and some minor American officials said the troops who died at Nam Tha had faced loss of pay and a possible cut in rations because the United States had cut off economic aid to force the government to enter a coalition.

France Explodes Underground Bomb

PARS (UPI)—A spokesman for Defense Minister Pierre Messmer disclosed Monday that France exploded a nuclear device underground at its proving grounds in the Sahara on May 1.

The first reports of the latest test in President Charles de Gaulle's "go-it-alone" nuclear program came from Washington. Informed sources said it indicated that the blast had been monitored by American detection devices.

It was the first test carried out by France in more than a year.

Good Chance Exists For Revocation

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities meets today at noon to decide the fate of the controversial "80 per cent rule."

The Committee was given the power Friday by the Faculty Council to suspend the rule in favor of an IFC plan to improve fraternity scholarship.

Under the IFC plan any fraternity member whose overall grade falls below C will be automatically de-activated. De-activation would mean that a brother would not be allowed to participate in any fraternity affairs, pay bills or be considered a member in any way.

Dr. Clifton H. Kreps, Jr., Chairman of the Committee on Fraternities and Sororities, said Friday that his committee was given permission to suspend the rule but that it could put it back into effect if the IFC plan does not work out.

The rule will likely be repealed on a trial basis. The faculty has expressed its desire for the problem to be handled by students in "the Carolina student government tradition." Dr. Kreps said, "It's much better for students to regulate themselves than to have the faculty do it."

It is expected that the committee will move to suspend the 80 per cent rule, in light of the IFC decision to impose a minimum C average as a qualification for active fraternity membership.

Dr. Kreps has said previously that if the rule is not suspended at the meeting today, "it probably won't be done at all."

IFC President Jim Dillashaw has said members of the IFC felt "it would be better if we (the IFC) could have the matter placed entirely in our hands in sort of a trial period, rather than having it hanging over our heads."

The 80% rule has been under fire from various segments of the student government. Fraternity members as well as student government officials have criticized the rule because they say it imposes an unfair restriction on fraternity members who make a "C" average but belong to a house which is put on probation or suspended under the rule.

Under the rule, a fraternity loses rushing privileges if 80 per cent or more of its members do not make a "C" for two successive semesters.

The first semester in which a fraternity does not make a "C", it is placed on probation. If it again fails to reach the 80 per cent mark, it loses rushing privileges.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Panama City Fla. News-Herald Monday was named winner of the 1962 Pulitzer Prize for meritorious public service in journalism.

The 46th annual award of the Pulitzer Prizes was announced by President Grayson Kirk of Columbia University.

The awards were made in the categories of journalism, letters, and music.

The award to the Panama City News-Herald was given on the basis of an editorial campaign against gambling and illegal liquor operations.

Other Winners

Other Pulitzer winners were:
Robert B. Mullins, Desert News, Salt Lake City, Utah, for local reporting under deadline pressure.

George Bliss, of the Chicago Tribune, for local reporting without deadline pressure.

Nathan G. Caldwell and Gene S. Graham, Nashville Tennessean, for national reporting.

Walter Lippmann, New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, international reporting.

Thomas M. Storke, Santa Barbara, Calif. News-Press, for editorial writing.

The award for fiction went to Edwin O'Connor for his novel, "The Edge of Sadness."

The prize for drama went to Frak Loesser and Abe Burrows for their hit Broadway musical "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

History Award

The award for history went to Lawrence H. Gipson for "The Triumphant Empire: Thunderclouds Gather in the West." The poetry prize was awarded to Alan Dugan for his volume, "Poems."

In a new category, general nonfiction, the award went to Theodore H. White for his volume, "The Making of the President, 1960."

The award for music was given to Robert Ward for his opera, "The Crucible."

For journalistic cartoons, Edmund S. Valtman of the Hartford, Conn. Times was given the award.

The prize for news photography went to Paul Vathis of the Harrisburg, Pa., bureau of the Associated Press.

Sullivan Award Goes To Wyrick, Joe Oppenheimer

Joe Loveman Oppenheimer and Priscilla Blakeney Wyrick were chosen recipients of the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award by a special committee appointed by the Chancellor.

The Sullivan Award is given each year "to the one man and woman of the graduating class who have best demonstrated an attitude of unselfish interest in the welfare of their fellowman."

Oppenheimer served as Chairman of the Symposium Committee this past year. He also served in the Student Legislature, GMAB, was a member of the UP, and Orientation Counselor.

He is a member of the ZBT social fraternity and the Order of the Old Well. He has maintained a "B" average and is doing honors work in Political Science.

Miss Wyrick has served on the Women's Honor Council for the past three years and this past year was Chairman. She has served on the Carolina Women's Council, the Women's Athletic Association and played for the women's tennis team for four years.

She is a member of Chi O sorority, was inducted into the Order of the Old Well and the Valkyries honorary societies, and is past president of the Valkyries. Miss Wyrick has a high "C" average and will graduate with a B.S. in Medical Technology.

Sidewalk Art Show Said Great Success

"The sidewalk art show was a great success," beamed Dwane Lowder of the Chapel Hill Art League. "We are very pleased with the number of people who came by."

The three-day exhibit was the third such event in Chapel Hill. Artists attributed its success to an increasing climate of art appreciation in the community.

"Financially, we doubled last year's figures," Lowder continued. "Over 150 works were sold, mostly drawings and water colors. Ten sculptures were purchased, and about 20 oil paintings. Abstract works sold better than ever."

A greater desire for original art has been noted by the League.

"This gives many students a chance to sell their first painting," commented Lynn Deal, art teacher at Chapel Hill High School. "I sold my first in one of these exhibits."

"We were bragging last year of selling 400 dollars' worth of art in three days. This year it was over 900 dollars."

Response was reported good from Duke as well as UNC, although an exhibit was being held in Durham at the same time. Duke artists entered forty paintings and twenty drawings.

Infirmary

Campus Briefs

Seniors — Graduation invitations may be picked up on 2nd floor of Y court between 9 and 2 today, Wed. and Thurs. Invitations will also be sold for those who forgot to order.

Tomorrow will be the last day for the distribution of the "1962 Yackety Yack." The books will be handed out, upon display of your student I.D. card, from 2:00 to 7:00 p.m. at the outside basement of Graham Memorial. Free packing boxes will also be given away to anyone who wants them.

Senior Day

Senior Day will begin with a mass meeting of the class at 10:30 in Memorial Hall.

Finance Committee

Finance Committee will meet tonight at 7 in Roland Parker III.

LOST—Reward of $5410 will be paid for the return of a wallet missing from 113 Cobb. Anyone who knows anything about the wallet belonging to Dennis Jelalian, should contact Juent Uppercue, 113 Cobb.

YRC

Young Republican Club elections will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Law School Court Room.

There will be a dinner meeting of the American Society for Public Administrators tonight at 6 in the Faculty Club Dining Room. The meeting will then move to the Faculty Lounge for a discussion on the topic: "Problems in Administering a New Federal-State-Local Program." The speaker will be Robert Barbour, Administrator of the Community Planning Division of the N. C. Dept. of Conservation and Development.

Noted Pianist Featured At 8 In UNC's Orchestra Concert

The University Orchestra's spring concert will feature Enid Katahn, nationally known pianist currently teaching in the UNC Music Department, tonight at 8 in Hill Music Hall. The public is invited free of charge.

He will play Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat Major. Other works on the program include Dvorak's Symphony No. 5 and Enesco's Rumanian Rhapsody No. 1.

The program will open with Symphony in E Minor from "The New World" of Dvorak. This work has special interest for Americans because it was written while the Austrian composer was in this country, and it presents some of his impressions of the New World.

The vigorous rhythms and melodies, such as "Going Home" tune of the second movement, which later became the basis for the song, have made this one of the most widely played compositions in symphonic literature.

Nationalistic

George Enesco is a twentieth century composer who in his writing displays a sensitive and nationalistic musician's awareness of the spirit of his people. Rumanian Rhapsody No. 1, one of two he wrote, shows in its imagery the capture of Enesco's imagination by melodies of the Gypsy fiddlers of his own homeland.

Franz Liszt was accused of saying, "I can make my piano dream or sing at pleasure, re-echo with exulting harmonies, and rival the most skilled bow in swiftness," but the statement was really made by his friend and contemporary Hector Berlioz, who imagined Liszt confidently praising the richness of his own pianistic texture. But Berliez admitted himself that that Liszt's exploitation of texture in his E-flat Major Concerto is more than outstanding.

Composed in 1849 and first performed in Weimar with Berlinez as conductor and Liszt as soloist, this Concerto is typical of concerto writing in the Romanic period of music history.

Joan Baez Will Appear Tomorrow

Folk singer Joan Baez will appear at Memorial Hall tomorrow night at 8. Admission will be free to students with ID's. Admission is one dollar for student wives and a dollar and a half for the public if there is room at 7:45.

She has made numerous appearances in Greenwich Village and the New England area and is currently on tour throughout the country.

She sings in a soprano voice and accompanies herself on the guitar. She was born in Boston of Mexican-Irish parents. Her appearance at the Newport Folk Festival marked the beginning of her rise in popularity in the folk singing field.

Future Of The SP

The Student Party has traditionally set forth a liberal platform, initiating action in controversial areas, such has integration, and supporting "free and open" student discussions.

The party always has been a strong proponent of dormitory improvements — its success in this area has resulted in strong SP support in most dormitories and has forced the University Party to put up an all-campus program of its own. Although their base of support lies in the dorms, SP leaders have always opened party membership to any student, no matter where he lives.

In the past year, however, there has been a gradual change in the complexion of the party, a change away from open discussion, away from the dormitory, away from liberalism.

* * *

Since World War II the party has been developed by and has developed such leaders as Al Lowenstein, who was president of the U.S. National Student Association and the first U.S. civilian to testify before the United Nations; Joel Fleischman, now legal adviser to Gov. Sanford; Jimmy Wallace; Dick Murphy, also former president of the NSA and now Asst. U.S. Postmaster-General; Douglas Hunt, now special assistant to Secretary of Treasury . . . and in recent years, Hank Patterson and Jim Scott.

The Student Party has acted with strength to meet important campus issues. It was Al Lowenstein who led the successful fight which integrated the football stadium twelve years ago. SP student body presidents Henry Bowers and John Sanders effected the integration of Memorial Hall concerts. In 1953 Charlie Wolfe f the SP drew up a program of 96 specific reforms which should be brought about on campus, and the SP began to work on them.

These men of the SP past have been concerned with issues beyond the dorm social room or the fraternity house, issues which effect the studnt now and as a citizen in future years. Few persons now involved in student government have any real comprehension of the world beyond the campus, and few more have any knowledge of the true state of the campus, the issues which face the University and the student.

* * *

In two meetings in the past week the SP has elected its party officials for next year.

The majority of the party choices are not particularly liberal, have no imaginative dormitory programs, are not very intelligently interested in issues of broad scope. They do not appear to be part of the Student Party's ideological tradition.

The duty of any political party is to set forth a program of ideas for acceptance or rejection by the students. When a party ceases to stand for anything and continues to exist only because of individuals and their desire for office, it should be repudiated by the voters, and usually is.

The duty of the Student Party is to set forth a platform committed to liberal values on and off campus . . . to present able leaders capable of intelligently arguing for a viable student government, for student autonomy . . . to provide a continuous open forum for all students, Greek or non-Greek. If the party swerves radically from these ideas, it will continue to resemble the Student Party in name only.

* * *

Traditionally, the opposition University Party has been effective when good men lead it, and ineffective when lesser men are in control. The UP never has stood for a coherent set of ideals.

But in the past year some of its officers have expressed a desire to reform the party, to establish for it a definite set of ideals which it can throw against those of the SP every fall and spring.

Members of the Student Party now have the clear alternative—to meet the University Party in the middle-ground of equivocation, in which no one need be unpopular, and in which individuals could switch student government offices every year with no change in ideals —or to reverse the present trend and again make the party the SP of Lowenstein, Wallace, Fleschman and Murphy, to the SP which had guts and integrity. Parent's Day

Sunday, May 6th, was "Parents' Day."

Since, as the Alpha Phi Omega bulletin stated, "the responsibility for the success or failure of Parents' Day lies primarily with the separate groups and their efforts," we did not expect unmitigated success. However, Parents' Day, May 6, 1962 must go down on record as one of the most oally unsuccessful events in campus history.

The reception at Graham Memorial was prepared to handle an anticipated 1,200 persons. There were approximately 250 in attendance, counting the punch servers and three dogs.

The weather was fine, the punch tasty, and the idea swell. The responsible APO members had done what they could to co-ordinate the scheduled activities. What failed?

One of the major problems seems to have been the fixing of a date for the event. Originally it was set for the first weekend in May, as it was last year. Then upon consultation with Rudy Edwards, Assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs, Melzer Morgan (Parents' Day Chairman) changed the date to May 13th, so it would not interfere with Germans weekend. This was decided before Easter vacation.

Days later, someone at Morgan's campus address took a phone call, over the holidays, saying that Parents' Day had to be changed back to the first weekend of May, in spite of Germans . . .

So Melzer hustled back, hampered by the lack of cooperation that so often turns sour any attempt to give this campus a worthwhile event which it apparently neither wants nor deserves. (cw)

Calls For Repeal Of Mesegenation Laws

A resolution advocating that the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina abolish section 8 of Article XIV of the State Constitution and other statutes prohibiting interracial marriage.

WHEREAS: Article XIV, Section 8 of the Constitution reads: "All marriages between a white person and a Negro, or between a white person and a person of Negro descent to the third generation inclusive, are forever prohibited and shall be void. Any person violating this section shall be guilty of an infamous crime, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of the State's Prison for not less than four months nor more than ten years, and may also be fined at the discretion of the court." and,

WHEREAS: This section of the state constitution is not only archaic but is a violation of the individual liberty and privacy, and

WHEREAS: The existence of this section is unjustified by reason, morality, or any philosophy other than bigotry, and

WHEREAS: It is not the place of the State to intervene in the marriage between a man and a woman when that marriage endangers neither public safety nor public welfare, and

WHEREAS: The retention of archaic statutes is superfluous and detrimental to the future of the State and indicates a lax or cowardly Legislature.

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Dialetic and Philanthropic Society of the University of North Carolina that:

ARTICLE I. The Dialetic and Philanthropic Society of the University of North Carolina condemns the above mentioned section of Article XIV in the State Constitution and any action or inaction that might prolong the existence of that section in the State Constitution.

ARTICLE II. The Dialectic and Philanthropic Society asks that the General Assembly take action to abolish the above mentioned section and any State Laws prohibiting marriage on the grounds of race, creed, or national origin.

ARTICLE III. Copies of this resolution be sent to the editors of the New York Times, the Greensboro Daily News, the Charlotte Observer, and the Daily Tar Heel and to all members of the Legislature of the State of North Carolina and to the Governor of the State of North Carolina.

Introduced by Conditional Representative William Thatcher Dowell, New Jersey.

(The bill will be debated tonight at 7 on third floor, New West.)

Japan As Viewed By Americans—II

Despite the fact that since the Meiji Restoration the United States and Japan have century-old relationships, still Japan remains the country of mysterious exotic people.

I am not saying that the American way of looking at Japan is bad oh should be blamed but I am trying to find out the reasons why Japan, China and India have got to be passive to the emerging West in its strategy and policy.

Take Japan and India. These countries are developing with the kind guidance and assistance of the West. On the other hand China is still doing its job by herself, isolating herself from the 'aggression' of the West. I mean by the term, the aggression flow of influence from the West along with economic and militaristic aggression. But it seems to me China, by and large, has been facing historical change through the newly introduced technical and scientific method. Nevertheless the significant point is China's unique way of Change. This is different from Japanese way of Westernization. They created their own type and pattern in every aspect of human activities adopting essentials of Western technology and ideology. In this sense I praise China to great extent.

* * *

Besides the wide spread indifferent attitude toward Japan, some people have a negative image of Japan in this country. The predominant pre-conceived idea of Japanese today has its root in the War. The strong image of sudden attack on Pearl Harbor is prevailing, even among the young students who were born after the War. The image of 'sneaky' and 'brutal' Japanese was formed during the war. Even today war pictures on TV and cinema are appreciated by youngsters overwhelmingly. Two year training in the army is waiting for every college graduate. Therefore the big difference from Japanese students is that U. S. Students tend to think of world politics in terms of militaristic tactic and strategy.

Next, Japanese producers of cheap goods and skillful workers of imitation are quite impressionable in the economic sector. It seems to me they do not go further, to analyze the reason for the cheap wages of workers and the economic dual structure in Japan. At the same time they criticize the terrible westernization of Japan in the modern age. At this point some of them seem to analyze and then sympathize with out country's situation, a big population in small islands with scarce natural resources. On the other hand they reevaluate the tremendously rapid recovery of Japanese economy after the war and feel some kind of surprise in people's efforts in economic development.

The creation of a real image of Japan is to be done after the serious reconsideration of Japanese trade policy. Economic aspect in the image creation is very strong. However hard our Government tries to sell high quality transister radios and cameras, it ends up with failure unless it wipes out the image of cheap and bad products made in Japan! This is the case not only in the United States but also other countries all over the world. The German Volkswagen conquered the market of small size cars in the States. They have got quite reputation among the American consumers. I think this is a good example of clever economic policy.

Another significant point in the image here comes from their interest in Japan purely from the tourists' point of view. They tend to look at Japan as an object of curiosity toward Oriental exoticism. Here Japanese women characterized by Geisha girls play an important role with some sort of fascinating image in motion pictures "Sayonara" and "Flower Drum Song." Most of them are interested in Tokyo as the best entertainment city in the world.

Reevaluation of Japanese culture is, I think, the most significant point as positive image of Japan. But in my judgment it takes more than fifty or one hundred years to introduce the real 'heart' of Japanese culture and way of thinking of the people symbolized by such social codes as Giri-Ninjo or unique aesthetic sense like Monono-Aware Wabi, Iki and so forth. Now I think that these real Japanese feelings could be understood only by those foreigners who studied her history, literature and society, living in Japan twenty or thirty years. The reverse case is the Japanese people's difficulty in understanding of the real meaning of Western ideas like 'common sense', 'freedom' or 'democracy.'

On the representation of Japan, foreign correspondents stationed in Japan should reconsider whether their stories on Japan are really mirroring the true picture or sensational shallow analysis. Most of these images are formed through mass communiction media, movies, soldiers who are stationed in Japan and travelers, mentioning a few of them. Japan has not such a big information agency as USIA, and so the activities of private people are key in the creation of an image. The role of mass media in the formation of an image is vital. In this respect I think the sensational and stereotyped news interpretation from Tokyo through UPI, AP, NBC and CBS should be blamed. For instance, almost all of the well informed students and citizens have heard the name of the Japanese student union 'Zengakuren'. They link the 'notorious' name with a strong impression of big street parades in newspapers and radios every day during the period in which students hold snake-dance demonstrations in front of American Embassy protesting against the nuclear tests in the Pacific Ocean. On the other hand American mass communications did not show much interest in reporting the street demonstration against the Soviet nuclear tests last year. Even if they reported, only a few of the readers find a one-column or one-inch story at the corner of news page. The rest of the people did not even hear about it at all. With this type of sensational approach to the events a majority of the American citizens tend to reach hasty conclusions that all of the anti-nuclear test and disarmament demonstrations held by Japanese students are fundamentally aimed at denouncing the government of the United States. In this respect they are by no means informed of the underlying reason such as student's pacifism and their inclination toward neutral countries. Nothwithstanding the people here are puzzled at the TV news briefs which show the youngsters playing cowboys in western movies made in Japan. It seems to me that it is almost impossible for them to combine the images of present-day Japan, strongly politically-minded student demonstrators and young Tokyo rock 'n' roll singers.

Finally, the lack of integrity in the politics of Japan, especially in her foreign policy is also contributing much to the indifferent attitude of people here toward Japan.

They think that the Japanese Government is a member of their allies. They do not have particular difficulty in dealing with the Ikeda Government now. And in fact they do not pay special attention to, for example, the speech of the Prime Minister or Foreign Minister in the United Nations or a statement at New York air port. This shows the difference of their attitude toward those of Nehru, Adenauer, Sukarno or Nasser. I could point out the lack of prestige in the foreign policy of Japan is most fundamental and a vital issue in the question of American image of Japan.

There are a lot of thick academic study books on Japan but these are limited only to the students with special interest in a particular field, history, art and religion. Nine out of ten citizens have no chance to meet those books. As a matter of fact in big universities students are studying Japanese history or literature. Harvard, Yale or Columbia have good institutes of Japanese studies. But they do not influence the average person greatly. They depend mostly on mass media.

* * *

The most vital thing for the Japanese people to do is not to convert all the things to Western ones but to seriously reevaluate the 'heart' of Japan and try to find out the Japanese way to contribute to the peace of the world. I am afraid that he might have to come to the United States or France if a Japanese student wants to study on Shibui or Zen Buddhism fifty years later from now on. This is the ridiculous aspect of the Japanese people's careless attitude toward their own culture and religion these days.

But on the other hand real Japan could be understood only when the people abroad are able to understand and feel the real sense of Japanese traditional culture and literature, characterized by Sabi, Shiori, Karumi and so on. I am wondering if Japanese must remain an enigma for the Westerners until that time. It is rather easy to teach them Judo, Karate, flower arrangement or tea ceremony but it seems almost impossible at present to explain the real meaning of Giri-Ninjo to the people here.

The easiest way for Easterners, particularly for Japanese, to become understood is to accelerate the speed of Westernization. And this way our coming generations may be communicatable with people and they can even think and feel just the same way as Americans and Europeans do. This is absolutely nonsense, but I am afraid I have to admit the fact that today's Japan shows the tendency of following this pattern conspicuously. This must have been the destiny of small and subordinate civilizations all through the history of the world.

Di-Phi Deadbeats Debate

There were five of us all gathered together to plan a "conservative revolt." There was "Terrible" Roger Foushee who struck such fear into the hearts of lower quad residents three years ago that they summarily replaced him in the Student Legislature and put in a moderate; there was "green" Glen Johnson who was only beginning to terrify students in political science classrooms when Foushee was getting disestablished in the lower quad; there were two freshmen, Bill Dowell of Toddle House fame and Bob Bullard of fame yet to be tested; and there was me. The place was Harry's, the time was late, and the conversation windy. It went something like this:

* * *

Foushee: You're wonrg.

Me: We're right.

Johnson: You're wrong.

Dowell: We're right.

Foushee: The Di ca't meet. Not unless the Di-Phi breaks up.

Bullard: It met, elected officers and drafted a new constitution.

Johnson: But it's illegal. The Di can't meet so long as the Di-Phi exists. That's what we decided three years ago. You remember, Curt? And that little clandestine coffee clatch you had last night just doesn't count. Right?

Me: Wrong.

Foushee: Look at it this way. We're all trying to achieve the same end. Our enemy is Arthur and his constitution. Let's fight that for awhile.

(Editor's note: Arthur is Arthur Hays, noted Machiavellian misdealer and fomenter of disturbances in the lovely order of our way of life. His latest move was to have the audacity to propose a new constitution for the organization that cuts dues, shortens the name, streamlines procedures, and in the process totally disrupts the continuity of 168 years of history.)

Me: Yeah, we oughta steamroller him. After all non-violence is only for race relations.

Johnson: You mean we ought to present articulate organized opposition.

Me: Yeah, that's what I mean.

Foushee: Well, at least you could have been a little more perspicacious.

Johnson: A little more what?

Foushee: Perspicacious. You mean you don't what what that means? Everybody knows what that means, even Curt, don't you?

Me: Yeah. (Besides I wouldn't at that stage of affairs admitted that I didn't even if I didn't.) It's the adjectival form of perspicacity, Glen, everybody knows that.

Johnson: Look, I've been a member of the APSA, UPSA, INSPSA, and I've never heard THAT word used.

Me: Oh, you're a member of ASPA too?

Johnson: Look, you couldn't be a member of the APSA. It's a prof . . . .

Me (being erudite): It's the American Political Science Association and they sent me a card and I sent them $6.

Johnson: I'll have to write them. They made a great mistake.

Foushee: Where were we?

Dowell: I think we were talking about how to keep debating alive on this campus.

Me: Yeah, Operation Steamroller. Get Arthur. (Foaming only slightly) yeah.

Johnson: Who's the parliamentarian?

(Enter deus machina in the person of John Randall, noted campus statistician, keeper of irrelevant records and fouler-up to numerous meetings.)

Randall (preening proudly for large speaking role): Me.

Johnson: Well, that's one problem solved. John, my boy, we've got a little work for you to do.

(Will Operation Steamroller succeed? Will Arthur Hays be derailed? Will the Di-Phi continue as the Di-Phi? And will the idle chatter ever cease? Tune in tonight, 3rd Floor, New West, 7:30 p.m.)

(Oh yeah, they're also discussing an innocuous resolution on the legalization of miscegenation — racial intermarriage. That shouldn't take much time.)

Dr. Bunche Enters Senate Race In N.Y.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI)—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, undersecretary of the United Nations, declined Monday to rule out the possibility that he may become a candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in New York.

The high-ranking Negro diplomat said he doubted very much if there was any better way to serve the nation or the world than in his present U.N. post. But when asked directly if he would run against Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., this fall if he was nominated by the Democrats, Bunche said:

"No one's ever talked to me about it . . . I have enough trouble finding answers to hot questions without seeking to answer hypothetical questions."

TV'S "BEN CASEY": WHY HE'S BITTER ABOUT SUCCESS
At 33, Vince Edwards has hit the jackpot in the role of Ben Casey. "Big deal," he snarls, "I'm an eleven-year overnight sensation." In this week's Post, you'll learn why Edwards is sore at Hollywood. How he struggled for years as a lifeguard, a chorus boy and a motorcycle racer. And why he says: "In this business, they don't want actors."

Spring Teams Decide ACC Titles

By ED DUPREE

Coach Don Skakle's tennis team is the only UNC team favored to win a championship as four Atlantic Coast Conference spring sports titles will be decided this week.

Their two-year winning streak stopped at 34 with the loss to Miami Friday, the netters should completely dominate the ACC tournament at Raleigh Thursday through Saturday. While winning 22 season matches in a row, Skakle's men trimmed Maryland, 7-2, Virginia, 7-2, Duke, 6-3, South Carolina, 9-0, Clemson, 8-1, N. C. State, 8-1, and Wake Forest, 8-1, in ACC action.

Carolina's George Sokol, Ted Hoehn, Bitsy Harrison, and Charlie Shaffer—all sophomores — and junior team captain Keith Stoneman all are top contenders for the singles championship. Sokol and Hoehn should shine the brightest in the doubles competition.

Miami's 6-3 victory Friday ended the regular season on a losing note, but being the Hurricane's 106th victim in a row was no shame. Skakle's "Big Five" each lost in the singles and UNC was down 5-0 before the 3500 fans realized what had happened. Dave Morgan won the number six doubles match and victories in the number two and three doubles followed for the three points.

Wake Forest is the cream of the ACC's golf crop, but the Deacons should have plenty of trouble against the likes of Maryland, Duke, and UNC. The finals start Friday at Winston-Salem.

In a tournament warm-up, UNC led by Pete Green met Wake Forest at Winston-Salem Monday afternoon.

Green finished 13th in the Southern Intercollegiate Golf Tournament at Athens, Ga., last week. He shot a five over par 293 for four rounds. With Homero Blancas leading the way with a 285 Houston's strong team won the championship. The Tar Heels were well down the line in the team scoring.

Maryland (who else?) rules the favorite in the ACC track meet at South Carolina Friday and Saturday. The Terrapins' strongest competition should come from second-place Duke and third-place UNC.

Duke shocked the Tar Heels, 72-64, Saturday to shove the UNC cindermen into third place. Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton, though, can point to their upset of Maryland over the Easter vacation, as an indication that their men are capable of winning the title.

Last—and least, as far as the ACC standings are concerned—is the UNC baseball team which hosts Duke today and travels to Clemson and South Carolina this weekend. Coach Walt Rabb's men fell into eighth place in the conference by losing to Maryland, 6-1, and Virginia, 11-5, over the weekend. The Tar Heels now stand 3-7 with four games remaining on the schedule. They wrap the season up at N. C. State next Monday.

Wake Forest needs only one win in three games this week to win the ACC championship.

Louisburg Rally Pins 10-8 Defeat On Tar Baby Nine

By Lou Rosenthal

Louisburg College, led by Denny Patterson's four for four, came from behind in the bottom of the eighth to beat the Tar Babies, 10-8, at Louisburg Saturday afternoon.

The UNC frosh hit safely 13 times, including five extra base knocks, but left 12 men on base, including seven in the first three innings.

Louisburg had 15 hits, but only one was an extra base hit, Patterson's homer in the seventh.

Dick Fleming and Frank Gallagher led the Tar Babies. Fleming had four for six, and Gallagher was three for four. Each had a double and a triple, and Gallagher drove in four runs.

Ronnie Stanley, who replaced Dick Prindle at second base in the third, had a double and a single in four trips to the plate, and drove in three runs. Prindle was hit on the arm by a pitch in the first, and Coach Bob Deaton took him out when his arm began to swell.

Louisburg scored first with two tallies in the second, but the Tar Babies got back a run in the third. Then in the sixth, after two were out, Staley doubled home Dannemann and Prindle, and Gallagher singled Stanley in.

Louisburg came back with four runs in their half to make the score 6-4. They increased their lead by one when Patterson homered.

The Tar Babies took the lead once more in the eighth, as Prindle led off with a double, and Stanley singled him home. Ken Willard singled, and Gallagher singled both home. Jerry Clark got on by an error, but Gallagher was picked off second. Taylor singled, his second of the day. Bobby Reagan singled home Clark, but when Taylor tried to take third he was thrown out.

The Tar Babies led 8-7, but Louisburg came back to score three in the bottom of the eighth to win.

Bill Dannemann was the starting pitcher for the Tar Babies. He was relieved by Mel Sechrest, who pitched two perfect innings in relief Friday, but was the loser Saturday. Jerry Davis relieved in the eighth, but it was too late. Sechrest is now 1-2.

The Tar Babies play a doubleheader at Duke today. They play on the road Wednesday and Thursday, and return to Emerson Stadium Friday against N. C. State. The season ends Saturday at Wilmington.

The Tar Babies are defending champion in the "Little Big Four." Their record is 10-3, and 6-2 in the "Little Big Four."

Faculty Committee Suspends 80 Pct. Rule—But It Can Be Invoked Again

Unanimous Ruling Reached Yesterday

The 80 per cent rule is no more.

Dean of Student Affairs William G. Long announced yesterday afternoon that the scholastic restriction on fraternities and sororities was suspended by the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and sororities in a unanimous decision.

The suspension became effective immediately. "What was in effect this morning," Long said, "is no longer in effect this afternoon." However it should be noted that the rule has been suspended and not revoked."

The entire responsibility for scholarship in the fraternities will be on the IFC and each individual fraternity.

The change in the scholarship regulations comes as a result of a plan drawn up by the IFC in an effort to retain the initative for self government by the students.

In agreeing to carry out its plan the IFC set up the following four rules:

1. The buil pledge rule, providing automatic depledging of any pledge who fails to become academically eligible for iniation within two semesters after pledging.
2. A two semester "C" average rule, providing of automatic deactivation of any active member of a fraternity who fails for two consecutive semesters to attain a "C" average.
3. A cumulative "C" average rule, providing for the automatic deactivation of an active member of a fraternity who, in any semester, fails to maintain a cumulative average of "C" or better.
4. A one-semester deferment of rushing, effective in the fall of 1964.

Long said that the IFC and the Faculty Council will hold frequent meetings in order to see that the regulations are being carried out. The Office of Student Affairs will also work with the IFC and provide information needed by the fraternities concerning their scholastic standing.

Under the new set up sororities will be free from any university regulation and, temporarily, from any self imposed regulation. However, the Faculty Committee will give further consideration to their situation later. They will probably not be subject to strong regulation in the future because of their satisfactory scholastic record in the past.

Senior Daze

The annual "Senior Day" activities will get underway Thursday morning at 10:30 in Memorial Hall. Seniors will get free cuts to take part.

At that time Mr. and Miss Alumni will be elected as well as permanent class officers. Graduation procedures will be explained and tickets for the remaining Senior Day activities will be distributed.

From 2 to 11 p.m. there will be a party at the Patio, bowling at All Star Lanes at a reduced rate, free movies uptown after 6, golf, food, beer and prizes.

Friday will be "Barefoot Day" and all seniors may go to class with no shoes.

From 8 to 12 p.m. Friday there will be a Senior Dance at Hoenig's Cabin. Senior girls are supposed to swap roles with the men and ask the men to the dance. However, the traditional practice is acceptable.

Don Thompson and the Bontevilles' Combo will be featured.

W. M. Kiplinger To Speak May 15

W. M. Kiplinger, editor of the Kiplinger Washington Letter and Changing Times Magazine , will give an address at the University of North Carolina, Tuesday, May 15.

He will speak in Howell Hall under sponsorship of the UNC School of Journalism. The meeting is open to the public.

He has been a professional journalist for 50 years—46 of these reporting Washington. He has covered the capital as an Associated Press reporter, a business correspondent and an editor. The distinguishing mark of his career has been his ability to translate Washington events so that the people back home may see how it affects them.

Kiplinger was a pioneer in reporting the economic impact of governmental policies and activities. He was one of the first to recognize that readers needed more economic coverage of Washington in words they could understand.

He was one of the first two journalism graduates of Ohio State University. At 25 he was covering the Ohio State Legislature for Associated Press. He then came to Washington as an AP correspondent.

In 1923 he founded the Kiplinger Washington Letter, and it has remained in continuous weekly publication. His publications now include his Tax Letter, his Agricultural Letter, his Florida Letter, and Changing Times, a monthly magazine.

2 More Laotian Towns Fall To Reds; Government Troops Forced To Retreat

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — The Royal government reported Tuesday that two more Laotian outpost towns have fallen to pro-communist troops. It said Red forces were in close pursuit of government troops fleeing from the captured stronghold of Nam Tha.

A government military communique said pro-Communist rebels had captured the northern outpost of Muong Nga, 35 miles north of the Royal capital of Luang Prabang.

It said Muong Nga was taken by troops from Muong Sai, which had served as the main supply base for the Nam Tha push. A U. S. source said the force may have trapped two Laotian infantry battalions.

In southern Laos, the government communique said, a numerically superior force of rebels drove the company-strength garrison from the outpost of Saravane.

Chinese Pressing Garrison

The government also said that two Chinese Communist battalions and one North Viet Namese battalions were pressing remnants of the government garrison retreating from Nam Tha, captured by Red forces during the weekend.

The reports of new Communist successes came amid these other Laotian developments:

—Members of the three-nation International Control Commission prepared to fly Wednesday to the leftist "capital" to try to probe the reasons behind the sudden Communist offensive in Laos. The British, Polish and Canadian commissioners will be accompanied by the British co-chairman of the Geneva conference on Indochina, Malcom MacDonald. The mission may be in vain, however, because most of the neutralist and pro-Communist Pathet Lae leaders are reported to be out of the country.

—U. S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, chairman of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived in Bangkok Tuesday for talks with Thailand officials on the increased Communist threat in Laos and other Asian nations.

Boun Oum Seeking Aid

—Laotian Royal government Premier Boun Oum arrived in Malaya at the head of a Laotian goodwill and aid-seeking mission and said the civil war is in reality a "fight between a small country and international communism."

—In London, British Lord Privy Seal Edward Heath told Commons the British government is asking the Soviet foreign minister to use his influence to persuade the Communist forces to withdraw and to arrange for an immediate investigation of the situation by the International Control Commission.

—In Moscow, the U. S. and British ambassadors called on Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and were believed to have delivered a request that the Soviets join the Wst in an appeal that the Laos cease-fire be respected.

JFK Vows To Stop Inflation Through Labor, Management

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI)—President Kennedy vowed Tuesday to exert equal pressure on management and labor to hold off inflation and said if the American people disapproved of his tactics "then they should secure the services of a new President."

Kennedy told a cheering United Auto Workers convention he intended to be an active President and to vigorously defend the public interest whether it was threatened by management or unions.

"I believe it is the business of the President . . . to concern himself with the general welfare and the public interest and if the people feel it is not, then they should secure the services of a new President of the United States," Kennedy said.

The President flew here in his new jet-powered helicopter to address the convention and returned immediately afterward to Washington. His words on the responsibility of labor and corporations to avoid any new inflationary spiral were tough despite reports the UAW favored wage increases.

Applaud Kennedy Constantly

The 10,000 delegates, wives and school children in huge Convention Hall gave Kennedy a two-minute ovation on arrival and interrupted him constantly with thunderous applause during his 30-minute speech.

But the union audience did not cheer his latest appeal for wage restraint.

Kennedy declared that the "ferocious" struggle against communism around the world and increasing foreign compe tition for world markets made it essential to avoid any new inflationary spiral.

Kennedy said he did not intend to impose wage or price controls but would rely on voluntary cooperation from both sides of the bargaining table to achieve "responsible" settlements.

The President, who has come under increasing fire from business leaders for his dramatic drive to roll back steel price increases, shrugged off these criticisms.

He said some people felt the President should behave like the honorary chairman of a great fraternal organiation but this clashed with constitutional mandates.

Must Resist Advances

At a time when U.S. forces are poised to resist Communist advances from Red-encircled Berlin to South Vietnam, he said, the administration must resist unjustified wage-price advances.

"We have two tasks in economic policy—to create demand so that we will have a market for all that we can produce and to avoid inflation," the President said. "While individual adjustments may have to be made to fit the previous patterns in individual industry, in general a wage policy which seeks its gains out of the fruit of technology instead of the pockets of consumers is the one basic approach that can help every segment of the economy," he said.

Kennedy told the UAW delegates that wage increases generally should be confined to increases in productivity gains. In this way, he said, pay boosts will not trigger higher prices.

U.S. To Continue Berlin Conferences Despite Objections

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States pointedly told West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer Tuesday that it would continue Berlin talks with the Russians despite his objections.

The State Department said in effect that if Adenauer had a better plan to solve the Berlin problem he should come forward with it.

But as long as this wasn't the case, the department said, it would push ahead with its own proposals.

Even as the State Department was issuing its statement, the chancellor was continuing his public opposition to the current series of U.S.-Soviet discussions. He said in Berlin that the talks "have not been successful and I do not know why they should be continued."

Publishing Risky, Press Director Says

By MATT WEISMAN

W. T. Crouch, once director of the UNC Press in 1943 cautioned against labelling the Press as "arrived" or "successfully established."

Today, one needs very little caution in calling the Press a Southeastern leader in the field of book-publishing and one of the half-dozen great university presses in the nation.

Forty years ago, the Press was but a fledgling non-stock corporation operating under the authority of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University, the control of the Press being invested in a Board of Governors comprised of 15 men serving staggered terms of 5 years each. The Press has in these years expanded from its original conception as a media for serving the scholarly interest of the University and faculty to world horizons of meeting and creating intellectual needs.

From the Press's one bound book of the first year it has expanded to the point where '62 publishing list contains 842 books in print and plans for 42 new titles by the end of the year. From its hope of distributing in North Carolina, the Press has moved to a distribution sphere that encompasses all 50 states and 76 countries, including several communist nations.

Much of the press's accomplishments can be contributed to its imaginative directors. The roll call of directors reads as follows: Dr. Louis Round Wilson, who is largely responsible for getting together several editors of departmental journals and incorporating the Press in 1922. Dr. Wilson served as director for 1922 to '32 at which time he left the University to become Dean of the Graduate Library School at the University of Chicago. Taking his place with W. T. Couch, a graduate of the University served from '32 to '45 when he went to Chicago to become

HONOR COUNCIL

Applications and interviews for one position on the Men's Honor Council for 1962-1963 will be held today and tomorrow afternoon in the Student Government president in G.M. The selection will not be based on geographical district.

Intetviews for the office of Chairman of Campus Chest will be held at the same time and place.

GMAB Interviews

Bob Rearden,, president of the GMAB, announced that interviews will be held today for the various Graham Memorial Activities Board Committees. The interviews will be held by the newly appointed chairmen in the Activities Board office on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

The committees and their chairmen are: Bill Selden, Social; Don Curtis, Drama; Jim Compton, Films; Jack Hill, Music; and Nelson Irvine, publicity.

"The committee members will be responsible for the planning, coordinating, and implementing of the activities of the respective committees," Rearden said. "There is a definite need for interested, qualified students in every area."

An expanded budget recently adopted by the Graham Memorial Board of Directors will allow an expansion of the overall programming o fthe Activities Board.

"The expanded budget means a greater responsibilty not only for the chairmen, but also for the committee members," stated Reardon. "We would like to see as many as possible sign up or interviews,especially reshmen and sophomores."

Weekly meetings with the new committees will begin next week so that preliminary plans for next year's activities can be made.

Students with conflicts today should contact the committee chairmen in order to set up an appointment for another time.

Yackety Yacks

Today is the last day for the distribution of the 1962 Yackety Yack. The books will be handed out, upon display of your Student I.D. card, from 2:00 to 7:00 p.m. at the outside basement of Graham Memorial. Free packing boxes will also be given away free to anyone who wants them.

CWC

CWC will meet tonight at 6:30 in the Grail Room. All activities and social chairmen are asked to attend.

YRC

Young Republican Club will meet tonight at 7:30 in the Law School Court Room. Officers for next year will be elected.

Aquaholics Meet

The weekly meeting of the Carolina Aquaholics Skindiving Club will be held early tomorrow evening. It will be held at poolside in Woollen gym at 7:00. This will be a dry meeting. All members are urged to be present as this will be a very important meeting. Anyone interested in joining for next year or any girls who would like to join are urged to come at this time.

Thank you,

Rob Cheek

ASPA

ASPA will meet tonight at 8 for the final meeting of the year. Members are requested to bring all club documents.

French Minister Decontaminated After Atom Test

PARIS (UPI) — The unexpected escape into the air of radioactive gases from France's May Day underground explosion in the Sahara forced Defense Minister Pierre Messmer and several technicians to undergo decontamination, reliable French sources reported Tuesday.

A spakesman for the Defense Ministry refused to confirm or deny the report.

"Anything connected with our nuclear test program is a military secret and no information can be given about it," the spokesman said.

According to the sources, small quantities of radioactive vapors swirled up from the surface after the underground explosion of the nuclear device at the French proving grounds in the Hoggar Mts. of the Sahara.

Messmer and a number of technicians watching the test—the first by France in more than a year—changed their clothes and were decontaminated purely as a precautionary measure, according to the report.

It was said that a check with Geiger counters did not indicate that Messmer or the others in fact had been contaminated by the radioactive leakage.

Mangum Medal Contest Set

The Willie P. Mangum Medal Award will be presented to the winner of a speaking contest to be held Friday, May 9, 1962, at 4:00 in 105 Caldwell Hall. The contest is open to all seniors.

The speech is a 10-minute extemporaneous speech (the contestants may research and prepare for the speech but must coin the language of the speech during presentation). Contestants may speak on the subject of their choice.

The Mangum Award is presented annually and the purpose of the Award is to promote interest and participation in public speaking. Dr. Donald Springen, Director of Debate, is in charge of the event.

SIT-IN

Edward Opton last week pled nolo contendere and was fined in the trial of a sit-in case dating from June, 1961.

Opton, white secretary of the State NAACP Youth Chapter, was arrested for sitting in the Negro section of the Chapel Hill bus terminal's lunch counter. The terminal facilities are now closed.

The trial was held in Orange County Superior Court.

'EXPORTING CULTURE'

Patterson Headed For Korea

A drive to "export our culture" to Korea has been launched by Professor Tom Patterson of the UNC Drama Department.

Patterson, who has recently been awarded a 1962-63 Fulbright Fellowship to teach playwriting in Dong Kook University and to direct plays at the Drama Center in Seoul, Korea, wants to take as many drama books with him as he can.

"This will be a gift from the UNC student body to the students at Dong Kook," he said. "What we want to do is to export our culture. We want to show them that we are not nincompoops like the Communists say.

"There is only one idea about Communism, but there are 1,000 Americas. Here is our chance to show the Koreans that America is not just a land of bathtubs and automobiles."

The Korean schools are in desperate need of books, Patterson said. "Since the war most of the cities and schools have been rebuilt but the desperate need is books. Because of the great difference in money value, it is a very slow process for them to collect books. That is why I'm going to take as many over with me as I can."

Professor Patterson has compiled a list of paperback books he wants but will take any old drama books that students will donate. Money for books or old books can be turned in at the YWCA office.

Drama groups in Korea became important when the Koreans began using drama to evade Japanese suppression around the turn of the century. "Always there were groups that rebelled against the Japanese," Patterson said, "and one of these were the drama groups.

"They became interested in western drama because it was a drama of ideas. It had something to say and they used it to express ideas of freedom and democracy."

Finally these groups were quelched by the Japanese but immediately sprang up again after World War II. Because of American aid during the Korean War, they became extremely interested in American drama.

Dong Kook is a great Buddist University and the only institution in Asia known to have a department of drama. This department was set up by Sun-Sam Lee, a UNC graduate who took his Master's Degree in the Department of Dramatic Art in 1959. During the two years he was at UNC as a student Lee worked closely with Patterson in playwriting and in other theater activities.

The Seoul Drama Center is an ultra-modern theater built under the direction of Che-jin Yu, one of Korea's best-known writers. Patterson became acquainted with Mr. Yu when the latter visited Chapel Hill in 1957, while on a tour of the U.S. University theaters.

Impressed with the work of the Carolina Playmakers over the years, Yu felt that it would serve as a model for a dramatic organ-

Thanks

Another blow has been dealt to the force of ignorance, and we would like to thank pharmacy student Benjamin Brown and his wife for striking it.

After being denied twice the right to register for the Chapel Hill primary, Brown and his wife persevered and returned for a third try. Their patience paid off, and the Estes Hills registrar, while mumuring, "I hope I don't go to jail," listed them in the book.

By meeting all o fthe super special specifications, Brown and his wife have succeeded in breaking through the previously almost inpenetrable wall of ignorance that have kept qualified University students from voting in past Chapel Hill elections.

By getting into the registration books, hopefully, the Browns have managed to set some sort of precedent for the future registration of qualified and interested students.

We would like to thank the swell town of Chapel Hill for recognizing that when a students meets the legal requirements, the extra-legal requirements, and the extraly-extra-legally-legal requirements, he might just be qualified to register, perhaps even to vote. (cw)

K. Pig & Castro

Deepest, darkest Pogoland apparently has been invaded by two strange creatures from faraway lands. One, who very much resembles a Caribbean Savior-style dictator, is a goat named Fido.

The other is the lovable Mr. K. Pig. (However, it is doubtful if he is any relation to any of our campus's famous Capitalistic Pigs, lovingly called "porkers.") K. Pig, shown above with his friend, intends to upset the economy of the United States with a fiendish plot involving "inner-state trade." The exploits of these marvelous beasts will be carried in Pogo's daily strip in the DTH. (jc)

Joan Baez

Tonight, Joan Baez, one of the most talented and spell-binding folk singers of recent decades, will grace the stage of Memorial Hall.

Much has been, and undoubtedly will continue to be said about the voice and skill of Miss Baez. She has performed at Universities across the nation and without commercializing her style, has left audiences raving.

Those of us who have only been fortunate enough to hear her two recordings, and we are in the majority, must hold our breath in anticipation. Those of us who have managto attend a personal performance may hope she is only half as good.

Her Mexican-Irish parentage is considered by many to be the ideal heritage for folk music mastery. Her professional career has been relatively short but widely acclaimed.

That Graham Memorial Activities Board was able to book Miss Baez is quite a feather in their collective cap. That Carolina students will be able to enjoy her performance for nothing is certainly virtually amazing.

But of all the things that may be said about tonight's performance, there is one statement that cannot be left unnoted.

Would all of you rude, ill-mannered, and annoying animals that ruin German's concerts, or that simply can't sit still for the duration of one song, or that don't appreciate true talent, would all of you please go somewhere and have a beer. And let those who deserve this program enjoy it. (cw)

Letters To The Editor

More On Derby, Gans, Tradition

S. Chi Dubs Sir Wuamett

To the Editor:

Every year for the past eighteen there has been a Sigma Chi Derby, this year no exception. Every year also for the past eighteen there has emerged some puritanic crusader against either the "immaturity," the "vulgarity," or the "plain senselessness" of the event, this year being no exception.

The crusader for 1962, a Bill Wuamett, assailed the Derby in the unique manner of the intellectual. His jousting of the Derby was as entertainingly witty as it was edifying. If you read his article in the Tar Heel you undoubtedly learned about the sex-life of the pagan pole-dancers and you were asked to chuckle at his analogistic description of the Sigma Chi "orgy." He seemed to think that the Fraternity was a bit amateurish in its re-enactment of the ancient rites of fertility.

Crusader let me brief you first on a little history and then a little fact. Since Adam and Eve there have been clothes. The evolution of the fig leaf of Eden has accompanied that of man as have the guilt, shame and subsequent inhibitions associated with it. The Sgma Chi's are not to blame for the advent of clothing, and as our social mores as well as the laws of state and University make it impossible, the parading of the entire feminine physique, adorable as it is, is out of question. Now as for your reasoning—it was as unsyllogistic as your comparisons were illogical, and since unbacked literary name-calling would be as childish as your crusade, I'll tell you why:

First of all, being the back-slapping, rib-tickling extrovert your article makes you seem, you must be aware of the trend the anecdote has taken in the past one hundred decades. Since clothes and Sunday School Teachers and as a result of that bad old serpent and all the shame and guilt he caused us to feel humor and entertainment have taken a turn to relieve us of a modicum of our pentup desires (viz—urges), or at least to alleviate their disturbing existence by making it a laughing matter. Which do you advocate—the normal, healthy and permissible belly-laugh or the more normal but strictly forbidden orgy?

Out of compliance with University regulations, we did all we were able to prevent alcohol from being spilt on the field of humor; the inevitability of that which slipped by may perhaps be explained by the where-there's-strife-there's-bud theory. You state that Carolina boys "will be boys," and in a manner of speaking you are dead right; but do you know what a Carolina boy is? Yes, he might well enjoy a good, romping Roman orgy but has learned this is modern civ 1962 and he mustn't, so instead he drinks beer and laughs, plays tennis and laughs, smokes and laughs, reads Playboy and laughs, listens to shady jokes and laughs, and goes to the Derby and laughs!

Crusader, why don't you excrete your intellectual potency elsewhere? Form an anti-sex league; ally yourself with the DAR's and re-enact prohibition; initiate a law against dirty-joke telling; outlaw tobacco and Playboy and Peanuts; or better still, go yourself to the devil and tell him to stop making us do the things we do, but let up on the Derby.

—DUSTY SCHOCH

Enough Silent Sams Already

To the Editors:

(In reply to Mr. Rosenthal's letter on campus traditions:)

Would not the desire for a University atmosphere conducive to active participation in campus activities and to creative student thought and endeavor be a better tradition to perpetuate than the deification of the Old Well or the revival of the panty raid? I believe we have enough Silent Sams for the pigeons to commemorate.

Writer Hits Gans's Article

To the Editors:

In reference to Curtis Gans' articles concerning Kappa Sigs and public transportation, may I state that I am in favor of what appears to be his basic philosophy of "the individual student finding for himself the key to a richer fulfillment of his own person," but I do not construe this to give anyone the right to make unfounded remarks against a group or individual. I am speaking not against the original article, which leaves much to be desired as proper material for our paper, but against the inference in the May 4 article that the facts of the original article were not checked for accuracy and that justice was to be upheld by running a Kappa Sig article on the same page. The assumption here that whoever read one article would read the other is both invalid and dangerous.

I was prompted to write this letter mainly due to Mr. Gans' levity in explaining that his original article was not factually correct and in his implication that this is of no importance. Just as Mr. Gans feels strongly against students "expressing their cumulative ignorance in the dormitories and fraternities or their collective impotence in Harry's or Byron's", I feel strongly repelled by his articles.

I am not a member of any fraternities, and am not prima facie defending them; I simply feel that the articles mentioned above require comment.

Success Costs Less

When the fighting ended in Korea in 1953, this was the reckoning:

800,000 Koreans homeless;

415,000 Korean soldiers dead;

56,000 U.N. troops from the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Turkey, Australia, France, Colombia, Ethiopia Greece, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, New Zealand, South Africa, Thailand, and the Philippines dead.

The dollar cost to the United States was $18,000,000,000—and we haven't finished paying for it yet. The current expense of maintaining armed forces in Korea, as well as policing the truce, runs in excess of $100,000,000 a year.

The question that many people asked about the Korean War at the time was whether the U.N. might not have been able to prevent it from occurring by having troops at the highly volatile dividing line between the two parts of orea. In a more general way, of course, people have asked why the U.N. has to wait until a crisis develops into a shooting war before it is able to act.

These questions are being answered today. For this is precisely what the U.N. has been doing in the Congo. All the elements of a super-Korea were present in the Congo in July, 1960, when the Congo became an independent nation. The Congo is situated in the heart of Africa and has radiating power throughout a large part of the continent. It is one of the richest nations in the world in terms of material resources, being a prime producing center for copper, tin, uranium, and cobalt.

The Congolese were not prepared for self-government. The result was the kind of disintegration that made it a potential arena of conflict among outside powers. Belgium's troops returned in an attempt to restore order. The Soviet Union sent arms, trucks, and planes to the Congo at the personal request of the then Premier, Patrice Lumumba. The United Nations sent troops to restore order and reduce the danger that the vacuum in the Congo would be filled by the Soviet Union or any other outside nation, large or small. The United States government supported the action of the U.N. in the Congo both because of its commitment to an independent Africa and because Soviet troops in the African heartland might have forced a U.S. decision to go into the Congo with force of its own.

In any event, the only agency in the world that was in a position to head off a showdown situation acted in time. It sent 20,000 troops. It also sent large numbers of teachers, engineers, doctors, dentists, lawyers, business and trade experts, agricultural specialists, road builders, mechanics, communications and transportation experts.

Danger in the Congo has not been fully dissolved. But for the first time since July, 1960, when the trouble began, affairs in the Congo seem to be in hand. The threat of the big-power confrontation has sharply diminished. The United Nations still faces an ordeal in the Congo, but it has already made its most important contribution to world peace since its founding.

It costs money to fight a war. It also costs money to avert one. The cost of maintaining U.N. stabilizing operations in the Congo has been about $10,000,000 a month. This is added to the cost of maintaining U.N. emergency forces in Gaza. As a result, the U.N. will have an estimated deficit of almost $200,000,000 by the end of 1962. The money has to come from somewhere. If it doesn't, the U.N. cannot continue. It is not a national sovereign government that can levy taxes or maintain a debt indefinitely. Therefore, the U.N. is asking the member nations to subscribe to a bond issue of $200,000,000. The money would be repaid over a twenty-five year period with an annual interest yield of 2 per cent.

The question now before the United States is whether it will subscribe to its full share. The United States, enjoying 80 per cent of the world's income, has a quota of only half the full amount of the bond issue, or $100,000,000. This is equivalent to less than one cent for every five dollars we put into national armaments each year. It is far less than the amount we write off each year in false starts in manufacturing military equipment or in planes or missiles that are obsolete even before they go into general production. It is less than one-fifth of one per cent of the cost of putting a man on the moon. Finally it is less than it costs to fight a war in Korea for only one week. Yet an attempt is being made in the United States to block the required appropriation of funds—not a gift, not an assessment, but a loan repayable with interest.

What is being debated now is the cost of U.N. success. It might be useful to consider what the cost would be if the U.N. should fail. In the latter case, the amount of the bond issue could be multiplied by one thousand times or even ten thousand times and no one would have any way of knowing whether it would be enough. But the essential question has nothing to do with dollars or bond issues or deficits. The essential question is whether the peace of the world can be kept without a world organization and, also, what has to be done to develop that organization into an agency with the responsible powers of enforceable law. For if the U.N. can evolve into such a body, then the people on this earth have a reasonable chance of staying alive, improving the conditions of meaningful existence, and advancing the prospects of human freedom.

Reactions By Wuamett

YAF Contribution

"The man who beat the bond issue" is the label that has been applied to A. G. Whitener, a candidate for congress in the Democratic primary in the sixth district and the leader of the North Carolina Conservative Party.

Whitener spoke to the Young Americans for Freedom Monday night and outlined his views on what the modern Conservative believes and advocates.

It is good that Whitener was not received too enthusiastically, but YAF has chosen the wrong grounds on which to criticize him.

After his speech, numerous members commented that Whitener was a very poor political speaker, and that he had apparently not crystallized his own views enough to be able to present them intelligently. But very little criticism was heard of the opinions that Whitener was able present in his own rambling way.

Whitener, for instance, opposes the Alliance for Progress by calling it a "one-world globaloney." He also opposes "atheist communism," but he apparently has no idea of how to prevent the spread of communism to Latin America without spending some money. The people of these countries want a better standard of living whether it comes by reform or revolt, and it should be rather apparent by now that revolts by impoverished peoples rarely lead to democratic governments. Yet no YAF member questioned Whitener on this plank in his "economy platform."

Whitener also opposes the Peace Corps by stating that it promotes "one-world" communism and socialism, enriches foreign politicians and gangsters, inflates the native economy, and forces Americans on these people who neither understand nor appreciate the native cultures. No YAF member opposed him on this point, either.

Disarmament and the United Nations are also opposed by this Conservative stalwart. The first, he says, is "strategic surrender," and the second with "the world is not ready for the UN." Once more, there was no YAF opposition.

Does this mean that the views of A. G. Whitener are the views of YAF? I think not. The lack of criticism by YAF members seems to indicate rather that they endorse a frequent fallacy of today's Conservative. They seem to feel that candidates who call themselves Conseratives are good no matter how reactionary their views may be.

It is precisely this viewpoint that endangers the growth of a rational and respectable Conservatism today. Far too often the far-right reactionary is accepted with the rationalization that, "sure he's too radical, but at least he's on our side."

Barry Goldwater stated in "Conscience of a Conservative" that the Conservative is not to be necessarily "against" things (although he seems a little hazy as to what he is "for"). If the UNC-YAF agrees with Sen. Goldwater, why did they not point out some of the absurdities in Whitener's platform? Why did they not mention that the purpose of the Peace Corps is exactly the opposite of what he states, and why did they not state that it should be the objective of the Conservative to see that the Peace Corps is intelligently administered, and to insure that it is not infiltrated by Communist organizers?

The realistic Conservative should realize that spending and foreign aid are necessary to our survival. Why then did no YAF member point out to Whitener that it is the Conservative's duty to see that the Alliance for Progress is economically administered, graft-free, and not extended to countries which refuse to initiate reforms in education and land distribution. Instead, there was silence on this issue by these "indigent young intellectuals."

If YAF is to make any contribution to this campus and to the world outside, it must do more than endorse candidates such as Whitener by silent vote.

There seem to be two courses open to this organization, and its choice will determine if it is to gain a respected and influential voice on this campus. If it shares Whitener's views, or allows men such as he to call themselves Conservatives without a challenge, then its efforts are futile.

If it can, however, purge itself of reactionaries and return to the path of rational Conservatism, then it can fill a pressing need by challenging the liberalism that seems to be accepted here as the one and only true word of God.

The present director, serving since 1948, is Lambert Davis, a graduate of the University of Virginia, held a position as an editor with a New York publishing house before coming to UNC as the Press director. He is energetically continuing the pattern of advancement which has marked the Press's history.

These men have each been confronted with major obstacles. Starting a press in an area which is without any tradition of publishing; which is not predominantly book-minded; and which provided more good-will than funds or publishable manuscripts presented steep hurdles to overcome. Only one cloth-bound book was published the first year. Though the number of books published increased surely but slowly in the first few years of life of the Press, each new book was a new problem in financing, and each publication date a victory.

Throughout the struggle, the Press has continually striven for its set objectives.

The objectives of the UNC Press have been regional yet not provincial; to serve the University not reach all the levels of the Southern population; "to," as Director Davis recently stated, "provide a way for the academic community to speak to all educated men, and to publish studies from the world-wide community of scholars thus facilitating communications among researchers and writers everywhere. In the forty years since its conception, the University Press has taken many new steps since its first publication—Dr. W. C. Coker's "Saprolegniaceae With Notes on Other Water Molds."

UNC Tops Duke, 8-7, With Big 8th Inning

Frosh Wins Pair From Imps

By LOU ROSENTHAL

Carolina's freshman baseball team completed a four-game sweep from the Duke frosh, as they downed the Blue Imps 9-2, and 6-2, in a double-header yesterday at Duke Stadium.

The Tar Babies scored seven runs in the first inning of the first game, to give pitcher Walton Ward a cushion he never lost. It was Ward's third victory without a loss.

Ken Boykin slammed a bases-empty in-the-park homer in the fifth, to add to the Tar Baby lead. It was his first homer of the year.

The Tar Babies could only manage four hits, but two were for extra bases, Boykin's round tripper, and Dick Fleming's double in the first inning. Bobby Reagan and Frank Gallagher each had a single to round out the hitting.

Ward gave up only seven hits in goin the route.

In the second game, the freshmen knocked Imp pitcher Dean Helms for ten hits, including a double by Gallagher, a triple by pinchhitter Tom Sharpe, and another three-bagger by Dick Prindle.

Merle Kruer, Ron Barlow, and pitcher Jerry Davis each had two singles apiece, and Gallagher added a base knock to supply the Tar Baby prower.

Davis won his fourth game of the season, and his fifth complete game. His only loss was to Wake Forest in an extra-inning game.

Davies struck out 5 men, and Ward whiffed 7.

Neal Is Ninth In ACC Hitting

UNC's Larry Neal and Paul Swing are the only Tar Heels hitting .300 or better in ACC baseball action. Buddy Tilden is batting .333 but hasn't had enought at bats to be eligible for the title.

Neal is ninth in the conference with a .343 mark. The third baseman from Kannapolis has 24 hits in 70 at bats. Swing is 12th with 24 hits in 72 appearances, an even .333 mark.

Tom Brown of Maryland is leading the league's hitters with a lofty .424 average and is well within reach of the conference batting record of .429, set in 1955 by Andy Cockrell of Duke.

Roger Coon of Wake Forest leads the ACC in homers with six. The Deacon slugger, fourth in the batting race with a .375 mark, also shares the RBI lead with Clemson's Buddy Nixon and Duke's Dave Uible. All three have driven in 26 runs. Coon set the ACC RBI record last year with 38.

Deac Golfers Club Tar Heels By 20-7

UNC's All-American Pete Green suffered his first dual match defeat of the year Monday as Wake Forest's strong golf team drubbed Coach Ed Kenney's linksmen, 20-7, on the Oldtown Club course in Winston-Salem.

Green, sporting 12 wins and two ties for dual matches, was defeated, 3-0, by Deacon ace Ken Folkes in the first of two warm-ups for UNC before the ACC championships Friday and Saturday at Winston-Salem.

Thursday the Tar Heel golfers meet Clemson on the Winston-Salem course. A victory for UNC would make its regular season ACC mark 4-3 and its overall mark 11-5.

Mike Dore was the only Carolina golfer who managed a win in the Wake Forest loss. Dore defeated Wake's Larry Allgood, 2-1.

The Deacon's Dennis Milne shot a two-under-par 69 for medalist honors.

The summry:

Frank Lock (WF) def. Jay Harris, 2-1; Mike Dore (NC) def. Lardy Allgood, 2-1; Best ball, WF 1½-NC 1½.

By ED DUPREE

North Carolina's Tar Heels rapped out six singles and scored four runs in the eighth inning Tuesday to take an 8-7 win over Duke's Blue Devils.

The visitors from Durham had tied the score at 4-4 in the top of the inning after being down 4-0 at the end of the sixth frame.

Dave Murr's pitching kept the Dukes in check over the first six innings. The tall redhead was touched for an infield single in the first inning, but hurled no-hit ball for the next five frames while his team mates built up a four-run lead.

A ground rule double hit by Tom Taylor started the Dukes on their way in the seventh. Taylor's two-bagger was a grounder hit to right field which bounced over Heyward Hull's shoulder and rolled under the fence. Brooks Fader walked and then Bob Rankin got his only hit of the day, a hard-hit triple down the left field line which drove in two runs. Rankin scored when the Tar Heel catcher Bernie Isgett let a third strike get past him—the only Carolina error of the game.

The Devils picked up another marker in the eighth. Bob Turner, the Duke pitcher, reached base on an infield hit and his courtesy runner took second on a wild pitch. Rabb then removed Murr, who pitched seven innings of four-hit ball but seemed to be tiring. Reliever Bob Carter walked Bucky Fader and Taylor sacrificed to advance the runners. The run scored Carter's wild pitch. Bob Wacker then came on to strike out Rankin and retire Dave Uible on a grounder.

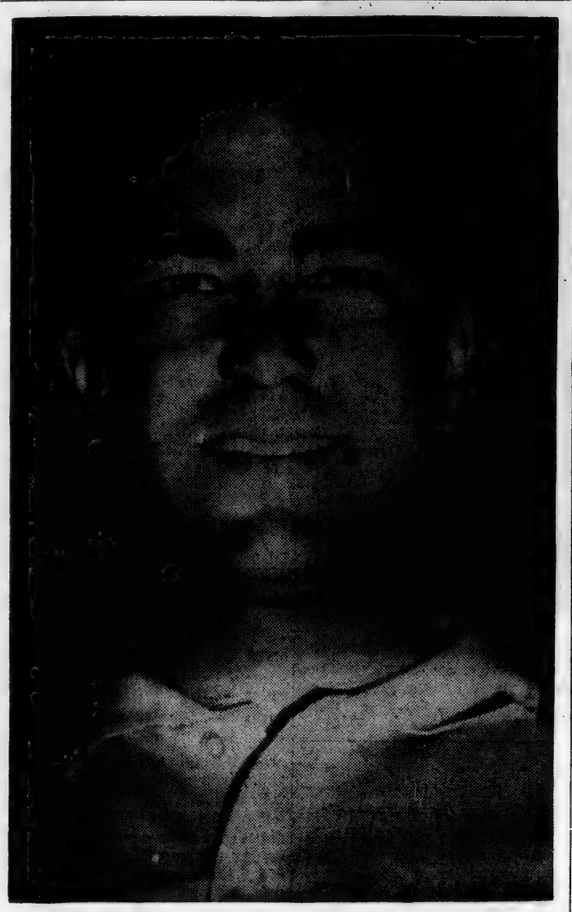
Paul Swing led off UNC's four-run eighth inning with a single off the pitcher's leg. After Larry Neal had popped up attempting to sacrifice, Hull singled to center to advance Swing to third. Jud Spainhour drove in the first run o fthe inning with a hit between short and third.

Duke's ace hurler Dick Densmore then came on and was greeted by a well-hit single to left by Len Dellolio, scoring Jim Speight, running for Hull. Isgett flied out and Wacker singled to right to drive in Spainhour. Cronin Byrd drove in the Tar Heel's final run with another hit to right.

Byrd's RBI turned out to be the deciding run when the Dukes added three more runs to their total in the ninth. Bucky Fader drove in one and Taylor two. All three runs were charged to Wacker with Bob Cox coming on to pitch to the last four men. He retired three of the four, giving up a hit to Taylor.

Wacker was the winning pitcher for Carolina, Turner the loser for Duke.

Dellolio, Byrd, Spainhour, and Buddy Tilden each had two hits for Coach Walt Rabb's team. Taylor was the only Blue Devil to get two hits.



PETE GREEN, an All-American golfer as a junior in 1961, suffered his first dual match defeat of the 1962 season Monday when Wake Forest's Ken Folkes defeated him 3-0. Green had won 12 and tied two in the first 14 dual matches of the season.

Broome Is New YRC President

Bud Broome was elected President of the UNC Young Republican Club for 1962-63 at its last meeting for this academic year held Tuesday night. Also elected were: Win Sargent, First Vice-President; Clement Lucas, Second Vice-President; Ann Daniels, Secretary-Treasurer; and Mack Armstrong, Corresponding Secretary and Editor of the Newsletter.

Outgoing President Earl Baker spoke briefly to the group, expressing his appreciation of the effective work done by the members of the club and the executive committee, which resulted in the Carolina Club's being awarded the Outstanding YR Club in North Carolina.

He also encouraged the members to work during the summer and in the fall for thie election of Republican Congressman.

Broome in his acceptance speech praised the work of Baker, and called upon the members for a continued effort during the coming elections.

He said, "Our membership goal for next year is to enlist at least 400 members, to help push onward with the goal of sound government in North Carolina under the GOP banner .The tide of sentiment against "High Tax Terry" is on our side, and we shall be victorious."

UNC Student Charged With Stealing Tire

UNC student Patrick May has been charged with larceny by Chapel Hill Police on a warrant sworn out by James Bowman, 211 W. Rosemary Street.

The warrant charges May with attempted theft of a tire that was leaning against Bowman's house.

At 11:20 Tuesday night police received a report from Bowman that his daughter had seen a man prowling around his house. He went out to look and saw a man running away with the tire. Bowman shouted for him to stop and then fired a shotgun blast into the air when he kept running.

At 11:50 police received a report from May that someone had shot him. The "someone" proved to be Bowman.

May was admitted to the student infirmary where Dr. Harris said he suffered no serious permanent injury.

Senate Rejects Cloture

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate leadership suffered a decisive defeat Wednesday in its effort to halt debate on a voting rights bill. But it immediately set in motion the machinery for a new showdown Monday.

In a swift series of developments:

—The Senate rejected 53 to 43—21 votes short of the required two-thirds margin—a petition to impose cloture and bring the measure up for an immediate vote.

—Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield asked unanimous consent to put a nine-hour limit on further debate. Southern chief strategist Sen. Richard B. Russell blocked the move by objecting.

—The bipartisan leadership promptly filed a new cloture petition.

Monday's vote could tell the tale for this second civil rights bill of the year. Mansfield has indicated that if cloture is voted down on the second try he will give up the fight until 1963.

Yack Co-Editors Receive Senior Publication Award

Nicholas Dickon Reppucci and Jerome Joseph Tognoli, co-editors of the 1962 Yackety Yack, have been chosen as co-recipients of the Ernest H. Abernethy Award by a special committee appointed by the Chancellor.

The Abernethy Award is given annually to "the member of the senior class who has made the most significant contribution in the area of student publications." Tognoli and Reppucci each will receive an engraved plaque and $25.

Reppucci has worked on the staff of the Carolina Quarterly and the Carolina Handbook and served on this year's Publications Board. He is a psychology honors student and Phi Beta Kappa member and will be continuing his studies in psychology as a Woodrow Wilson fellow at Harvard.

Jerry Tognoli is also a member of the 1962 Publications Board and in the past has worked on the Carolina Quarterly and the Carolina Handbook. Jerry will be leaving Carolina to continue his studying of psychology on a fellowship to the University of Delaware.

DTH Print Shop Bill Considered By SL Tonight

Bill Would Set Up Fund To Buy Press, Print Shop For Newspaper

By HARRY DeLUNG

A print shop for the Daily Tar Heel will be considered in a bill to be acted on by Student Legislature tonight. The bill was introduced by George Rosental (SP, DM I) in early spring. It would appropriate $5,000 to establish a fund for the initial payment of the press and print shop and create a committee to investigate the feasibility of the purchase.

The bill points out that the present printing arrangement, using the Chapel Hill Weekly presses, leads to increased costs and restricts the publishing of last-minute news.

The bill stipulates that before any definite action is taken to establish a print shop, new legislation will be enacted to provide additional necessary funds.

$50 Asked

Fifty dollars is asked to improve communications between legislators and their constituencies in a bill sponsored by Rufus Edmisten (SP, DM VI). The bill points out the necessity of the students being aware of what their legislature is doing.

A campus travel committee would be established by a bill authored by Bill Bowerman (SP, TM IV). The committee would act as a central agency to coordinate and publicize information about travel opportunities offered to students.

An appropriation of $60.70 is asked for delegates fees for the National Student Association regional conference which met on April 28 and 29. Larry McDevitt (UP, DM VI), who introduced the bill, said that the funds would be used to replenish the President's discretionary fund which supplied the money two weeks ago.

Because legislature requires a week's consideration for appropriations of $10 or more, the necessary money was not available from the usual source in time.

Arthur Hayes' (SP, DM IV) bill to establish permanent bulletin boards at strategic locations on the campus is expected to be withdrawn.

Also to be withdrawn is George Rosental's bill to provide for more equitable salaries for Daily Tar Heel personnel.

FREE CUTS TODAY

Big Day For Seniors

Senior Day activities will begin this morning at 10:30 with a mass meeting of the seniors in Memorial Hall. All senior men and women will have free class cuts to attend this meeting.

Mr. and Miss Alumni and permanent class officers will be elected, graduation procedures will be explained, and tickets for prizes at this afternoon's party will be distributed.

This afternoon's activities will be highlighted by a party exclusively for seniors at The Patio from 2 to 11.

There will be 12:00 Midnight late permission for all senior women.

The Doug Clarke Combo will play; beer and food will be served at reduced rates. Cash prizes and activity prizes will be awarded to those seniors who draw lucky tickets at the mass meeting.

Seniors will bowl at reduced rates at the Major League Lanes, with free bowling shoes provided.

Activities for seniors will continue Friday with "Barefoot Day," although free class cuts will not be given. Tomorrow's festivities will end with a party at Hoenig's Cabin for seniors and dates.

Di-Phi Fireworks Explode Over Interracial Marriage

Parliamentary fireworks exploded in Di-Phi Hall Tuesday night as the society passed a resolution condemning state laws against interracial marriage and calling on the state legislature to abolish these laws.

In an often-heated five-hour session the debating society, oldest of its kind in the country, also set up a committee to study its constitution and inducted eleven new members.

The resolution condemning state laws against interracial marriage was introduced by Representative Bill Dowell of New Jersey. Before passage, the resolution was amended to the effect that "The society takes no position on the desirability of such so-called mixed marriages."

Speakers in favor of the resolution dominated debate with charges that the state law, a part of the North Carolina state constituton, denied individuals "a basic right - the right to choose one's mate as he sees fit."

Speakers against the resolution cited "detrimental effects" of mixed marriages on the children from such a union and claimed that the law was supported by a majority of the state's population.

Copies of the resolution, as amended, will be sent to Gov. Terry Sanford, all members of the state legislature, and several state and national newspapers. The resolution passed both in the vote of society members and in the vote of all present in the chamber.

New Members

New members inducted into the society in an executive session after the debate were Bill Dowell, Bob Bullard, Bill Hobbs, Bill Phillips, Hank Patterson, Pete Harkness, Mike Putzel, Julia Steanson, Walter Gunster, Nat Dean, and Daniel Kern.

In a further executive session after the induction, a motion to pass a new constitution drafted by society president Arthur Hayes was substituted by a motion to establish a committee to investigate the legal status of the society and consider a new constitution. The committee will report its findings next fall.

NINE UP FOR APPROVAL

Legislature To Consider Committee Chairman Appointments This Evening

By BILL HOBBS

Student legislature's Ways and Means Committee Tuesday night recommended legislative approval of President Inman Allen's nine proposed student government committee chairmen. The legislature will vote on the appointments in its session tonight.

Dwight Wheless, defeated SP candidate for the student body presidency, heads the list of proposed chairmen. Allen has appointed him chairman of the State Affairs committee. This committee is charged with making UNC student wishes known to the state—a role which will take on special importance next year during the General Assembly's consideration of the UNC budget.

Wheless, who was presidential assistant under past president Bill Harriss, has been a long-time participant in student government activities. The committee he will head if approved by the legislature worked toward the passage of the state bond issue during the past year.

Spearman For Communications

Bob Spearman, proposed chairman of the Communications Committee, has participated in several student government fields. Last fall, he was elected president of the Freshman class in a heated election. He is presently a member of the student legislature, having won with a double endorsement in Town Men's district I.

As Attorney General, Trawick "Buzzy" Stubbs will, if approved, direct the operations of the large Attorney General's staff, charged with the responsibility for investigating Honor Code and Campus Code offenses and providing legal advice for the Honor councils and all defendants.

Stubbs Staff Member

Stubbs, a past member of the Attorney General's staff, has served on the Academic Affairs committee, the International Students Board, and as treasurer of the YMCA.

The proposed chairman for the campus Affairs Board is Bob Clawson. Clawson has been a member of the Board for the past year. He has also served as an orientation counselor and a member of the University party.

DeLung To N.S.A.

Harry DeLung, a sophomore from Atlanta, Ga., is Allen's proposed National Student Association Co-ordinator. DeLung served last month as the chairman of UNC's delegation to the spring regional assembly of the N.S.A. in Belmont, N. C. He has also been a member of the N.S.A. committee for the past year, a member of the University Entertainment Committee, and Assistant to the Editors of the Daily Tar Heel.

Honor System Commission

The Honor System Commission, which has become more active this year after attacks on the honor system, will be headed by Tony Miller, a freshman member of Beta Theta Pi social fraternity. Miller has served on the Honor System Commission this year and has been a member of the Freshman Class finance committee. Miller said he would, if approved, attempt to present the honor system to high schools across the state.

Chuck Oberdorfer, a member of the business staff of the Daily Tar Heel, is Allen's appointee as student Associate Director of the Chapel Hill Merchant's Association. In this position he would keep student government and the student body informed of actions by the merchant's association and keep the association informed of student wishes.

Oberdorfer Committees

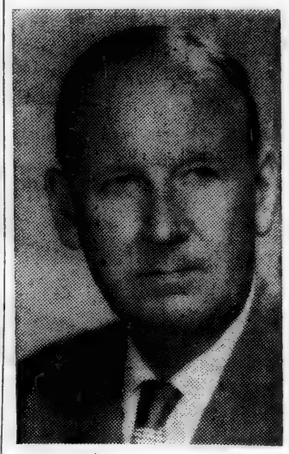
Oberdorfer has served on the library committee, the N.S.A. committee, and the campus communications committee.

Two positions created this February, those of Assistant attorney general for the Men's Council and assistant attorney general for the Women's Council, will be filled by Archie Davis and Robin Farr. If approved tonight they will represent the attorney general in investigations and procedures for the two councils respectively.

Davis has served this year on the Attorney General's staff and as an orientation counselor. Miss Farr has been a member of the student government executive committee and will serve next year as a committee chairman for the YWCA and a member of the women's orientation committee.

The legislature will meet tonight at 7:30 on fourth floor New East to consider Allen's appointments.

Sports Publicity Head Killed In Auto Crash



Jake Wade Column Nationally Known

By Howard Wrench

The "Carolina Caravan" came to a sudden halt yesterday afternoon.

Julius Jennings Wade, better known as "Jake" to thousands of followers of UNC sports, was killed in an automobile accident around 4 o'clock.

The accident occurred at Morrisville, eight miles outside Raleight. Wade was on his way from Chapel Hill to Raleigh.

The cause of the accident had not been determined by presstime last night, but authorities said Wade may have suffered a heart attack.

Wade, 61, had been the University's sports news director since 1946, and was considered one of the foremost sportswriters in the country. His articles have appeared in several national magazines, including the Saturday Evening Post, and Collier's.

He worked as sports editor for the Charlotte Observer from 1930 to 1946, and for newspapers in Raleigh, Greensboro and Pittsburgh, Pa.

A graduate of UNC in 1923, he served as Editor of the Daily Tar Heel and was chosen for membership in the Order of the Golden Fleece.

His varied newspaper career not only brought him fame as a sports writer but also as news reporter, particularly in his coverage of sessions of the Legislature in Raleigh.

Wade did not confine his talents to the field of writing. He was co-founder of the Golden Gloves for the two Carolinas. He was the organizer and an officer of the Charlotte Quarterback Club. He was the first president of the Carolina Amateur Athletic Union.

His "Carolina Caravan" was known to sports fans across the country. Unlike most sports publicity writers, Wade was always the first to realize the weaknesses and defects of his own teams. This in no way indicated a lack of loyalty to his alma mater and to the UNC athletic teams—instead it indicated the honesty with which he wrote.

His office and Laurel Hill Road home here were a meeting place for former Universty athletes as well as sports writers who came to Chapel Hill to cover athletic events.

He gave an annual party for returning baseball players, held this year within the past two weeks, which attracted men who had played a ball side by side with Ruth, Cobb, and Gehrig.

Pete Ivey, Director of the University of North Carolina News Bureau, said, "Jake was generous to a fault, his hospitality knew no bounds, and his supply of cigars was endless."

Some of his articles best remembered by his readers include those on Carolina-Duke football games, "Dawn Patrol" and "I had a 16" golf columns, intimate little pieces that had nothing to do with sports.

Born on August 13, 1901, he was the son of James Jennings Wade and Sarah Maggie Wade.

He is survived by his wife, the former Hamlin Landis of Charlotte, and their three children: two sons, Julius Jennings Wade, Jr. and Hamlin Wade; and one daughter, Mrs. James Roberts, of Chapel Hill, the former Carrie Maie Wade.

The Yackety Yack of 1923 said the following:

"Julius Jennings Wade, Dunn, N. C., Freshman Baseball Squad; Secretary-Treasurer, Class (2); Assistant Leader, Soph-Hop; Assistant Manager, Varsity Basketball; Associate Editor Tar Heel; Managing Editor, Editor in Chief of Tar Heel; Tar Baby Board; Founder and Editor of Carolina Boll Weevil; Varsity Football Squad; German Club; Shieks; Amphoterothen; Gimghoul; Golden Fleece; Pan-Hellenic Council."

It said further: "A gentleman by instinct, an athlete by hope, and a genius by nature—this is Julius Jennings Wade. This name, 'J. J. Wade' has appeared at the end of many literary productions and editorials for the past four years, but to everyone who has strolled about the campus he has been known as just 'Jake'."

"Jake has been engaged in several college activities and has attained a place of leadership in them all. It can justly be said he is one of our leaders. As a writer of considerable ability he will undoubtedly succeed in his chosen profession of journalism, which he aspires to make a stepping stone to even greater literary achievement."

Spring Phi Beta Kappa initiations will be held this afternoon at 5:30 p.m. in Di-Phi Hall.

'63 Seniors Set Interviews For Cabinet

The Senior Class officers for 1963 will hold interviews for next year's Senior Class Cabinet. The interviews are scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, May 14-15, from 7-9 p.m. in Woodhouse Room of Graham Memorial.

There will be openings for chairmanships of several special committees—including chairman of the Alumni Drive, chairman of Senior Week, and chairman of the all-campus fall weekend.

The Cabinet will serve as an Advisory Board for all class activities and projects. The Cabinet also will be responsible for selection of the faculty award of the month and monthly all-campus entertainment.

There is a list of interview times at the information desk in Graham Memorial. All rising Seniors interested in working on the Senior Class Cabinet, please sign up for the time of their choice.

Students Are Interviewed For IUS Meet

Rhodes Scholar Dennis Schaal was on campus Tuesday and Wednesday interviewing students who wish to attend Helsinki Youth Festival July 28-August 6 in Finland.

The Festival is being sponsored by the Communist-dominated International Union of Students, one of the two major international student groups.

Schaal, a graduate of Notre Dame, said "People who come to the Festival want to talk about politics, and we should be able to present our side of the picture." He feels American participation should not be suppressed.

The American delegation to the Festival is to be sponsored by donations from individuals and several organizations. Schaal said these are not Communist-supported organizations. "In fact," he said, "we are striving to encourage students of varied political backgrounds to attend."

This year's Festival is the seventh and the first to be held outside the Iron Curtain countries. The last Festival was held in Vienna several years ago and was attended by American students and teachers, including at least one person from UNC.

Student groups in neutral Finland have protested holding the Festival in Helsinki.

JFK Says Better To 'Jaw-Jaw' Than 'War-War'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy said Wednesday the United States intends to continue its Berlin talks with Russia — even though they may fail—because it is better to "jaw-jaw than war-war."

Citing Sir Winston Churchill's famous phrase on the need for diplomatic discussions, the President said that every effort must be made to resolve the dangerous Berlin situation.

"We shall continue to jaw, jaw," he said, "and see if we can produce a useful result.

"We may fail, but in my opinion, the effort is worth it when we are dealing with such dangerous matters, and when we have seen the history of this century, when statesmen, leaders and others have brought about failure, and brought about war as a result."

Double Majors

The Administrative Boards of the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences have approved provisions for A.B. degrees with double majors.

Many students come to Chapel Hill, struggle through four years of specialized education, and hustle off into the great American money fields, without truly broadening their educational experiences, without ever attending a lecture that stimulates personal thought.

Certainly the necessity of concentration in courses of one's anticipated Life's work is not to be denied. In a society geared and reared for competition, one may not spend time idly sampling scholastic wares. Preparation for the lucrative jobs cannot be "over-adequate" and if this pushes knowledge for knowledge's sake out of the picture, well that may just be too bad. But,, if the over-concentration of education in one particular area pushes knowledge for life's sake out of the picture, that is tragic.

No one seriously wants to be narrow, and no university seriously wants to foster narrowness. Every opportunity for the expansion of horizons should be made available.

A university with the educational possibilities that North Carolina possesses is, in a sense, "hiding its light under a bush," when it has restrictions on the academic opportunities open to its students. Such was the case with the previous "one major only" program.

Students with the time and talent to pursue an education in two major areas were limited to no more than four electives in any one subject outside of their major. This might have been good in that it forced the scattering of choices, but it did not permit, in too many instances, study beyond the introductory-course level.

The program as now arranged will permit the pursuit of an A.B. degree with a double major. In order to do this, a student will have to satisfactorily complete a minimum of 43 courses, only three more than the required 40 for a single major. The three extra courses will be added to the now permitted four electives in a single subject outside the major.

The responsibility, with the continuing aid of his advisor, will rest largely on the shoulders of the individual student. Certainly, this is as it should be. The gain is his.

The potential educational value of double-major programs is yet unmeasurable, though never deniable. The many students who continually bemoan the narrowness of their backgrounds will now be able to increase the scope of their approaches to life. Although those spending hour upon hour in the lab courses still may not be able to take advantage of this opportunity, there are many who will, most gratefully.

We appreciate the opportunity to double up in those areas which, though not attracting a large number of majors now, are valuable sources of "true" education.

Consider a second major in Religion, Art, or Philosophy for instance. (cw) .

A Press?

In September of 1963 The Chapel Hill Weekly, publishers of the Daily Tar Heel, will go daily, making it more difficult to print the DTH.

At present the Tar Heel is unable to report many stories which occur at night . . . is often unable to print six pages when there is too much advertising for four pages (as in this issue) because of the demands of the contract with the Weekly . . .

But to buy either a flatbed or offset printing setup will be a tremendous outlay. The press itself is only the basic cost, to be added to that of accessory machines, overhead and personnel (What would be done with the printshop workers in the summer? . . .).

* * *

Tonight Student Legislature probably will consider the bill to appropriate $5,000 out of the general surplus to establish a printshop fund. An investigatory commitee also will be set up.

The bill has been amended in committee, to add an article calling for new legislation if any money from the fund is to be used.

* * *

The Daily Tar Heel could operate more professionally with its own press, which possibly could be used to print such publications as the Carolina Quarterly, Carolina Handbook, and student government booklets. In several years it might be necessary for the newspaper to have a press.

Initial costs will be great if a press is bought. But only through the factual findings of an investigatory committee can the true situation be learned. Tonight's bill is a minimum effort for an imaginative student government to undertake. (jc)

'Lack Of Taste" Charged To Smith

To the Editors,

Michael Smith's criticism of Prof. Schnorrenburg's selection as "the best teacher of the month" reveals his own personal lack of taste in matters of academic judgment. One is curious to know just what his gripe really is; certainly the "best teacher" issue is only a vacuous cover-up. His entire argument that Prof. Schnorrenburg fails to communicate personally to his students is a mockery of consistency. Prof. Schnorrenburg is perhaps the most indulgent teacher—in time, energy and patience—that a university student can hope to find. The intense devotion and personal attention that accompany each of his lectures are rarely paralleled in any university. Art 33, for a case in point, was one of very few university courses where the students were actually as important as the subject matter. I recall the line of students outside Prof. Schnorrenburg's office, waiting to discuss their term-paper problems with him. Dr. Schnorrenburg carefully went over each paper with each student. His criticism seemed always forceful yet with an underlying genuine concern that challenged a student's individuality.

Prof. Schnorrenburg remains a bit of a mystery, though. He hasn't lost the 'hope" that in learning there is to be found a creative experience. Justly perhaps is he to be criticized for thinking that each student has the potentiality for recognizing and grasping the "creativeness" in himself. Prof Schnorrenburg does not only teach, he inspires. However, he expects his students to think, and learning hopefully following this momentous step. Though many do not achieve this goal, I suggest that they search in themsleves for such failure.

Numbers do not in themselves mean very much. I feel, nevertheless, that his former students and friends will heartily agree that the selection of Prof. John Schnorrenburg as "the best teacher of the month" is certainly an honor and credit to the University of North Carolina.

Pupils Establish Prof-Identity?

To the Editors:

Concerning Mr. Michael Smith's "Real Complaint" and public confession of "amazement" in your issue of Saturday, May 7:

This allegedly aloof Mr. Schnorrenberg is indeed so isolated within the insubstantial mists of his own pedagogic Olympus that in point of fact, if a student takes the initiative to go see him at his office, he will spend more time with the student than one would think fair to devote to one person of a class of around fifty. Mr. Schnorrenberg is even so aloof that he will force the student to try to justify every fault which he has found, he thinks, in a term paper.

But, not only does this shameless academician waste his time talking freely to students — he heedlessly squanders great portions of quite a few valuable lecture hours in the course of a semester in asking students to face individually such tediously puerile questions as the purpose of their being in the University and of their being in the course If this becomes known outside his department, the heretical Mr. Schnorrenberg will rightfully fall victim to inquisition under the charge of Intrusion into Questions Outside the Scope of the Course as Prescribed by the Catalog.

Besides all these perversions it is rumored among Christ School alumni that once the sun has set he slinks from the fusty confines of the Ackland lecture room to metamorphose into a regular fellow.

If this overzealous young professor fails to establish a quasi-mystical "identity with the student," perhaps the student could retaliate by establishing an "identity with the professor."

Clotfelter 'Went Too Far'

Dear Mr. Clotfelter:

It is the right and duty of the Editor of the Daily Tar Heel to report all news that is of interest and importance but I feel that you have personally overstepped your editorial bounds in your attack or should I say light reprimand of the Legislature. I think that you were right in your attack of any organization which was as badly organized as the Legislature was last Thursday night. However, I feel that in some of your specific examples stated that you have "gone too far."

One point that you make is that a non-member of the legislature asked six questions of the speaker during a short period of time in the Legislature. You sound as if you think that this is wrong. I beg to differ with you. I think that it is good that some students on this campus have enough interest in the affairs on this campus to go to the legislature; and when they feel that they have a pertinent question to ask the speaker or a legislator they have the nerve to ask the aforesaid question. The Student Legislature is a campus organization and all students on this campus are welcome to come to any meeting at any time and ask any questions that they wish to ask.

When the Speaker of the Legislature moved that a certain proposed amendment made "female companionship in bad taste," I got the impression by his smile and the laughter by all the persons in the room that he had made a joke, but since reading your editorial I find that it was not a joke and that the Legislators were tongue-tied and did not know what they were saying.

It is good to criticize organizations when they are wrong, and it is right to have your opinion expressed on the editorial page of the campus paper, but please stick to the facts involved, and please don't "split hairs" in your examples, as you accused the legislators of doing last Thursday night.

—HAYNES C. McFADDEN

Suggestions On Orgy-Holding

To the Editors,

I realize that Mr. Wuamett is very disturbed by the fact that no one on campus is able to hold a real orgy. But I say that Mr. Wuamett is misinformed. For seventeen years there has exisited on this campus a group that holds orgies quite regularly. The chairman of this group (and they do have a different title for him) has contacted me and asked me to do an article on behalf of the group, since he wishes to remain anonymous. They extend an invitation to you Mr. Wuamett and any one else who would be interested in the meetings.

They are using the meeting-hall of the old Delphian Literary Society on the third floor of New North. They issue a special appeal to the men students on campus, since they have too many girls at the meetings.

Refreshments will be provided by a Tennessee distiller. It is requested that since the weather has warmed up, you should wear something light and readily removable.

Mr. Freeman Barber,
The Sigma Chi Fraternity:

In your recent letter to the Daily Tar Heel, you stated that ". . . the Sigma Chi Derby . . . advances sorority-fraternity-dormitory relation." Good God-damned luck on including the dormitories.

Students Busy On Traditions

To the Editors:

So what if Silent Sam has never fired! (he can't—no bullets) The Old Well still squirts real water, the Arboretum is as green as ever. In short, I see no lack of tradition on this campus. Perhaps "tradition is shot all to Hell." However, according to the DTH, The Carolina Handbooks, The Yack, etc. this campus is veritably inundated with dradition. The Di-Phi, Silent Sam, The Old Well, The DTH, and all the legends about men on campus are just a few examples of this flood. Indeed, the lack of traditions must stem, then, sir, from the way that you define tradition. A tradition is not set up merely to be a tradition but is born and nurtured by time itself. Neither an individual nor a student body can prescribe traditions. They must grow by themselves, proving their merit by weathering the only test, time itself. A tradition must be added to over the years by those interested enough to carry it on to the future. Our student autonomy which we revere so highly is a tradition, nourished by decades of hard work. Our Honor system is a tradition. Building a statue of an ndian and throwing money at that statue constitutes a financial loss, not a tradition. Certainly, many old traditions are not furthered now. However this is not because of apathy on our part, this is because these traditions are now useless. As the old traditions die, new ones step in to take their place. I firmly believe that deep in the heart of every student here, there is a deep respect for traditions. The maintenance of these traditions is not up to Student Government, Dean Long, or the students. It is up to the traditions themselves to be needed, pertinent, and not useless.

That Rameses was "ramnapped" would normally strike fear and rage into the heart of every UNC student. This time, however, most of us were away in our homes celebrating another tradition, Thanksgiving. As to panty raids you are perfectly welcome, Mr. Rosenthal, to do as you please.

No problem remains. To be exact, the student body is now, as always, hard at work building traditions for your descendants, by making this a better place to work, study and, yes, even have a little fun.

Compose rBack To Russia?

Tc the Editors:

Ihappened to find this in the Christian Science Monitor last week:

"Sol Hurok, the New York impresario, who spent three weeks in Moscow negotiating the United States-Soviet cultural exchange agreement signed recently in Washington, has arranged for Igor Stravinsky to make a tour of his native Russia next September.

"Reports from Moscow indicate that Russian music, art and literary circles are highly excited over the news and well they may be, for Igor Stravinsky is regarded by many as the greatest composer alive today.

"Stravinsky left Russia in 1909 and has been back only once, and that briefly, since then. That was in 1914. He has lived in the United States since 1939 and has been a United States citizen since 1945.

"The Soviet Ministry of Culture has given Stravinsky carte blanche to arrange a series of concerts as he sees fit. This is interesting in light of the fact Stravinsky's music was denounced in Stalin's day as "bourgeois and corrupt." Since Stalin's death more and more Russian orchestras have been playing Stravinsky's compositions.

"Stravinsky's projected tour, directing orchestras in Russia, is another demonstration that cultural exchange is a two-way street. Too often, we tend to think in terms of what the Russians get out of sending cultural delegations to this country. We should not forget that the United States profits when its delegations go to Russia."

Visitor Lost A Wallet Here

To the Editors:

Last weekend someone entered 113 Cobb, the room of Quent Uppercue and Frank Taylor, and took my wallet. I live in Bethesda, Maryland, and I came to UNC to visit Quent. I desperately need the twenty-five dollars or so I had in the wallet to get home. The wallet also contained the usual assortment of papers, cards and pictures; all of which are very important to me and I must get them back. I'll pay a reward of $10 to anyone who returns the wallet intact with money. If I can't get the money back, I'll pay $5 reward for the return of everything else in the wallet. If I can get the wallet back, I'll pay the reward, no questions asked. Anyone who finds the wallet or knows anything about it, please contact Quent Uppercue, 113 Cobb, phone 968-9015.

I understand there have been other thefts. As an outsider visiting UNC for the first time ,the theft of my wallet does not reflect well on your honor system. One person can ruin it for many.

Dietitian On Dinner Manners

To the Editors:

I watched, with a feeling of awe and humility, as one by one the Negro employees sat down at the dining table provided for them, each folding his hands under his chin, while his lips moved in a silent grace before taking a spoonful of food.

No one neglected to do this, and even the late-comers, sitting down to a table of laughing men and women, was oblivious to them as he bowed his head in supplication a "thank you, God, for giving me the right to live on this earth which appears to be the supreme right of those, who, thru some quixotic chemical alchemy, have skins which are lighter than mine. Even though our way is hard, and fraught with obstacles, we respect your judgment, dear Lord, and take comfor. in the fact that in your sight, everyone is born free and equal. But your noble opinion is not held by many of those, who professing your faith, feel the earth and all therein was created for them and them alone. Forgive them, Oh Lord, and show them the error of their ways so they may no longer stray in the path of the unrighteous. We thank thee for this meal and commit ourselves to thy loving service. Amen."

No One

Tuesday night's Di-Phi debate on interracial marriage laws attracted 30 people to the Society's hallowed halls in New West.

Of these 30 people, however, only one sincerely spoke against the anti-miscegenation resolution, and he wasn't a student.

A guest complained of the one-sidedness of the debate, with everyone opposing the state interracial marriage laws, and no one in defense. Why was this? Was there no one out of a studentry of more than 9,000 who disagreed with the Di-Phi bill?

Absolutely no one? . . . (jc)

SUPPORT

Tropic Of Cancer

(Following is a release from Grove Press, publishers of Tropic of Cancer:)

One hundred ninety eight leading American writers, critics and members of the publishing community today strongly condemned police censorship of books in many communities throughout the country in a statement of support for a decision by Chicago Judge Samuel B. Epstein which held Henry Miller's Tropic of Cancer was not obscene.

The signers of the statement include such prominent literary figures as Saul Bellow, James Baldwin, Jacques Barzun, John Dos Passos, Clifton Fadiman, Herbert Golden, Lilliam Hellman, John Hersey, Aldous Huxley, Alfred Kazin, Max Lerner, Carson McCullers, Norman Mailer, Bernard Malamud, Arthur Miller, Elmer Rice, Philip Roth, Mark Schorer, William Styron, Robert Penn Warren, Edmund Wilson, and Philip Wylie. They appealed to the public "to defeat any attempt at repression before they are allowed to erode our most precious freedoms."

Judge Samuel Epstein in a decision rendered on February 21, 1962, held "that TROPIC OF CANCER is not obscene as defined in the law and that interference by the police in its free distribution and sales should be enjoined," saying "Let the parents control the reading matter of their children; let not the Government or the courts dictate the reading matter of a free people." Since then, Judge Epstein's decision has been appealed by the city of Chicago and an injunction has been granted taking the book off sale pending the appeal.

"We believe with Judge Epstein," the signers of the statement say, "that neither the police nor the courts should be allowed to dictate the reading matter of a free people." Quoting Judge Epstein's decision as saying "the right to free utterances becomes a useless privilege when the freedom to read is restricted or denied," the statement says that Judge Epstein's decision has "reaffirmed the right of a free people to decide for itself what it may or may not read. Beyond that, it sounds a clear warning to all of us to guard the principles upon which our country was built."

"The issue is not whether TROPIC OF CANCER is a masterpiece of American literature; rather, it is whether an author of Henry Miller's artistic integrity is entitled to the protections afforded by the Constitution of the United States," the leading writers and publishers said.

In recent months the statement charged, police with the encouragement of "certain minority pressure groups" have 'succeeded in forcing their own narrow-minded literary tastes upon many communities."

"This is an issue of immediate and serious concern to every citizen who holds dear the traditions of our democracy, and who abhors the intrustion of official censorship into the vital area of artistic and literary expression. It is an issue to which we are especially sensitive," the signers said.

64 News Photos On Exhibition In Howell Hall

Sixty-four news photographers' pictures, chosen as "Pictures of the Year," are currently on exhibition at the School of Journalism in room 201, Howell Hall.

The exhibit includes six pictures by George Honeycutt of the Charlotte News, who was chosen "Newspaper Photographer of the Year." Other North Carolina news photographers having winning news photographs in the exhibit are: Don Sturkey, Charlotte Observer, with three pictures; Jeep Hunter of the Charlotte News with one picture; Don Hunter of the Charlotte News, one picture; and David C. Nance, Charlotte News, one picture.

The 19th annual "Pictures of the Year" contest was sponsored by the National Newspaper Photographers Association, the World Book Encyclopedia, and the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

The pictures will be kept in Howell Hall permanently.

Mitchener May Fill Council Vacancy

John A. Mitchener was appointed to fill a vacant seat on the Men's Honor Council yesterday by Inman Allen. The appointment went before the Student Legislature for approval late last night.

His appointment comes as a result of the resignation of one of the newly elected members.

Mitchener has served on the Honor Council for one year and he has served as chairman on several IDC committees. He was also vice president of the IDC Executive Council, is a member of the Society of Janus and has a 4-point average.

Other appointments which went before the Student Legislature for approval last night were: Jim Reston, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee; Polly Hastings, chairman of the Elections Board; Bob Harwell, chairman of the Student Audit Board; Gerald Thornton, chairman of the Consolidated University Student Council; Fred Wedler, chairman of the International Students Board; Phil Smith, chairman of the Student Entertainment Board; Chuck Oberdorfer, chairman of the Student Credit Commission; and Margaret Goddard, chairman of the Library Committee.

'Cry Beloved Country' Is Tonite's Flick

First a best-selling novel, then a hit play, "Cry the Beloved Country," tonight's Free Flick presentation, has been made into an absorbing motion picture.

This story of faith and the strange workings of destiny stars Canada Lee who portrays a simple country priest, drawn to the city in search of his son. There, amid the squalor and evil atmosphere, he finds his son has been sentenced to death for murder.

Others in the cast include Sidney Poitier and Charles Carson. Photographed in South Africa, the camera has taken advantage of the Johannesburg slums in creating a mood of rejection and despair.

Showings will be in Carroll Hall at 7:30 and 9:30 and only students with ID cards will be admitted.

Rocket Failure Ruins Orbit Try

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—The fourth rocket failure in three days ruined a U.S. attempt Thursday to orbit a blinking beacon satellite designed to serve as a reference point in the heavens.

A Thor-Able-Star rocket carrying the 355-pound moonlet rumbled aloft at 8:06 a.m. EDT but 20 minutes later the Air Force announced the rocket's second stage had failed to fire.

The exact cause of the malfunction had not been determined late Thursday.

It was the latest in a discouraging string of mishaps.

Tuesday an attempt to send America's revolutionary hydrogen-powered Centaur rocket on its maiden flight failed when the vehicle and its Atlas booster exploded on takeoff. Wednesday the Army's usually reliable Pershing faltered during a test launch, as did the Navy's Polaris.

Rebels Win New Defense Post In Laos

VIENTIANE, Lais (UPI) — The Royal Laotian government said Thursday rebel troops supported by Chinese Communists have captured the defense post of Tha Fa and are driving loyal forces toward the Thailand border town of Ban Houei.

A communique issued by the defense ministry said Tha Fa, 20 miles from Ban Houei, fell after five hours of fighting and that the "Chinese pursuit continues" toward Ban Houei on the Mokong River.

U.N. military advisers in Laos have not confirmed the presence of Red Chinese troops although the Royal government frequently has reported their involvement in the Laotian fighting.

Foreign diplomats who visited the rebel capital of Khang Kay said the rebels are determined to keep fighting until they win control of the army and police forces in a coalition cabinet.

The government also announced that the defeated Nam Tha garrison is retreating rapidly and that Communists still are attacking Muong Nga, 35 miles north of the Royal capital of Luang Prabang, and have overwhelmed a government garrison near Paksong in southern Laos.

Both captured Nam Tha and threatened Ban Houei had formed the corner posts of a defense triangle also touching on Vientiane. Conquest of one or both threatened all of northwestern Laos.

Services Held This Morning For Sports Writer Jake Wade

Funeral services for Julius Jennings "Jake" Wade will be held this morning at 11 in the Church of the Holy Family at 200 Hayes Road in Glen Lennox. Burial services will follow immediately. Both services are open to the public and friends and admirers from all over the state are expected.

Jake Wade, former sports writer for the Charlotte Observer and most recently Sports News Director at UNC, his alma mater, died Thursday afternoon in an automobile accident between Chapel Hill and Raleigh. Whether he died as a direct result of the accident or because of a heart attack is still unknown.

Pallbearers at the funeral will be Charles Erickson, O. K. Cornwell, Jim Hickey, Walter Rabb, Dean Smith, Dale Ranson, Ernie Williamson and Richard Jamerson, all of which are on the Carolina athletic staff and friends of the late journalist.

Wade's family has requested that no flowers be sent. Instead they ask that any contributions be sent to the church.

Two Charlotte newspapermen, Julian Scheer and Bob Quincy, have donated funds to the UNC School of Journalism for a Jake Wade Scholarship.

Both Scheer and Quincy have sent checks to Dean Luxon of the Journalism School to start the fund from which worthy students planning a career of sports writing may be assisted and rewarded.

The Wade Scholarship will be awarded by the faculty of the Journalism School on the basis of ability and need.

JOAN BAEZ OFFSTAGE

Shy Pixie Believes True Folksinger Sings For Self

By CLYDE WILSON and JOHN SALTER

A small shy pixie of a girl haunted Memorial Hall Wednesday night with folk song ballads sung in a voice so sweet it should have hurt.

She was Joan Baez and she was just as shy and unaffected chattering in the lobby of the Carolina Inn as she was before the audience, and a little less pixie-ish.

"A folk song has to come from the person who is singing it," she said. "He has to sing for himself. If he sings just to make money it is not folk music."

Miss Baez is a purist. She sings folk songs without frills or attempts at "popularing." The difference between commercialism and real folk music "depends on the intent of the individual," she said.

She sings without gesture or fanfare in what critics have described as "an achingly pure soprano." The songs seem to come effortlessly from her throat.

Her present chief interest is hillbilly music. "I could listen to that mountain fiddle all night," she said, mentioning Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs with whom she made her first tour.

"Earl is a wonderful man. I have seen him come home from a performance and sing for his children," she said.

She named Pete Seeger, the Greenbriar boys, Bill Elliot, and Jimmy Driftwood as some of her favorites among folk singers.

Asked whether her ability to adopt perfectly the proper accent for the song she is singing comes naturally, she said, "I just listen to the music for a few minutes."

"I once sang rock 'n' roll in school—to make friends," said the Mexican-Irish girl who was born in Boston and lived in New York and California.

"I like college audiences, I guess because I can sing to people who are more nearly my age," she said. "And there are always a few older people who appreciate it." She is 21 years old.

She has been under great pressure to exploit her singing commercially she says. She only gives performances for two months in the year.

Reminded that she had been very hard to find, Miss Baez looked at her companion and smiled shyly. "We sneaked off to see the Duke campus," she confessed. "It's lovely."

We asked Miss Baez, who moves and talks with a natural grace, if she had ever had a problem with stage fright.

"Oh, yes!" she answered.

"It was a nice interview," she said as we left.

Phi Beta Kappa Initiates 49 Undergraduates

Doug Fambrough With A Average Named President Of Honor Group

Forty-nine Carolina undergraduates—including a junior with a straight A average—last night were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa.

Douglas McIntosh Fambrough of Chapel Hill was automatically named incumbent president of the select honor society during rites held in the Di-Phi Hall. His A average was the highest of the new members.

Frederick Hailey Croom of Maxton, who has the second highest average among the juniors, a 2.96 average under the 3-point quality point scale, was named incumbent vice president.

The size of the new membership was "just about normal," according to Dr. E. L. Mackie, the organization's faculty advisor. Thirteen of the new members are juniors who have a 3.6 quality-point average, he said. Seniors are required to have a 3.3 average.

Jonathan David Fraley Jr., Lenoir; Howard Glenn Garner, Greenville; Michael James George, Greensboro; Carl Douglas Rhodes Jr., Leaksville; William Ross Sullivan, Knoxville, Tenn.; Scott Dean Ward, Zirconia, and James Alvin Yount, Claremont.

Betti Brown, Jackson, Miss.; Henrietta Bo Brown, Hillsboro; Saundra Leigh Bryan, Raleigh; John Hendrik Calmeyer, Chapel Hill; Johnson Burns Clinard, Winston-Salem; Alexandra Leonore Eckoldt, Maplewood, N. J., and Grover Woodrow Everett Jr., Greenville.

Thomas K. Fitzgerald, Lexington; Robert Parker Foxworth, Raleigh; David John Goode, Winston-Salem; Roderic Boyd Griffin, Roxboro; Sandra Frances Hoke, Charlotte; Stephen Edward Kesler, Kings Mountain, and Benjamin Franklin Lenhardt Jr., Greenville, S. C.

Cordelia Kay Knight Mazuy, Carrboro; Jon Michael McClister, Bristol, Tenn.; Edwin Gray Mendenhall, Sanford; Arthur Jesse Merrill Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; Glen Robert Moore, Raleigh, and Martha Ann Myers, Pfafftown.

Margaret Karen Nelson, Starkville, Miss.; George Thompson Noel III, Kannapolis; Martha Elizabeth Parker, Asheville; James Barry Pittleman, Washington, D. C.; Nicholas Dick Reppucci, Hollywood, Fla.; Robert English Sevier, Asheville, and Robert Glenn Sherer Jr., Dothan, Ala.

James Curtis Stalker, Louisville, Ky.; Vivian Joanne Taylor, Wilson; Virginia Page Temple, High Point, and Willis Howard Williams, Robbins.

Following the initiation Dr. Harold Hotelling of the Statistics Department addressed the organization at a banquet held in Lenoir Hall.

CWC-Pan-Hel To Sponsor Melon Feast

A Watermelon Cut, co-sponsored by the Carolina Women's Council and the Panhellenic Council, will be held on May 17 for all university women students.

"As far as we know this is this first event that has been held for all the women on campus, and Panhellenic felt it was time for everyone to get together," said Julie Latane, projects chairman for Panhellenic. "There will be no men allowed!" she added. "And I hope all campus women will take advantage of this unique get-together."

The Panhellenic Council is supplying the watermelons for the event which will be held from three to five on McIver lawn, or in case of rain in the Tin Can. Dress will be informal and Women's Residence Council has given permission for girls to cross campus in bermudas without a raincoat for this event.

Music and entertainment will be provided for the Cut, according to Julie. "If this event is successful and we hope it will be, we want the Watermelon Cut to become an annual project."

CWC President Shelby Purser has urged that all dormitories give their utmost support to this event.

"The purpose of the project is to unite all women students on campus," said Shelby, "and CWC feels that in this way communication between those women living in dorms and those living in sorority houses should be strengthened."

Of the 1200 women students on campus, Shelby expressed a desire that at least 800 come to the Watermelon Cut and "take a good break before exams."

Student Party

There will be an important meeting of the SP in the TV room at GM Monday, April 14 at 8:00 p.m. The purpose of the meeting is to elect members of the Advisory Board. It is imperative that all members come.

Senior Alumni Officers Announced At Party Tonight

Wise Seniors Go Barefoot Today, But No Free Cuts

Seniors took advantage of their free cuts yesterday morning and attended a mass meeting in Memorial Hall to select their permanent officers.

In the afternoon the senior class was treated to a party at the Patio with Doug Clark's "The Hot Nuts" Combo supplying the entertainment. Reduced rates on beer and good "twisting" were the bill for the '62 grads.

Today will be "Barefoot Day" for seniors and the two "senior days" will be culminated at tonight's Hoenig's Cabin party. No free cuts will be allowed today.

Presiding at the class meeting was Senior Class President Ray Farris who introduced the other Senior Class officers Ward Marslander, Wade Hargrove and Kathy Fulenwider.

Farris then introduced Bob Bilbro, chairman of the Class Gift Committee. Bilbro announced that the committee recommended a donation of approximately $600 to furnish a memorial room in the new student union. A move to accept the recommendation was made by Bill Harris and the motion was unanimously passed.

Bill Shipp then explained the function of the Alumni Association and asked that as many seniors as possible join the association for the initial fee of $1.

'Very Rare Thing'

Joan Baez, during her magnificent Wednesday night concert in Memorial Hall, dedicated a song to folk-singer and composer Pete Seeger.

Someone in the audience asked her, "Who's he?"

She smiled, a little sadly, "He's a man who stands by what he believes.

* * *

Aside from his folk-song activity Pete Seeger is known for an appearance before the House Un-American Activities Committe (HUAC), famous for its nationwide forays, going from town-to-town painting the country Red.

When asked about his political affiliations, Seeger declined to answer the questions of Committee members. He had the un-American idea that his political activities were his own business. He was asked if it was true he performed before a Communist-front group.

Seeger replied that he had . . . on the same day he had played for a children's scout picnic (therefore making the scouts Red.)

During the past year Seeger has been in and out of jail several times, in between his appeals to higher courts on grounds of the First Amendment. For pleading the First, for defending his freedoms of speech, press and assembly, Pete Seeger has become a sometimes-convict.

Seeger, as Miss Baez said, "is a man who stands by what he believes." He is very rare, a man with guts and humor and talent.

* * *

While Miss Baez was explaining to her Chapel Hill audience who Pete Seeger is, Mrs. Maude Query Kelsey, was in Washington.

Mrs. Kelsey is a librarian from Shelby, N. C. in the Capitol to testify during a "propaganda quiz" (headline used in the Charlotte Observer) before a HUAC sub-committee.

According to the Observer, Mrs. Kelsey was expected to tell the Committee that "although she favors open discussion of communism, she is opposed to Soviet propaganda because 'it is negative and unwholesome'." She became a HUAC witness after she recently protested the mailing of Soviet Embassy materials to her library by bulk postal rates.

Mrs. Kelsey recommends for a "textbook" on Communism something like "Masters of Deceit," by J. Edgar Hoover, she said.

The Shelby librarian also is worried about the effect on "Americans, and particularly youngsters, of uncensored Communist propaganda."

* * *

So . . . In Washington Mrs. Kelsey is telling members of a Congressional committee that Americans should not be allowed to read uncensored Communist views. In Washington, the Capitol city of the brave and free United States, Mrs. Kelsey is saying that free and open discussion of different views is "unwholesome."

And also in America one Pete Seeger is an outcast, unknown by those who allow him to be hounded, and hounded harder because he will not cooperate in the murder of the First Amendment.

Miss Baez was right . . . Bravery is a very rare thing . . . and becoming rarer. (jc)

Honor System

There is, and indeed should be, quite a bit of concern over the effectiveness of our honor system.

Cheating in or out of the classroom ought to be discouraged, and if not effectively prevented, then severely punished.

The opportunity to practice self regulation and individual honor should never be denied. We all recognize the value of working under an honor system while attending college; the attitudes and actions that are practiced here will be those, for all practical purposes, which we carry into our mature lives.

Yet, during our college lives, we should learn that honor is not something pertaining solely to school work. Too often we tend to think that an honor system implies that you don't have proctors during quizzes, or that you don't plagarize freshman themes; too often the fact of the honor system merely demands that you must sign your name on the front of the blue book or the bottom of the paper.

The honor system is failing drastically if this "inclass" concern is not directed to all areas of our lives.

However, undeniably, whether practiced or not, the existence of the Honor System on this campus does point up the need and value of living under such a set up. Granted, the system may not be totally effective, but it does demonstrate the proper approach to our college endeavours.

But then again the honor system is failing drastically, if this "inclass" concern is not further directed toward regulation of all our experiences.

In light of this necessity for an extension of concern, it is heartening to encounter the actual, and apparently effective "honor systems" that are practiced in some of the Chapel Hill stores. In the Goody Shop especially, customers are on their honor. One orders a meal and then tells the cashier, on the way out, what he had, and pays for just that, never being questioned. There are other stores, Tar Heel Sandwich Shop, and Byron's, most notably, that extend this trust wholeheartedly.

These merchants are doing quite a bit more to further student honor than any regulation that requires a hurriedly scrawled set of words at the bottom of a test. (cw)

Capitol Culture Boosted

Electronic brains and other uncanny equipment of the space age are admittedly breathtaking to behold, but when you come right down to it the most marvelous machine ever invented is still the human mind. Washington has not always been the most congenial laboratory for this apparatus to operate in. The cold and hot winds of propaganda, the high and low pressure areas of pragmatic politics do not produce the best weather for hte mind to perform creative and reflective functions. But there has been a remarkable change in the atmosphere of late and this administration not only encourages thinking, it is importing thinkers, the most distinguished exponents of the arts, letters and sciences, to pay them the public homage they deserve. It is possible that Washington has seen nothing quite so enriching in terms of intellectuality and culture since the days of Thomas Jefferson and that bon vivant of the 18th century cocktail circuit, Benjamin Franklin.

The change all began at the beginning of the Kennedy Administration when the President invited a veritable who's who of American intelligentsia to attend his inauguration. Not only did they come, their reactions of gratitude at being officially recognized as citizens with something to contribute to American society were deeply touching. Since then the White House has become a hot house in which all kinds of talent have gathered and flowered. The genius of the cello, Pablo Casals, was lured out of exile to play at a state dinner. Shakespeare has been performed in the East Room and just the other week the crystal chandeliers reflected unprecedently the rhythm of modern ballet.

Then, on a recent Sunday night, President and Mrs. Kennedy were hosts at a rare affair, a dinner for all the living Nobel prize winners in the Western Hemisphere. The President toasted all 49 of them as "the most extraordinary collection of talent, of human knowledge, that has ever been gathered together at the White House with the possible exception of when Thomas Jefferson dined alone."

Recently, under the honorary chairmanship of Mrs. Kennedy, members of the President's cabinet presented another "evening of culture," in the new State Department auditorium which was filled to overflowing with more than 800 guests in formal dress. For an enchanting hour, Pulitzer prize-winner Thornton Wilder narrated to them fragments of his plays and books. Previous performers had been Poets Robert Frost and Carl Sandburg and Singer Marian Anderson. A bouncy, twinkly bundle of animated energy at 65, with remarkably bushy brows sticking out like fur-bearing mantle-pieces over the compassionate fire of his eyes, Wilder said, before he began reading, "I am filled with great pleasure that Washington is becoming the lighthouse on the hill for things for which we have spent our lives."

This week when the famous French writer and de Gaulle's minister of cultural affairs, Andre Malraux, dines at the White House the guest list will be positively exotic. One Broadway play will be closed down for the evening so the star can attend.

But "hark," as Orphan Annie or an ample vigilante of the DAR might cry at this point, what is all this getting us besides the smack of subversion through the social notes? After all Physicist Linus Pauling is against nuclear testing and he picketed the White House before going in for the Nobel prize dinner. Another prominent guest at that same affair was D. Robert Oppenheimer, one of the developers of the atomic bomb, who was denied access to top secret information by the Atomic Energy Commission in 1954 because some of his associations were considered questionable. Let's face it the Administration is cultivating odd balls in many fields. And high time it did too, in this correspondent's humble opinion; the public should jump for joy and shout "bravo." For one of the things the Kennedys are recognizing, as the New York Times editorialized this morning, is "that brilliance often goes hand in hand with nonconformity."

Look at the cultural wasteland of the Communist world. What has withered it is the parching police-state compulsion for conformity. A Boris Pasternak in Moscow, a Djilas in Belgrade, heaven knows what the poor rebel's name may be in Peiping, these are green little oases of nonconformity which must be carefully confined or stamped out because they threaten the desert of enforced thought without which a dictatorship cannot long operate.

Ideas cross-fertilize each other and they multiply best in the yeasty culture of freedom. What a hollow mockery it would be for us to ape the totalitarians, as some alarmist citizens insist we do, and embrace a policy of unthink. Washington has long been the power capital of the non-Communist world. Now it is adding that precious ingredient of brainpower and the light of our considerable culture is emerging from behind a bushel where our own stuffiness and fear had hidden it too long.

Paradox In Loan Funds

By Lynn Nisbet

The State Board of Higher Education recently completed a survey of availability of student loan funds at the public and private colleges in North Carolina and the extent to which these funds are being used by the students. The report has a mass of detail about amounts, interest and repayment rates and other technical factors. More significant are some general observations based on conclusions from the study.

One is that these loans funds in the main are assisting qualified but needy students. Another important fact is that while there appears to be a good deal of uncalled for money in loan funds, nearly every institution is in desperate need of additional funds for student loans. That is not as paradoxical as it appears.

Nearly all college loan funds except the National Defense Education Act funds have been made available by gifts. In many instances the funds are restricted by terms of the gift and are not available for the general student body for general studies. Result is that money lies idle in these limited use funds while demand increases for loans for total college purposes.

Another fact emphasized by the study is that most students are looking for scholarships rather than loans, money that will not have to be paid back. Next most popular approach is the loan that can be repaid by giving two or more years to teaching or to the practice of medicine or nursing in North Carolina. There loans administered by the State Board of Education and the State Medical Care Commission provide for repayment in cash with interest if the borrower desires: or the loan may be canceled in whole or in part by proof of service in the public schools or an accredited hospital.

Letters To The Editor

On Peace Corps, B-52, President

U. S. Looked Bad To Students

To the Editor:

I noted with interest in Friday's TAR HEEL the reprint from the World Student News. I was rather disturbed at the potential effect of the circulation among the university students of Africa, Asia, Africa, and Europe of such obserations as those made about Charles Kamen.

As the article stated, Kamen was an apparently well- qualified trainee in the Peace Corps. Also, as stated, Kamen had attended a service club meeting in Miami at which "Operation Abolition" was shown. He was not invited to this meeting, he clapped and applauded at the "wrong times," and he also made an attempt to grab the microphone to express his views on the film after a speech was made by a Cuban refugee from Havana. Kamen wore a beard at this time.

It appears obvious that Kamen did not conduct himself in a gentlemanly manner. But this was no excuse and not the real reason for the subsequent actions of the Rotary Club and the local draft board. The Rotary Club, upon learning that Kamen had been accepted for the Peace Corps commenced a large-scale letter writing campaign directed at certain Congressmen. Threats were made of an investigation of Peace Corps recruiting. It was urged that Kamen be dropped from the Corps. However, Shriver did not bow to Congressional pressure.

At this point the draft board made its play, and Kamen was given notice without regard to the Peace Corps request that he be deferred. A statement was made by a draft board official asserting that it had been decided that Kamen would be better off in the army where he would learn Americanism, not in the Peace Corps where he was supposed to teach it.

During this time Kamen's mother did receive a number of threatening phone calls.

Kamen appealed his case. Before a decision was reached, however, he was dismissed from the Peace Corps.

During his training for the Corps, Kamen was considered well-liked and fully competent by his fellow trainees, who were reportedly shocked at his dismissal. No adequate reason for the Peace Corps action has ever appeared in the press to the best of my knowledge.

Is everybody happy?

Good Attacks Wellman On RS-70

To the Editors:

On Saturday, April 14, the Daily Tar Heel carried an article by one Wade Wellman, titled, "Exit the B-52. Enter the RS-70?" When I first read this article, the opening paragraph struck me as if written by an Air Force recruiter, who was painting a rosy picture of the Air Force for gullible young college males. Mr. Wellman was just pointing out, however, that it makes no difference how pretty an airplane (bomber) is, it can be obsolete. He then progressed to give reasons for the obsolescence of the B-52, but in the course of doing this, he gave a reason why it is not obsolete. This refuted the entire point of his article.

Mr. Wellman said, "The newest model carries Skybolt ballistic missiles—quite enough to handle anything that flies." I feel sure that the Air Force would be glad to know of this capability. Ballistic missiles are designed to fly outside the earth's atmosphere, re-enter, and go to a target as a bomb-type only. They ARE NOT used for shooting down aircraft. These missiles were designed so that the U.S. could continue using the B-52, but instead of sending the bomber the entire target distance, using the missile the last 1000 miles. Mr. Wellman also pointed out that with its high altitude and speed, the RS-70 is a good successor to the B-52. If we have missiles such as the NIKE, currently being tested in the Pacific, that can shoot down missiles, we can certainly shoot down any airplane, no matter how high or fast it is.

"The time is not ripe for this country, or for Russia, to concentrate on all-missile strategy," is another statement made by Mr. Wellman, which may not be entirely true. The Russians have NOT put into production in the last two years a long-range bomber but have concentrated almost entirely on missiles. Maybe we ought to do the same.

One of Mr. Wellman's final statements was "the RS-70 will soon be desperately needed. "The only people who need it are the Air Force pilots. They need the comfort and security of a stick in their hands and flight pay in their pockets. Remember that the B-29 was the answer to the B-36, then the B-47, then the B-52, most recently the B-58, and now the RS-70.

Europe's New Juggernaut

To the Editors:

Last month, when the foreign ministers of the Common Market nations met to discuss political unity, they tripped on an unexpected snag. France, Germany, and Italy had agreed on a tentative plan for a loose confederation of the Inner Six. But the Benelux nations refused to go ahead with unity, unless British membership could be guaranteed. The snag was too much for the April Conference. The ministers went home, but agreed to meet again in the near future.

Why should the smaller countries demand British membership in any European Combine? The reason is easily detected. The tightening Franco-German alliance, and the excellent understanding between Bonn and Paris, makes it plain that this coalition will be heavily dominated in its early stages by Germany and France. The Benelux countries fear that if Britain is not included, they will soon be taken over and exploited by France and Germany. Beyond this lies a fear that the European Combine will eventually be converted into a new German empire, with a government ranging anywhere from Mussolini Fascism to Willy Brandt Socialism.

These fears are understandable, yet it seems unlikely that British participation would make any great difference. Britain's influence is rapidly shrinking; if she joins the Combine she will probably be a late comer, humbly toeing the mark. If, despite these obvious factors, the Benelux nations refuse to backtrack, my feeling is that Paris and Bonn will go ahead without them. The smaller nations in that event will have no choice but to fall in step, along with Scandinavia, Spain and Portugal.

On the other hand, if they see that France and Germany will not be deterred, the Low Countries will probably give up and follow the leaders. But whatever happens on this front, the signs indicate that a working agreement will be hammered out in a few more months, either a Franco-German deal or a deal embracing all of the Inner Six. De Gaulle wants to start out with a loose confederation which can gradually knit closer together. We may well see this in operation by the time we come back to school in September. And soon—make no doubt about it—Germany will swallow it up like a shark swallowing a trout.

What happens then will depend on the good will of the Germans. A key factor lies in the status of East Germany, the most troublesome and unpromising of the Red satellites. The wall of shame has furnished the United States with an inexhaustible source of propaganda. The East German economy, sagging under leadership of the emetic Premier Ulbricht, is a drain on Moscow's foreign-aid program. It just may be that our Bolshevik friends would be glad to rid themselves of East Germany, if they could persuade West Germany, and in consequence West Europe, to leave NATO and function as a neutral power bloc in exchange for German unity.

Thus, we can't overlook the possibility that Germany may once again bargain with Russia and leave us facing the Communist world all by ourselves. Hans Kroll, in his approaches to Russia last winter, gave strong support to this trend of thinking, though we don't know just what he said to Khrushchev and Co. More and more, the conviction grows that the division of Germany may soon land us in a position where we have to stand alone against Russia. This is the same division, incidentally, that the Anglo-American victors created in May of 1945, when we forced the Germans to sign two separate unconditional surrenders—one to the Western powers and one to the glorious ally, Soviet Russia.

OAS Killing 3 Per Hour In Algeria

ALGIERS (UPI) — The Secret Army OAS killed at a rate of three persons an hour in Algeria Thursday, concentrating on Moslem women. Thursday night the terrorists opened fire in Oran with grenades and heavy machine guns against French security forces.

French authorities said 41 persons were killed and 27 wounded across Algeria Thursday. Many of the victims were Moslem women—seven in Oran where a Moslem mob was barely kept in check by French security forces and nine in Algiers, including a 14-year-old child.

Moslem terrorists struck back in Blida where a European woman and her child were found dead in their homes, an indication that Moslem anger at the continued OAS terrorism — now directed against women—was unchecked.

Press Lets 'Johnny' Know When Robins Come

By MATTHEW WEISMAN

There are large gaps in Southern literature, gaps which the U.N.C. Press is trying to fill.

The need for books on the South is shown in the following case of Johnny, a Louisiana schoolboy, and his teacher. "Johnny," she asked, "when do the robins come?" "In the fall," Johnny answered. "Now, Johnny," the teacher remarked reproachfully, "you're wrong. Think again." "In the fall," Johnny repeated staunchly; "I've seen 'em." The teacher became stern. "Look in your book!" she commanded. And there sure enough—under the imprint of a Boston publisher—was the unqualified statement, "Robins come in the spring."

Not all teachers are so stubbornly pedagogic. However, the example does point out the need to fill in this gap of natural study books on the South.

A look at the book titles will show the press' many different ways of meeting these needs. Within the field of regional studies there is a variety of novels, short stories, verse, drama, history, biography, regional social studies, which include race relations and the Negro, regional Botany and Zoology.

Some of the titles are "I Rode with Stonewall," "Forty Acres and Steel Mules," and "The Negro and the Schools."

This last book deserves some attention. Harry S. Ashemore's "The Negro and the Schools" was released the day before the 1954 Supreme Court decision on school integration. This book gave a greatly needed factual background of Southern school conditions at that time.

Today, regular appearance of such volumes as these is no more startling than another biography of a current political leader. However, at the beginning of the Press' life, getting these books through the press was a slow step by step battle. North Carolinians did not take quickly to the idea that there should be books "by niggers" or "about niggers." There was more than one diehard who protested against the publication of certain titles or phrases in the texts.

Not only books about regional race but also books on religious and economic topics were considered touchy subjects.

Varied Titles

There are also books which not even a staunch professional Southerner could relate regionally. Some of these non-regional titles are: "The Novel and Society," "Scotch-Irish," and a book on "Nematology" by a N.C. State professor. This last book with its study of insects which cause damage to plant life has had a great impact upon the agricultural life of underdeveloped countries.

Another important book from the press is the "Hiroshima Diary." This bestseller, a happy but infrequent occurrence for a university press, is presently printed in 15 languages. The book's intimate account of the events following the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima has played a large role in educating people as to the personal consequences of an atomic war.

Social Impact

Almont Lindsey's book "Socialized Medicine in England and Wales" potentially presents a social impact as great if not greater than the "Hiroshima Diary." This book which is to be released on the 26th of this month is described by reviewer James Dixon, President of Antioch College, as an "extraordinarily calm and thoughtful appraisal of the development of socialized medicine in England and Wales." Dixon, who is himself a Harvard M.D., goes on to say, "his work should do much to dispel the common anxiety that social reform in medicine is only undertaken at the price of curtailing the opportunities of the physician to act n the best interests of the health of his patient."

One needs only to consult current newspaper headlines to see that the U.N.C. Press not only keeps up with the needs for scholarly examination of current issues, but also anticipates such needs.

'61 Graduate Wins Second Study Grant

Joseph Wayne (Swag) Grimsley, 1961 graduate who was picked by Time magazine (June 16) as one of 12 top students from across the country, has been awarded a Scottish Rite Fellowship for study at George Washington University.

He is at present in Bogota, Colombia on a Fulbright grant.

The North Carolina Scottish Rite Fellowship for study at the Washington, D. C. institution is part of a program for education toward Government service. It carries a yearly stipend of $2,200.

Grimsley, from Wilson, graduated near the top of his class last year with a B.A. in international studies. A campus politician, he headed everything from the athletic association to the interdormitory council.

In the summer of 1960 he worked to nominate Lyndon B. Johnson for President in Los Angeles where he organized the Texan's uproarious airport welcome.

Time magazine admired him as a student "for already achieving that rare blend of ability and ambition that ignores all obstacles and stretches all talent."

Bev Haynes Picked Soph Of Month

Bev Haynes

Beverly Ann Haynes, a sophomore in the School of Nursing, is the third "Sophomore of the Month."

Beverly, from Washington, D. C., is active in all phases of student activity. In addition to her work in the Nursing School, she is the Chairman in the Women's Council, a "Dean's List" student, a member of Chi Omega Sorority and pledge trainer of Chi Omega.

George Rosental, Sophomore class president, said that she was selected by the committee because of her achievements and fine record of service to the University.

"The first coed to be the recipient of this honor, Beverly should serve as an inspiration to other coeds on the campus," Rosental said.

The "Sophomore of the Month" is a new award instituted this year to honor members of the class that deserve recognition through their high standards and contributions to the University.

"This is a fine way of honoring members of the class," Rosental said. "I hope that it will be continued next year."

CRAM COURSE NO. 5: SHAKESPEARE

Continuing our series of pre-final exam cram courses, today we take up the works of William Shakespeare (or "The Bard of Avon" as he is jocularly called).

First let us examine the persistent theory that Shakespeare (or "The Pearl of the Antilles" as he is affectionately referred to) is not the real author of his plays. Advocates of this theory insist that the plays are so full of classical allusions and learned references that they couldn't possibly have been written by the son of an illiterate country butcher.

To which I reply, "Faugh!" Was not the great Spinoza's father a humble woodcutter? Was not the immortal Isaac Newton's father a simple second baseman? (The elder Newton, incidentally, is one of history's truly pathetic figures. He was, by all accounts, the greatest second baseman of his time, but baseball, alas, had not yet been invented.) It used to break young Isaac's heart to see his father get up every morning, put on uniform, spikes, glove, and cap, and stand alertly behind second base, bent forward, eyes narrowed, waiting, waiting, waiting. That's all—waiting. Isaac loyally sat in the bleachers and yelled, "Good show, Dad!" and stuff like that, but everyone else in town used to snigger and pelt the Newtons with overripe fruit—figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger. Thus, as we all know, the famous occasion came about when Isaac Newton, struck in the head with an apple, leapt to his feet, shouted, "Europa!" and announced the third law of motion: "For every action there is an opposite and equal reaction!"

(How profoundly true these simple words are! Take, for example, Marlboro Cigarettes. Light one. That's the action. Now what is the reaction? Pleasure, delight, contentment, cheer, and comfort! And why such a happy reaction? Because you have started with a happy cigarette—a felicitous blend of jolly tobaccos, a good-natured filter, a rollicking flip-top box, a merry soft pack. As Newton often said, "You begin with better makin's, you end with better smokin's." Small wonder they called him "The Swedish Nightingale!").

But I digress. Back to Shakespeare (or "The Gem of the Ocean" as he was ribaldly appelated).

Shakespeare's most important play is, of course, Hamlet (or Macbeth, as it is sometimes called). This play tells in living color the story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, who one night sees a ghost upon the battlements. (Possibly it is a goat he sees: I have a first folio edition that is frankly not too legible.) Anyhow, Hamlet is so upset by seeing the ghost (or goat) that he stabs Polonius and Bare Bodkin. He is thereupon banished to a leather factory by the King, who cries, "Get thee to a tannery!" Thereupon Ophelia refuses her food until Laertes shouts, "Get thee to a beanery!" Ophelia is so miffed that she chases her little dog out of the room, crying, "Out, out damned Spot!" She is fined fifty shillings for swearing, but Portia, in an eloquent plea, gets the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Thereupon King Lear and Queen Mab proclaim a festival—complete with amateur theatricals, kissing games, and a pie-eating contest. Everyone has a perfectly splendid time till Banquo's ghost (or goat) shows up. This so unhinges Richard III that he drowns his cousin, Butt Malmsey. This leads to a lively discussion during which everyone is killed. The little dog Spot returns to utter the immortal curtain lines:

Alack, the play forsooth was sad and sobby,
But be of cheer—there's Marlboros in the lobby!

As the slings and arrows of outrageous fluke loom closer, perchance the makers of Marlboro are not untoward to offer this friendly suggestion: Get thee to a library!

The Carolina Gentleman

If ever a man set a good example for the male students of the University of North Carolina, Jake Wade did. Of course, Jake was the kind of man whose personality intrigued everyone who knew him, but in his role as sports publicity director he proved to be a charming example of the Carolina Gentleman.

Jake Wade was THE Carolina Gentleman. Athletes and other students who knew him realized that he was unquestionably the grand old man of sports in the state, and they were proud that they knew him.

Mr. Wade's death Wednesday afternoon came as a shock to thousands connected with the UNC, North Carolina, and Atlantic Coast Conference sports worlds.

Julius Jennings Wade graduate from Carolina in 1923 and served newspapers in Charlotte, Gastonia, Raleigh, Greensboro, and Pittsburgh, Pa., during the next seven years. In 1930 he returned to Charlotte and was sports editor of the Charlotte Observer until 1946 when he was named to the position as UNC sports publicity director.

His years as a sportswriter proved him to be one of the nation's best. Indeed, he became to the State of North Carolina what Grantland Rice was to the nation.

It's sad that the present season, Jake's last as a UNC fan, had to be one of the poorest sports years in recent Carolina athletic seasons. But the author of "Carolina Caravan" looked with enthusiasm to the coming years when the football team faces its toughest schedule ever, when the talented freshman basketball players join the varsity, when the tennis team returns all of its top men in quest of an unbeaten season, when the baseball team should return to higher position, and when the so-called minor sports cease to be minor in every sense of the word.

Baseball Frosh Continue To Roll

By LOUIS ROTHENTHAL

Frank Gallagher, batting an even .500 for the season, knocked a single, a double and a three-run homer, to lead the Tar Babies to a 10-3 win over the State College frosh, Wednesday at Raleigh.

Gallagher and Ken Willard, who went three-for-three, got half of the freshmen's hits, while Bill Dannemann scattered eight hits in getting his fifth victory against no defeats.

Dannemann struck out 10, and allowed only two earned runs, on Jerry Morris's round-tripper, as he was in control of the game throughout.

The freshmen started the scoring in the second, when Ron Barlow singled, and scored on Dannemann's two-bagger. Dannemann's runner, Ron Stanley, came home when Dick Fleming's grounder was mishandled by the State third baseman, and overthrown.

The Tar Babies got a run in the third, when Willard scored while Billy Taylor was caught in a "hot-box."

In the fifth, Willard walked and went to third on Gallagher's double. Ken Boykin then knocked Willard home with a single.

The Wolflets got a run back in the sixth, but in the eighth, the Carolina frosh teed off.

Taylor reached first on an error. Barlow got his second single and Bobby Reagan doubled home Taylor. Dannemann scored Barlow on a sacrifice fly, and Fleming knocked home Reagan.

Willard doubled, putting runners on second and third, as Gallagher came to bat, and he responded by knocking a 360-foot home run to sew up the game.

Gallagher now leads the Tar Babies with RBI's with 16, followed by Willard and Jerry Clark with 13. Bobby Reagan has 11.

The slugging right-fielder from Chester, Pa., also is the leading hitter, with a .500 average. Fleming follows with a .340, and Merle Kruer is next at .333. Barlow rounds out the top hitters with a .305.

Fleming also leads in doubles with 40, and Bill Taylor's 2 triples are also tops.

The pitching staff has also done its share of hitting for the Tar Babies. Dannemann leads with a .357 and 6 RBI's. Walton Ward is next with a .333.

The moundsmen have also done a great job on the hill, as Dannemann and Ward together have eight wins and no defeats. Jerry Davis has picked up 4 wins and only one loss.

Dannemann leads the ERA department also, with a 1.70. Jerry Davis follows at 2.05, and Ward is third at 2.82.

The Tar Babies now have a 13-3 record and are 7-2 in the "Little Big Four." Last year's frosh won the title, and the Tar Babies need to beat State today at Chapel Hill to cop the title again.

They played Oak Ridge yesterday and end the season at Wilmington Saturday. They beat Oak Ridge, 4-0, behind Davis, and took two from Wilmington, 10-8 and 6-1.

Joe White started for the Tar Babies yesterday and either Ward or Davis will go today, with the other pitching in Wilmington Saturday.

Blue Imps Dominate Freshman Track

Ronnie Jackson, a fleet-footed freshman halfback during the football season, and Ray Kernodle were the only North Carolina freshmen to capture first places in the Big Four frosh track meet held at Durham Wednesday. Jackson won the 100-yard dash and Kernodle took first in the broad jump.

Duke's Blue Imp cindermen won nine of the 16 events to dominate the meet, but no official team scores were kept. Wake Forest's best freshman track team in years finished second, unofficially, with N.C. State and UNC in a close battle for third.

The frosh from Duke finished tops in the mile run, high hurdles, high jump, javeline, 880, discus, pole vault, low hurdles, and mile relay.

Mile: Weisiger (D), Jacobsen (D), Raylor (WF). 4:29.9.

440: Phillips (WF), Flowers (D), Jones (WF). 51.7.

100: Jackson (UNC), Dunlap (WF), Craver (WF). 10.4.

High hurdles: Fogle (D), Maguire (WF), Corn (NCS). 51.1.

High jump: Mann (D), tie for second between Tison (D), Barnes (D), Corn (NCS), Martin (WF). Six feet.

Shot: Sasser (NCS), Loy (NCS), Fedor (UNC). 47-10½.

Javeline: Furlong (), Boyd (UNC), Kaveny (NCS). 177-2¾.

880: Jacobsen (D), tie for second between Whichard (UNC) and Nichols (WF). 2:02.3.

220: Hartley (WF), Craver (WF), Hyers (D). 22.3.

Broad jump: Kernodle (UNC), Maguire (WF), Cooper (D). 21-6.

Discus: Berry (D), tie for second between Warren (UNC) and Sasser (NCS). 127-5½.

Two-mile: Woodcock (NCS)3, Weisiger (D), Wiggins (D). 9:53.1.

Pole vault: Waddell (D), Coath (WF), Corn (NCS). 12-6.

Low hurdles: Fogle (D), Cooper (D), Maguire (WF). 24.5.

Mile relay: Duke. 3:33.7.

Legislature Returns Print Shop Proposal To Study Committee

By HARRY DeLUNG

The purchase of a print shop for the Daily Tar Heel will be investigated by a committee established by Student Legislature Thursday night.

The bill, which originally called for $5,000 to be placed in a fund for the purchase was divided into two bills and the appropriation defeated. It was anticipated that an appropriation of $10,0000 would be considered by the body after the investigation was completed next year.

George Rosental (SP, DM 1), who introduced the bill, estimated that the total cost of the print shop would amount to between $90,000 and $110,000. The bill anticipates an eventual down payment of $10,000.

Fifty dollars was appropriated to be used by Legislators to improve communication with constituents. The bill, introduced by Rufus Edmisten (SP, DM VI), specifies that the funds will be distributed by the finance committee which will consider requests from individual legislators.

A bill establishing a campus travel agency to co-ordinate and publicize information about student travel opportunities was passed unanimously.

Due to the large backlog of cases pending, a temporary approval of procedures for the Men's Honor Council was passed. Charles Cooper (SP, TM IV), who co-introduced the bill with John McMillan (UP. TM III), said that the council's penalties would probably be up for legislative approval early in the fall semester.

An appropriation of $60.70 was made for delegates' fees for the National Student Association regional conference which met on April 28 and 29. It was stated during debate on the bill that only under unusual circumstances would legislature again pass money to cover expenses previously incurred.

Arthur Hays (SP, DM IV) introduced a bill to establish campus bulletin boards for posting of legislation. Also introduced was a bill to provide $3944.50 for dorm intramural managers program. Bruce Welch (SP, DM III) explained that the program had been run this year on an experimental basis and proved successful.

Mike Lawler, speaker of the body, urged all legislators to give more consideration to their bills before they are submitted. He noted that "in the first five meetings of this session, more bills have been withdrawn than in all meetings of the last session."

Farris Selected Permanent Class Prexy, Mr. Alum

Ray Farris has been elected permanent president of the Class of 1962, and he and Janice Haley have been chosen to serve as Mr. and Miss Alumni for the graduating seniors.

Bob Sevier, chairman of the Nominations Committee, announced the results of the Thursday morning election at the Hoenig's Cabin party last night.

Other permanent officers chosen were Bill Harriss, First Vice-President; Bob Sevier, Second Vice-President; Ward Marslender, Treasurer and Kathy Ellenwider, Secretary.

The party was the concluding event in the two "Senior Days" for 1962. The days began early Thursday morning with a mass meeting for all Seniors to elect their permanent officers.

Thursday afternoon there was a party at the Patio with Doug Clark's Combo. Last night's entertainment was provided by Don Thompson and the Bonnevilles.

The permanent officers will coordinate activities for the Class of 1962 as alumni and will serve to gather the class together for reunions and future events.

U. S. Considering Stronger Action In Laos, Will Send Troops If Other Means Fail

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Alarmed by Communist advances in Laos, the Kennedy administration is considering more forceful action there, possibly even the dispatch of U.S. troops if all else fails, it was disclosed Friday.

An effort to find some middle course between sending American troops to bolster crumbling government defenses or letting Laos go to the Reds apparently was made at White House and State Department meetings Thursday night and Friday. More sessions were planned.

State Department spokesman Lincoln White said Russia has not repliied to two U.S. appeals to help restore the ceasefire in Laos. He said Russia had the "capacity" to call off the Communist offensive.

White told reporters "nobody is sitting on his hands around the capital here, but I have no comment on what action might become necessary."

Some of President Kennedy's top advisers have told him the United States . . . may no longer have "the luxury of . . . letting the royal army do the fighting."

White said royal Lao army forces seem to be putting up "no effective defense" against Communist troops in northern Laos. Reports from the scene said panicky government troops were swarming across the Mekong River into Thailand or fleeing southward into Red-held territory.

Senate Sub-Group Votes India Aid Cut

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 8-7 Friday to cut U.S. foreign aid to India by 25 per cent, reflecting in part the Nehru government's "failure to line up with the free world."

It also adopted 10-5 an amendment to the $4.9 billion foreign aid authoriation bill which would suspend aid to any country that failed to correct within six months the nationalization or expropriation of American property.

The India aid cut, if upheld on the Senate floor, would cost the government of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru more than $180 million. It was sponsored by Sen. Stuart Symington, D.-Mo., who failed on an 8-5 vote to strike out all aid for India.

Sen. John J. Sparkman, D.-Ala., who opposed the cut as untimely, said an effort would be made on the Senate floor to restore the funds.

Sparkman said arguments offered in behalf of the cut during the closed-door session reflected displeasure with India's military spending in connection with the Pakistan dispute and with Nehru's could not exceed 75 per cent of the funds obligated during the current 1062 fiscal year. Sparkman put the professed neutral position in the East-West struggle. India also came under sharp congressional criticism this year for the seiure of Goa from the Portuguese.

The Symington amendment specified aid to India under both the foreign aid and agricultural surplus disposal act Public Law 480, total of such U.S. aid to India at $727 million.

Jane Craige Gray Award Given Sunday

The Jane Craige Gray Award to the Outstanding Junior Woman will be presented at a tea in her honor tomorrow at 4 p.m. at the Kappa Delta Sorority House.

The award is given annually by Beta Chi Chapter of Kappa Delta in memory of Jane Craige Gray, an outstanding Kappa Delta and wife of Mr. Gordon Gray, University President from 1950 to 1955.

This honor has been presented each year since its origin in 1954 to the junior woman judged most outstanding in character, scholarship, and leadership.

Mr. Charles Shaffer of the Office of Development for the University will speak and present the award.

A special committee of students, administration and faculty members chooses the recipient each year. Last year's recipient was Judy Burton.

'Woman Behind The Desk' Gets Some Strange Requests

By LOUIS ROSENTHAL

"Ray Jeffries asked me for a dress. I told him it would go around him three times, but he insisted. He needed it for some kind of initiation."

That is one of the many experiences that Mrs. Gustave A. Harrier, the "lady behind the desk" at South Building, has had in her 18-years of passing out information, openign and sorting mail, and being a general hostess for UNC visitors.

She first came to UNC in 1915, the wife of the Classics department chairman, Professor Gustave A. Harrier.

When her husband died in 1944, she moved to the desk in the lobby of South Building, where she has been ever since.

Few Student Changes

The Jeffries incident happened when the former assistant Dean of Student Affairs was a freshman. "He was just one of many students I have met when they came up to ask information, or to talk to me."

There hasn't been any real change in the Carolina student except "just as young people change. There are many more of them and they reflect the trends of the times.

"The University has gotten so big, and there isn't as close student-faculty relationship as before. President Frank Porter Graham had 'Sunday Evenings' at his home while he was here. The students would come often, and they would sit on the floor or anyplace they could find. Graham would join them on the floor, and talk about anything and everything."

No Mistakes Yet

Mrs. Harrier handles all mail addressed to "University of North Carolina." She opens, reads, sorts and redistributes about 750 pieces of mail a day.

"Many visitors who come here see the 'Information' sign in front, and ask where professors who have died or gone to other schools are at. Since I have been here so long, they haven't been able to trip me up once."

The conversation was interrupted by Dr. W. H. Peacock of the Physical Education department, who came in and asked to find a janitor so he could get some awards and plaques from the South Building attic. Mrs. Harrier directed him to a janitor.

U.S. Must Prepare, Says Professor

Second 'Baby Boom' Coming

The United States is approaching its second "baby boom" in the mid-60s which will exceed the "baby boon" following World War II.

This prediction, made by Professor Daniel O. Price, Director of the Institute for Research in Social Science at UNC, will affect the United States strongly in many different areas.

Professor Price said that the girls that were born in the "baby boom" after the war will reach child-bearing age of 18 through 35 years old beginning in 1963.

Momentum From First Boom

"If birth rates remain anywhere near their present level, this sharply increasing number of women in their child-bearing ages will be producing a new wave of babies that will far exceed the number born in the post-war period."

Price continued: "In other words we are on the threshold of a second 'baby boom' that, like the second stage of a rocket, is built on top of the momentum of the first stage."

Unless unforeseen changes occur, according to Price, there will be a high rate of population growth and the U.S. must ". . . begin to prepare for the consequences."

This impact of new babies will be especially felt in the schools and in the labor market. Educating and providing jobs for this new increase in population will mean greater problems economically.

Fewer Workers

Price states that the percentage of our "working population" between 20 and 64 years of age has been steadily declining and by 1970 almost 50 per cent of our population will be supporting the other half.

This means that, according to Price, ". . . the education of the increasing number of children must be supporteld by a decreasing proportion of the population."

This decrease in the amount of economicallly active people and increase in the dependents will, in the short run, bring some new problems with it.

Since no further increase is needed in the unskilled labor force, more and more children must be educated past the high school level to fill the labor market.

In view of some of these problems, Price makes some observations and some suggestions:

1. The rate of expansion in the economy must compensate for the growing number of job-seekers.

2. Since unskilled labor is on the decline, more people will be desiring a higher education and will be going to schools for longer periods of time.

3. As a result of this a great school building boom will occur in the 70's (which, in turn, will also put people to work).

4. Earlier marriages will put more women into the labor market after their children get into school. These working mothers will compete with young people just entering the labor force.

5. Decreasing the age of compulsory retirement would open up new jobs, but many older people will be able to work longer due to new knowledge of medical problems.

Professor Price made two suggestions to deal with these new population problems. The first is to provide more educational opportunities for economically disadvantaged children and, second, to make family limitation possible among families least able to provide education opportunities for their children.

GEORGE SHEARING

George Shearing, internationally famous jazz pianist, and his quintet will appear at Memorial Hall Tuesday at 8 p.m. in a concert sponsored by Graham Memorial.

Admission is free to UNC students with ID cards, $1.00 for student wives. The general public will be admitted for $1.50 at 7:45 if space is available.

FREE FLICK

"Time Machine" is tonight's Free Flick, at 7:30 and 9:30 in Carroll Hall, to students with I.D.s only. The movie is based on a novel by H. G. Wells.

ACKLAND ACQUIRES OIL

FIFTEENTH CENTURY WORK OF ART ACQUIRED BY ACKLAND ART CENTER—This painting of the Madonna and saints has just been purchased by the University of North Carolina's Ackland Art Center for its permanent collection. It is attributed to the Florentine master Jacopo del Sellaio. The painting comes from the William A. Whitaker Fund. In the center of the painting are the Madonna and child. From left to right, the saints are "Saint Lucy, a virgin martyr who lost her eyes which she holds in her hand; Saint Sebastian, holding arrows, a symbol of his torture; John the Baptist; and Saint Catherine, holding the wheel, a symbol of her torture. The painting, measuring 66 by 69 inches, will be the largest in the Ackland collection.

Sleeping In Class No Fun

(Editor's note: The grad student in the following story asked that his name not be used—for obvious reasons.)

By LINDA BISER

Is living in the classroom the answer to the University's housing problem? One UNC graduate student who sleeps and eats in a classroom doesn't think this is the solution.

He'll probably succumb to dorm life next fall.

He keeps his sleeping bag open, but out of sight behind some display boards in his classroom, but the professors don't know it. Neither does the janitor, because the grad student is up and on his way to the shower by the time the janitor arrives in the morning.

He has acquired five lockers in various buildings on campus that serve as closets, and his desk drawer contains a hot plate and some canned goods.

"Housing for graduate students isn't so good in Chapel Hill," he said.

Cold Feet

The basement apartment he shared with two other students was so cold in January that he had to study with his feet in the oven. The house was a mile from campus and the children living upstairs usually got up about 5 a.m. and roller skated across the floor. The kitchen table in the apartment above his was right over his head and people kept droppings things off of it.

"All the noise bugged me," he said.

And then one night he returned from a weekend in Washington and found sewerage backed up into the basement. "I couldn't sleep there," he said, "so I took a sleeping bag and went to a classroom to sleep. It was warm."

Cheap Sleep

It was so warm in the classroom that he stayed. At first he put the sleeping bag on top of some desks, but later moved to a ledge behind the display boards. The student estimates he has saved about $30 a month rent since January plus car expenses since he is no longer commuting.

Does it disturb his sleep when other students study late in his classroom? "Not at all," he said, and pulled a pair of earplugs from his desk drawer.

There are some problems, however. Early one Sunday morning a student walked in with a dog. The dog scented the sleeping student, walked into his boudoir behind the display boards, and waked him by licking his face.

Patrick May

Patrick May is not the type of boy that runs around stealing tires, he is not the type of boy that one would even suspect of trying to steal anything. He is quiet, clean cut, and apparently intelligent. He may suffer from a bit of conformity, or from being overly polite—but not from kleptomania.

* * *

Yet, in a case swamped in confusion, May has been charged with larceny, specifically with attempting to steal a tire from the side of a home on Rosemary Street. This is rather interesting in light of the fact that May neither owns a car, nor collects used tires.

* * *

However, May readily admits to picking up the tire? Why He could find nothing else handy with which to accost a prowler that he had frightened away from the home of James Bowman. He apparently made the mistake of getting involved in problems not his own.

* * *

For his trouble he was shot in the leg.

Mr. Bowman, who does not want to press charges, or involve May in any scandal, accidently shot May in the legs with a shotgun, while attempting to frighten away the prowler that apparently both May and Bowman's daughter had seen.

* * *

The rapidity with which warped versions of the story have spread about points out two deplorable situations.

* * *

First is the overly eager manner in which people jump to conclusions. If a story is confused or complicated, then the facts don't seem to be too important. What we all want to hear is the juicy bit of gossip that floats on the top; we enjoy the misinformed hypotheses that permeate ignorant speculation. We want to hear the "story," then we may listen to the facts. But first, the "story."

* * *

Also deplorable is the way in which the great American Press will pick up a case of this sort and run the comments, without waiting to hear the verdict. Papers must sell, and confused accounts of "prowling" incidents no doubt sell quite a few; public taste being what it is. If a student is involved in an incident, it may be news worthy, but then again, so are the facts.

* * *

It would seem that several papers have printed stories, relayed to them by a stringer operating in this area, that do not make overly clear all the facts, but that do make for interesting "public-taste-type" journalism.

* * *

So let us be aware of all the facts, let us be conscious of the persons involved, let's give Patrick May a break. (cw)

Sincere Interest?

Legislature's Thursday night vote not to appropriate $5,000 out of the surplus to set up a DTH-press-fund appears to have been another case of overzealous hair-splitting by the legislators.

* * *

They didn't want to set up a fund because it was "unnecessary," a partly-valid charge. It is true that new legislation would have to be introduced if the money were to be used. It is true that the appropriation would serve no major purpose except psychological.

* * *

But . . . If Legislature is afraid to set aside $5,000 this year, will it be any less reluctant to appropriate $10,000 next year, if the committee decides a press should be bought?

* * *

Legislature was hesitant to take too positive a step into a new area, understandably. But passage of the appropriation part of the bill would have shown a much more sincere interest in the possibilities of a press, and would have shown that Legislature's daring sometimes goes beyond setting up yet another committee. More Confusion

Chapter two of Roberts-Rules-Raped: members of the Student Legislature Thursday night overwhelmingly defeated a motion to bring the DTH press bill to an immediate vote. The $5,000 appropriation part of the bill had just been defeated, and a vote was moved on the portion of the bill which sets up a press-investigatory committee . . . the motion was defeated.

* * *

Then—silence.

Apparently the legislators didn't know what they were voting on . . . a not too unusual situation.

* * *

After a minute of embarrassed noiselessness, Speaker Mike Lawler advised the body that it "has defeated its own purpose," since obviously no one wanted to speak on the bill. Eventually the legislators managed their way out of their self-imposed parliamentary confusion. Perhaps in the future they will be more mindful of what legislation they're blithely passing and defeating. (jc)

"Where Did This Darn Stone Come From?"

PROF. WALTER BERNS

Professors Must Be Involved In Politics

(Prof. Bernes, known as the "outspoken individualist" of the Department of Government at Cornell University, recently wrote this article for the Cornell Daily Sun, student newspaper.)

OUR PROFESSORS MUST ADVOCATE DEFENSE OF CIVILIZATION

The purpose of the university places it in a position of uneasy tension with the community, and the tension is likely to increase with the extent to which this purpose is fulfilled. Devoted to the discovery of truth, it is likely to be unmindful of what passes for truth in the community, of those opinions that, nevertheless, form the very basis of the community. The notion of the absent-minded professor and the contemptuous reference to "ivory-tower thinkers" are merely peculiarly modern expressions of a tension that originated many years ago in the relation between Socrates and Athens, a relation that may be characterized as the tension, and sometimes the deadly hostility, between philosophy and the polis, or politics. According to the thought of classical antiquity, this tension might be reduced, but it cannot be overcome: what is good for the polis — let us say, obedience to the law and the customary — is not good for philosophy, or science, as we would say; what is good for philosophy — let us say, a questioning of the law and the customary — is not good for the polis.

FREE INQUIRY

What is good for philosophy or science is free inquiry, but out of free inquiry came the Bomb, and the Bomb is quite evidently not good for the polis; and if the Bomb were the only consequence, it would be difficult if not impossible, to make a case for free inquiry, for science, for philosophy as it was once understood. Fortunately for those who are devoted to it, the Bomb is not the only consequence. To say nothing of the material benefits that have come from modern science, one can say that it is from the tradition of free inquiry that originated with Socrates and is today institutionalized in the universities that civilization has come: one can say that the university civilized the polis. To know this is also to know the existence of the ever-present danger of re-barbarization, and that it is one of the continuing purposes of the universities to prevent this from happening.

Just as it is the duty of the military to defend the civilized polis against the hostile strength of the barbarian (fortunately there seems to be no lack of willingness on the part of the American military to do this), it is the duty primarily of the American universities to remind the country of what is at stake in our struggle to survive in the same world with the Soviet Union and Communist China, and thereby to foster the will to survive as a civilized country, even at the price of considerable material sacrifice and of living with a very clear and always present danger of death. To survive as individuals (within the measure of our mortality) is easy: we need only succumb to Mr. Khrushchev' threats and disarm; to survive as a civilized country requires a fortitude that can arise only from the knowledge that, where as life can be sweet and death terrible, the death of the country that makes it possible for life to be sweet is worse than the death of any of its citizens. So to survive in our time requires a knowledge of the difference between civilization and barbarism. No more than Socrates — indeed ,considering the alternative that faces us, even less than Socrates — can the universities afford to ignore the political world.

ACTIVE PROFS.

Our university professors cannot be accused of neglecting political affairs; indeed, since the Cuban invasion of a year ago the professors have intervened in politics with such frequency that they may now constitute one of the most active political groups in the country. Individual citizens in large numbers wrote the President after the Cuban fiasco expressing their sympathy with him and their willingness to support the resort to arms against Castro, but the professors, apparently somewhat shocked by the behavior of a President whom they had come to regard almost as one of their number, combined to denounce the ill-fated invasion, and the policy embodied in the invasion, in full-page advertisements in the national press. When the President proposed an expanded civil defense program, some 175 professors from the several universities in the Boston area pooled their funds and the authority attached to the names of their institutions to buy newspaper space for another "Open Letter to President Kennedy," in which they reminded the President and the rest of us of the horrors that would attend thermonuclear war and denounced the idea of a shelter program because, they said, not altogether convincingly, it would increase the probability of such a war. Then, even more recently, it has been the professors and their students who have marched in protest against the imminent resumption of nuclear testing by the United States.

SURVIVAL?

The theme of this professorial intervention in politics is survival — but not, unfortunately, survival as a civilized nation. In fact, in many cases it is survival by means of surrender. In their "Open Letter to President Kennedy," the 175 Boston area professors said: "By buying a shelter program which does not shelter, and thereby believing that we can survive a thermonuclear war, we are increasing the probability of war. This probability increases . . . because we may be more willing to 'go to the brink' if we think survival is possible . . ." What this means is that without the "sense of security" (whether justified or not) that a shelter program would bring, we would be less willing "to go to the brink"—i.e., less willing to stand up to our enemies, less willing to resist the constant pressures, less willing to say to them, this far but no farther. The argument of the 175 Boston professors is a disguised version of unilateral disarmament.

Whether out of ignorance of the probable consequences of thermonuclear war or because of a greater willingness to accept that risk in order to survive as a free and civilized nation, the American people as a whole have thus far displayed a greater resistance to the easy-way-out than has the university community. How long they will be able to maintain this resistance depends, in part, on their ability to ignore the now massed voices of these professors who are united to deprive the nation of its will to accept the risk of war. (Voters in the 33rd New York Congressional District will be put to the test this fall, for although the Voters for Peaceful Alternatives do not as a group advocate unilateral disarmament, their candidate for Congress, Professor Harrop Freeman, does — or did before he was nominated.) Considering what is at stake, this is a strange reversal of the respective roles of university and community. Two factors may account for it. The professors, for reasons that are not readily apparent to anyone familiar with the Soviet Union, have managed to persuade themselves that "peaceful alternatives" and a "positive program for peace" will somehow attract the support of Mr. Khrushchev. (It is worth commenting that no member of the Department of Government at Cornell is associated with the Voters for Peaceful Alternatives, and of the 175 Boston area professors only one, a Miss Betty Burch of Tufts, teaches government or political science.) The other factor has to do with the professors' alleged greater concern for the future of mankind, or "humanity."

"HUMANENESS"

Whether they do speak out of a greater concern for humanity depends on how one defines the word, whether it is understood in the sense of "the suffering masses" or in the sense of "humaneness," of human excellence, that is, of those unique qualities that distinguish man from beasts and civilized men from savages. With respect to our policy toward the Soviet Union and Communist China, it makes all the difference in the world how we understand the humanity we are morally obliged to defend. The so-called humanitarian argument against nuclear arms and shelters sometimes takes the form that morally and politically nothing matters except the survival of human life itself (as if we in this country had no experience of humanly imposed conditions under which it is better to be dead than alive), and that every nation is obliged to avoid any act that is likely to threaten mere existence, especially the existence of the world's innocent "masses."

In a letter to the Ithaca Journal last November, one of Cornell's most distinguished professors concluded a protest against the shelter program with these words: "If we are willing to contemplate living in a world in which millions of our innocent friends and neighbors have been horribly and senselessly murdered (in a nuclear war brought on in part by a shelter program that "encourages us to think of nuclear was as a tolerable possibility . . . "), we have already committed moral suicide." (Addressed to the British and French in 1939, the same argument would have gone as follows: "If you are willing to go to the defense of Poland, you will bring on a war in which millions of your innocent Belgian, Dutch, Norwegian, etc. friends and neighbors will be senselessly murdered. If you are willing to do this, you have already committed moral suicide.") Surely a thermonuclear war and its aftermath are terrible to contemplate, especially in our state of unpreparedness, but it is emphatically not senseless to prepare for such a war if one has every reason to believe that only preparedness will deter Mr. Khrushchev and if one has every rason to believe that while human life will continue under Soviet rule, humanity in the only meaningful sense will not. For if nothing matters except the survival of human life, human life itself does not matter.

MUST PREPARE

Was it senseless to die on the beaches of Normandy or in Bastogne or in Guadacanal or in the unspeakable conditions of Iwo Jima? Many of today's professors did not so regard it at the time. What then was changed? Surely the replacement of Nazi Germany by the Soviet Union has not altered the fundamental situation. Can we not say that humanity or civilization, which in practice means civilized men, would have ceased to exist had it not been for the willingness of millions of men to risk their lives—in some cases willingly to give up their lives—in order to defend it against Nazi Germany? Their lives were not lost "senselessly"; they were lost unnecessarily. They were lost through the stupidity of the men who governed Britain and France in the 'thirties. They were lost because these men refused to arm their countries against Nazi Germany; because these men relied on economic sanctions and disarmament conference under the aegis of the League of Nations, the "peaceful alternatives" of thirty years ago. No sane man can want war, and it may be a paradox that the way to a civilized peace begins with the opening of our minds to the possibility of war, but our experience confirms the sense in which this is true. One has a right to expect university professors to know these things.

In conclusion, one can say that the role of the university has in no way been changed by the threat of thermonuclear war. It is still the duty of the university—specifically, the duty of its faculty of the liberal (or liberating) arts—to promote the truly humane studies, or, one might say, to promote humanity truly understood. The university can best perform its duty, and thereby justify its position in the community, not by reminding its students of the nuclear peril (I know of no Cornell student who had to be reminded of that), but by continuing to be what it has traditionally been, the home of the scholarship that, as someone has said, is "meant to be a bulwark of civilization against barbarism."

Robinson's Ramblings

What is the state of press freedom at Carolina?

If the DTH co-editors were to answer this question, they'd probably say they have almost complete freedom to print anything they chose. Within the bounds of good taste and not so subtle pressure from South Buildings not to print the names of UNC students who get arrested, the DTH is free to print or to OMIT whatever news it pleases. As a newspaper operating in the student interest, the DTH uses its discretion in picking particular news stories the same as any commercial newspaper does.

But there is a big difference. Commercial papers print as much "hard" local news as they find. The DTH does also, yet a curse hangs over its head that goads the editor(s) into delaying news stories until "convenient."

This was the case of the Students for a Democratic Society who met on campus last weekend. The DTH "hosted" the group, which included the Catholic-Socialist Mike Harrington and many freedom riders, yet the DTH first mentioned it on Tuesday—after the conference was over.

The leaders of the group had asked Clotfelter and Wrye not to print anything in the DTH until the conference was over and they agreed. It is beside the point that their secrecy smacks of the same mystery as their most deadly foes—the KKK, the White Citizens Councils and the Birchers. If militant integrationists expect to gain support, their meetings must be free and open, or at least they should permit responsible reporters to gather news of the meetings unhampered.

With the co-editors help this out-of-state group used UNC facilities but nobody was supposed to know what or who they were.

Many people, including this writer, will not take issue with how worthwhile and valuable is this group's work toward the progress of the South. But the DTH has a definite obligation to the student body and faculty. This suppression of news was extremely ill-advised from the standpoint of the Society's public image, but more important it has further impaired student confidence in the DTH.

The DTH can help repair the damage by showing in the future that it will not show favoritism to integrationists or anyone else.

A newspaper should be impartial, objective and accurate among other things. If the DTH wants to retain its status as a newspaper it must unequivically adopt these tenets.

I'll step down from my soap-box now, but before I go, might I suggest that Journalism 191 could be very helpful to future DTH editors or even to the present editors. Yes, that's J 191—Functions and Responsibilities of Contemporary Journalism.

On the lighter side, there is a self-help article in a national magazine that gives answers for those cliche questions people keep asking each other:

Q. How are you?
A. A poor insurance risk.

Q. Think it'll rain?
A. Where?

Q. How was the party last night?
A. Why ask? You weren't invited.

Q. Do you love me darling?
A. Only on Sundays.

Q. Think you can handle this problem, George?
A. No, prof, you've got the Ph.D.; you tackle it.

Gettysburg Address—New

To the Editors:

Fourscore and seven days ago our big brother brught forth in this country a personal vendetta, conceived in mordacity and dedicated to the proposition that some men are more equal than others.

Now he is engaged in a great civil war, testing whether this firm or that company can long endure. We saw the great battlefield of that war. We saw him desecrate a portion of those firms to their final resting-place so that his bombastic ego might live. It was altogether foolish and pompous that he did this.

For, in a larger sense, he should not desecrate, he should not masticate these firms. Those brave new world men, Marx and Engels, are masticating them far above his poor power to add or to detract. The people will little note, nor long remember what big and little brother said then, but they will never forget what he DID then.

It is for those of us still living, rather, to be dedicated to the task remaining before us—bounce big (and little, and littlest) brother; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that the people of the government, by the government, and for the government, shall not perish in spite of everything. (With apologies to A. Lincoln).

Joan Baez: Waif Or Protest Singer

(Editor's note: The following comment on Joan Baez was written by well-known Carolina folksinger Mike Hall.)

The lights of Memorial Hall dimmed, the curtain parted slightly. She stepped up to the microphone to sing and the one of the few sounds recently to have been heard in Chapel Hill over the throbbing din of combos rang through the auditorium. She was all they had imagined, the wistful dark-haired waif pleading "don't sing love songs you'll wake my mother . . ." In a world where artists of any sort from Paul Gauguin to our own time have secured their popularity as much on their personal image as on the quality of their work this "Orphan Annie plus guitar" carved her own niche and bound herself uniquely within it as she slipped off her shoes to continue her program clasped to the hearts of her public.

Unfortunately, at least to some of us, Joan Baez like the frazzle-haired Orphan of the comic strips could not help getting tangled up with her daddy Warbucks (Pete Seeger) and a great social crusade. Her second stage image (not yet projected into her recordings) of the patron saint of world unity and the dignity of man began in her opening song phrase "Last Night I Dreamed the Strangest Dream I ever dreamed before, I dreamed the world had all agreed to put an end to war." Her abstracted, disjointed and very unorganized reflections on "life" and "living" might better have not been said, though the majority of uncritical student evaluations of her program insist that at least she was "sincere."

And what about this purist business? There is no denying the pure beauty of her voice nor the rich blend of her voice and the sounds from her aging Martin Guitar, but how does a purist reconcile the singing of a traditional ballad like Barbara Allen with the fall-out protest "what hapuened to the rain." The pressure on folk singers today to join protest movements is terrific. This pressure stems from the participation of men like Seeger in labor protest movements through the depression when their only patronage was often from unions or revolutionary political movements.

In the Tar Heel interview printed Friday, Miss Baez is quoted as evaluating folk singers according to "the intent of the individual." The most poignant question raised about her performance must be, what is HER intent? Is she a concert spokesman for the beauty that can be found in traditional music, or has she perhaps decided that her guitar makes a good U.N. flag to brandish across the stage. What if any, was her intent in closing asking for audience participation in the Battle Hymn of the Republic? As I consider this question I ask if it was a masterful piece of programming or merely a faux pas. I concluded, "neither." It was just a young performer tempted to the challenge of whether her personal prestige could right long-stranding wrongs. The permissive participation resulting was not a testimony to the sudden establishment of a new utopian world and miraculous healing of real or imagined north-south wounds but only to the courtesy of an audience that would cater to her whims out of respect for her musical talent.

The stereotype reaction was why not "Dixie?" But the more reflective and perhaps more let-down only preferred the waif image she was when she first stepped into the lights over the awkward crusader image she left upon her exit.

Aside from the drift into social therapy the rest of Miss Baez's program was filled with high spots. Her "Wreck of Engine 143" was a very straightforward working of a little sung railroad song, and her "Black Is the Color" was a most unusual treatment of a song sung so often poorly.

Wade Scholarship Fund Initiated

A scholarship fund in honor of Jake Wade was initiated Thursday by the staff of the Charlotte News.

Wade died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack while driving from Raleigh to Chapel Hill. He was 61.

The fund was launched by sports editor Bob Quincy and staff member Julian Scheer of the Charlotte afternoon paper and other contributions have been invited.

The scholarship, in memory of the UNC sports publicity director and long-time figure in North Carolina sports, will go to a male student showing an interest in sports writing as a career.

LESSON 8- Becoming a specialist

Experienced girl watchers, for whom routine watching has lost some of its excitement, often become specialists. (This is definitely not recommended for beginners. However, it may be practiced as a change-of-pace by more advanced students.) They may spend an entire field trip concentrating on one part of a girl. This tends to step up activity, since it does not require that the whole girl be beautiful. For example, if you decide to specialize in knees, you watch only beautiful knees. (The doorman above appears to be an ankle specialist.) Whatever your watching specialty, make sure your smoking specialty is Pall Mall's natural mildness—it's so good to your taste.

North Carolina Wraps Up ACC Tennis Tourney

THE CAPTAIN...

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

(SPECIAL TO THE DAILY TAR HEEL) North Carolina mathematically eliminated all contenders Friday and clinched the ACC Championship Tennis Tournament with a total-point score of 22.

The four top-seeded favorites, led by Carolina's fine sophomore, George Sokol, all won as expected yesterday to reach the semi-finals beginning this morning at 9:00 on the State Courts at Raleigh.

Sokol, along with teammate Keith Stoneman and Clemson's Bobby Burns, won two matches yesterday while Virginia's Dave Dickenson won one to also enter the charmed circle.

The second-seeded Dickenson, playing on a badly-sprained ankle, turned back Clemson's sixth-rated Doug Stewart, 6-3, 6-3 in his lone match of the day, thereby advancing to meet Burns in the lower bracket of the singles division.

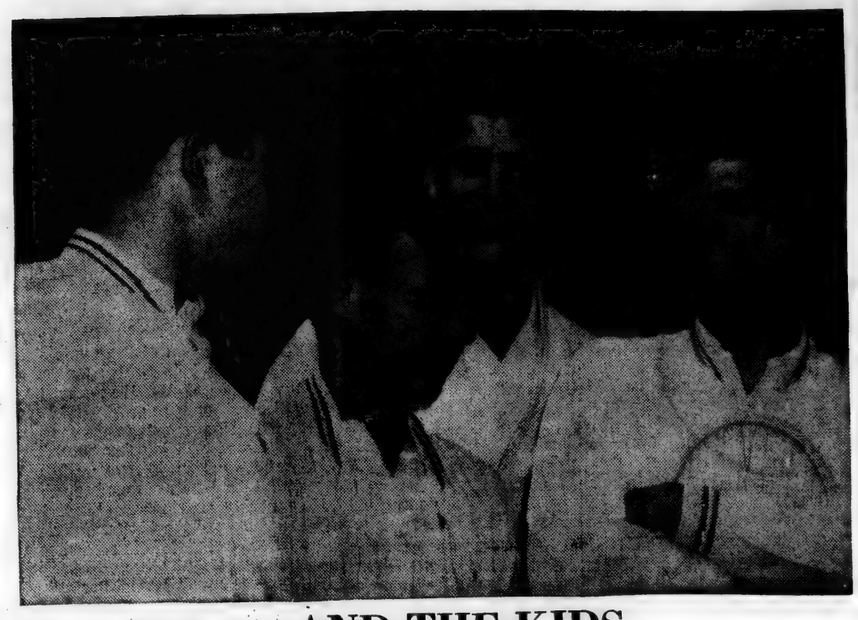
Burns, the Clemson star who wears a drenched inside-out sailor cap while playing, nosed out UNC's Bitsy Harrison in the quarterfinals, 6-8, 6-2, 7-5. Harrison had Burns down 5-4 in the final set but lost the last three games and the match.

In the upper division—the "Carolina only" bracket—Sokol, top-seeded with his 22-1 record this season, will meet the UNC captain, Stoneman.

Husky George, the baseline bomber from Bryn Mawr, Pa., disposed of Clemson's George Christopher (previously undefeated) and Carolina's Ted Hoehn on the way to the semis. In one of the best singles matches of the afternoon, Sokol eliminated his red-headed soph teammate, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.

Stoneman, who is a defending doubles champion, beat Dick Pregnall of Clemson and Virginia's Bruce Farrell to gain his semi-final

In the doubles competition, one semi-final bracket is completed but the other was halted by darkness and will be resumed today at 11.00.



...AND THE KIDS

Md., UNC Place 13 Each

By MARTY KRUMING

Columbia, S. C. — Maryland's highly favored Terrapins and UNC's strongly contending Tar Heels both placed 13 men in the qualifying round of the 9th annual ACC outdoor track championships to take a commanding lead going into today's semi-final events. Only host school South Carolina with 11 qualifiers was within calling distance of the early pace setters.

Duke strongman Dick Gesswein and Carolina's John O'Bannon both thrilled the opening day crowd with record breaking feats in their respective events. Gesswein's heave of 55'5" in the shot put shattered the pre-existing meet record of 54'2" held by Maryland's Ed Cook since 1958.

Later in the afternoon this Blue Devil went on to erase a discus record of 153'10" established by Tar Heel Roger Morriss in 1955. Gesswein's toss was taped at 160' 5¼", a good six feet better than the old mark.

Turning to the broad jump, O'Bannon's leap of 23'6½" was all he needed to crack the long standing Gamecock track record.

Carolina placed at least one man in all 10 events with long striding Jimmy Brown scoring a first and a second in the 120 high hurdles and the 220-yard dash respectively.

Other team scores after yesterday's tabulation's showed Virginia with eight qualifiers, Duke with seven, and Clemson with six.

Duke Takes Five Stroke Golf Lead; Terps' Rivera Is Lone Pacesetter

By ETADIN MOLADNU

WINSTON-SALEM — Favored Duke takes a commanding five-stroke lead into the final round of the ACC Golf Tournament here this afternoon after some well-balanced team scoring yesterday.

The Blue Devils came in with a 290 team total on Friday and led both North Carolina and Wake Forest by five strokes, with Maryland, the only other team in striking distance at 296.

Pete Rivera, a Maryland sophomore, fired an even-par 71 yesterday to lead in the individual race. Rivera, the only man to master par on the windswept Old Town Country Club, was followed by Abe Andes of UNC, Chuck Simons of South Carolina and Duke's Ted McKenzie. The latter three all came in with a 72 to tie for second place.

Eight men shot one-over 73's to set the stage for the mass scramble for the championship this afternoon. The eight include John Abernathy, Jack Faalfield, and Dick Dion from Duke, Harvie Hill of North Carolina, Maryland's Ron Righter, Virginia's Frank Lock, Norman Flynn of South Carolina, and Ken Folke of Wake Forest.

Flynn and Folke, along with Carolina's Peter Green and Duke's George Smith shared the favorite's role prior to the opening round yesterday, but the latter two skied to 76's and remain five shots back of the surprising Rivera.

Green, who tied for championship honors last year at Maryland by shooting a 36-hole 142, was not alone in his troubles on this 6,000-yard layout. Other Tar Heel scores were Jay Harris 74, Mike Dore 78, Sam Duckett 81, and Jere Ayers 82.

SP Will Consider Integration Bill At Meet Monday

Advisory Board To Be Elected

The Student Party will elect four advisory board members and consider a resolution supporting campus and community integration at its last meeting of the semester tomorow night.

The required meeting will be held in the TV room of GM, 8 p.m. Monday.

Keen competition, reminiscent of that surrounding the elections for party chairman and vice-chairman last month, is expected for the four advisory board seats. Several party members are expected to compete for posts on the party's controling board.

The integration resolution, introduced by Mike Putzel, was brought up at last week's meeting, but consideration was postponed because of the small number of party members present.

SP Chairman Robin Britt said that "Due to the controversial nature of the resolution, it was felt that all party members should be given the opportunity to take part in its consideration."

The resolution, if passed, would instruct the SP's Projects Committee to investigate the existing integration situation in the Chapel Hill community and the University, report its findings, and suggest action to the party.

It would also put the SP on record as pledging its "wholehearted support to any campus or Student Government organization working toward total integration, if that organization does not in some other manner conflict with the purpose of the party."

COMING TO YOUR DORM...

MISS CHAPEL HILL, Dorcas Henley, will be hostess for tonight's Nightbeat Houseparty Show at the carrier current studios in Swain Hall. The party for students only will be held from 10-12 p.m. and free cokes will be served. The show is a live spontaneous program with the party being held in the actual broadcasting studios.

IDC Suggests Hiking Social Fee In Dorms

Raise Must Be Okayed By South Building

An increase in the dormitory social fee from $.75 to $1.50 per person was asked by the IDC in a resolution passed recently.

The resolution, introduced by IDC Presidential Assistant John Mitchener, will be passed on to the administration for further action. It also urged the increase be effected by the fall semester of 1962 if possible.

In outlining the reasons for the increase, the resolution stressed the consistent overspending by the dormitories due to increased activities.

"Greater participation by dormitories in an ever-expanding range of activities has developed . . .," it stated, but social funds have not been increased accordingly.

No Three Man Rooms

Also stressed in the resolution was the fact that all three man rooms will become two-man rooms next year. Because of this all, dorms affected by the change will have their social funds cut by one third. Many dorms, however, already found their present funds inadequate, even under the three-man room arrangement.

Another point included was the possibility of dorms making needed dorm improvements due to their increased funds.

In other action, the Council tabled a bill concerning damage to dorm property. It would make the individual dorm responsible for such damage whenever the parties responsible could not be determined.

Also tabled was discussion on an Amendment to the IDC By-Laws that would open the IDC membership to fraternity men. At present, the By-Laws prohibit members of social fraternities from membership in the Council.

Howard Outstanding Member

Walter Howard, a freshman from Richlands, was named the Outstanding IDC member of the Month this week by the IDC Executive Committee. Howard received the recognition for his work with the IDC Social Committee in planning one of its affairs.

He is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary fraternity, and is presently serving as the IDC Representative for Alexander Dorm.

SHOW OF POWER

Kennedy Sends Task Force To Asian Area

No Indication Troops Will Go Into Laos Itself

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Kennedy has ordered a task force of the U.S. 7th Fleet, complete with 1,000 Marines, into Southeast Asian waters as a show of power in the Laotian crisis, officials said Saturday.

There was no immediate information to suggest that Kennedy was planning to send U. S. troops into Laos itself. Rather, the move was interpreted as a maneuver to give non-Communist Laotians a stronger position at the bargaining table during negotiations for a coalition government.

Disclosure of the 7th Fleet's action came as Kennedy and his top military and diplomatic officials held a one hour and 30 minute meeting at the White House to discuss developments in the rapidly deteriorating Laotian situation.

The task force was said to have left Subic Bay in the Philippines Friday. It was enroute to the South China Sea and the Gulf of Siam near the landlocked Laotian kingdom.

Indications were that the Marine battle group might be destined for Thailand, where Royal Laotian troops have taken refuge after being routed by Communist forces in northern Laos.

For several months, U. S. officials have been warning Central Laotian authorities that the Communists might make military moves in northern Laos unless some progress was made at conferences which were to lead to a neutralist, coalition-led government.

Y Continues Korean Drama Book Work

Continuing its drive for drama books, the International Affairs Committee of the Y will have representatives in the lobby of Lenoir Hall this week, Internat Co-Chairmen Glenda Lackey and Rick Edwards announced Saturday.

The books will expand the badly understocked drama library of Dong Kook University in Seoul, Korea.

UNC drama professor Tom Patterson, who leaves this summer to teach at Dong Kook for a year, has called the book project an "opportunity to export our Western culture" to the Far East.

Only Drama School

The drama department at Dong Kook is the only university drama department in Korea, and possibly the only one in eastern Asia. Drama there has traditionally been the preserve of long-established companies, and, in some cases, certain families and has not been studied in the universities as in the West.

Since Korean drama is largely traditional, there has been no development of the type of theater that is characteristic of the West. It is hoped that the books to be sent will contribute to the development of a more sophisticated theater, able to deal with the life of Korea and Koreans today.

Patterned On UNC

The drama department at Dong Kook was styled after the one at Chapel Hill by a Korean graduate of UNC, Sun-Sam Lee, who received his master's degree here in 1959.

Last year, Professor Patterson visited the department and was asked to teach. He recently received a Fulbright Fellowship enabling him to go.

The books needed by the department, which Patterson will use, are all available in paperback. They range in cost from fifty cents to four dollars.

They may be purchased for Dr. Patterson's use at the table in Lenoir lobby or the YWCA offices in Y-Court to select a book from the list of 150. Patterson advises that money be left with the Internat representative so that purchases may be made in bulk.

Those who wish to contribute used anthologies and critical works may leave them with Miss Maggie Dent in Y-Court, or with Professor Patterson in 106 Saunders.

Mr. H. C. McAllister, Secretary of the North Carolina Board of Pharmacy, will discuss the purposes and requirements for practical experience in pharmacy at 7 p.m. Monday in 111 Beard Hall.

Still Doubtful

Yack Editorship Confused

By BILL HOBBS

The question of who will be the next editor of the Yackety Yack yearbook is bathed in confusion. So far, this question has involved the Publications Board, its Selections Board, the Constitutional Council, and, indirectly, the Men's and Women's Honor Councils. Following is a complete roundup of the situation:

The Yack editor, like the editor of the Daily Tar Heel, has traditionally been elected by the student body at large. This year, however, John Randall, an SP representative in the student legislature from the Lower Quad, introduced a bill, No. BJ-32-24, in the legislature which placed the selection of the Yack editor in the hands of the Selections Board of the Publications Board. The bill passed the legislature and went into effect.

Selections Board

The Selections Board of the Pub Board is, according to the legislation which established it, "composed of all voting members of the Publications Board excluding the editors and business managers." In the past the Selections Board has picked the editors of the Carolina Handbook and the Carolina Quarterly, and the business managers of all student publications.

On Thursday, May 3, this Selections Board met and interviewed two people for the position of Yack editor—Louis Legum and Frank Crowell. At the time the board was in a state of confusion since its new members had not all been named and some of the old members were still sitting on the board. There was question as to which members were eligible to vote on the Yack selection.

Rules Suspended

Accordingly, one member of the Board moved that the board suspend its rules and allow all members present to vote on the selection. This was done, and all voted, including at least two editors.

This vote picked Louis Legum as editor of the Yack next year.

The next day, Friday, May 4, John Randall, who had introduced the legislation giving the Selections Board the power to pick the Yack editor, and who had served as parliamentarian of the legislature, challenged the validity of this selection on the grounds that the Board did not have the right to suspend its rules and allow editors and business managers to vote on the selection.

Randall also said that the Board had not given sufficient publicity to the fact that it was interviewing persons for the Yack position. He cited the section of the law establishing the Pub Board saying that "The Selections Board shall be responsible for . . . publicly announcing those vacancies" which it fills.

Constitutional Council

Under the student constitution, Randall's challenge would be considered by the Constitutional Council, which is composed of three members each from the Men's and Women's Honor Councils, with the Chairman of the Men's Council acting as chairman of the Constitutional Council.

The Student Constitution also says that the Constitutional Council "shall have the power to determine its own procedure." Acting on this clause, Walter Dellinger, as chairman of the Council and its only member to date since neither the Men's nor Women's Honor Councils have selected their members of the Council, has said that the Constitutional Council would require a written appeal before it would enter the case.

Dellinger also said that such an appeal should come from someone who was harmed by the Pub Board's action—someone who did not know the Board was meeting to select an editor.

No Appeal Received

This appeal has not been received. Randall said that he would prepare a formal appeal. (His first appeal was just in the form of a statement to the Daily Tar Heel.) But according to Dellinger's statement, this appeal should not come from a disinterested party such as Randall.

Randall then said that another person, Benjamin Cone, had wanted to run for the position, either by himself or as Co-editor with Julie Latane. Randall said Cone planned to make a written appeal, but Dellinger has not yet received this appeal and cannot call a meeting of the Constitutional Council until he does.

Bill Townsend, Chairman of the Publications Board, has said that the Board is considering holding another meeting — sometime this week—to reconsider the Yack selection. This, however, is complicated by the fact that the new members of the board have still not all been named, and by the fact that the Board is still unsure of its legal position.

Bogged With Work

To add to the confusion, both the Publications Board and the Honor Councils are bogged down with heavy end-of-the-year work, and it is difficult to arrange meeting times. This Wednesday the Pub Board will consider appointments to several business manager and editorship positions.

The Men's and Women's Councils are both laden with untried cases—so much so that the student legislature Thursday night passed a temporary law allowing six, rather than the standard seven, members of the Council to try a case.

Thus the situation as it now stands is one of thorough confusion. If the Constitutional Council receives a written appeal, it will meet to decide whether the Pub Board's action was legal. But the Pub Board may hold another meeting in the meantime. But mainly, no one is sure exactly what will happen.

Campus Roundup

Pika's Go Whole Hog At Ky.

PIG FOR PIKA's

The Pika fraternity at the University of Kentucky last week shipped a 40-pound pig to the Pika chapter at Louisiana State University in payment of a bet on the football game between the two schools last fall.

Traditionally, the chapter at the winning school receives a tanned pigskin bearing the fraternity crest and the score of the game.

This year, however, the LSU chapter violated tradition by challenging Kentucky to the bet even though the Kentucky team was the underdog. (The underdog school usually extends the challenge.)

"Since they were so brazen," a Kentucky Pika said, "we decided to send them the whole hog."

FULL STUDY DORM

Applications for a special women's study dorm next fall were closed out after three and a half hours as the maximum capacity of 225 residents was filled in that time.

The building is air-conditioned and will be committed to conditions totally conducive to study. Halls will be carperted and it has been requested that telephones be enclosed in sound-proof booths at the ends of the halls.

Residents must agree to not have radios or record-players in their rooms, keep quiet hours from 1:30-4 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to noon the next day, and agree to participate in maintaining conditions which will provide quiet study conditions for students.

CALIFORNIA TRIMESTER

The study body at the University of California is being polled to get student opinion on the addition of a third school term that would be held in the summer, and also to provide the administration with a means of judging the attendance at such a session.

The third term is being considered so as to permit students to make accelerated progress toward a degree. By attending the University the year round, a student could then graduate in three years.

On the trimester plan, fees would be comparable with those of the fall and spring terms, and housing and other services would be run in the same manner.

COED'S DINNER DRESS

The women's student Assembly at the University of Cornell last week defeated a proposal that would have allowed women students to wear slacks and shorts to breakfast and lunch in dormitory dining halls.

A poll of the student body prior to the vote showed sorority women ovrewhelmingly opposed to the change, while dormitory women were more evenly divided on the question.

A Touch Of Italy...

By BILL McALLISTER

"I brought a mess of junk to Chapel Hill and hope to make it into one of the finest architeitural structures in the area."

That's the dream of portrait artist Gerrad Tempest who is building a "cultural center" patterned after an Italian villa from the remains of three old victorian mansions he bought in Durham.

Work on the unique center, being built on a hillside on East Franklin Street near the Whitehall Antique Shop, began over a year ago and should be completed by the end of August, according to Tempest.

"We've still got a long way to go yet," smiled the short Italian native as he looked out on a yard crowded with the remnants of the old houses.

The hillside was covered with tile from a Turkish smoking room. A bathub had been turned into a plaster-of-paris mixer. The entrance to the villa was guarded by a cement model of a Grecian urn.

Five Shops

"It's going to be called 'La Villa Tempesta,'" he shouted as workmen moved by him with a large wooden panel. "I hope to rent out several shops to about five different businesses."

"I want to have an art gallery, antique shop and perhaps a rare book shop along a garden as you enter," he continued.

"In the main building I'm planning for an inside garden adjoined by a coffee shop and maybe a wine shop. Possibly we can arrange to set up a small wine press to enhance the Italian atmosphere."

Tempest, who left Italy when he was twelve years old, will also have a private residence in the main part of the "center," which will include a gallery for his own paintings.

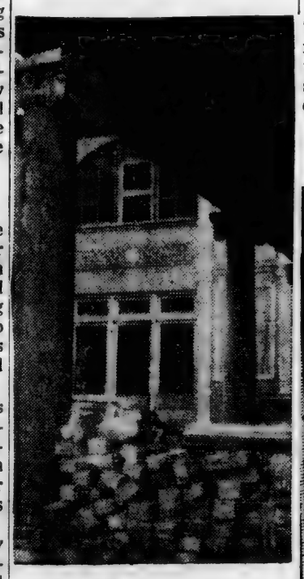
Several Styles

He says he has planned no dominant architecture for the interior. "I've included several styles in this part. The lower level starts with an older style and the style moves ahead in time to a contemporary ceiling."

The idea for the project came when Tempest examined the old homes in Durham which were going to be sold. "Then I decided to make an Italian villa and I just started by drawing some sketches."

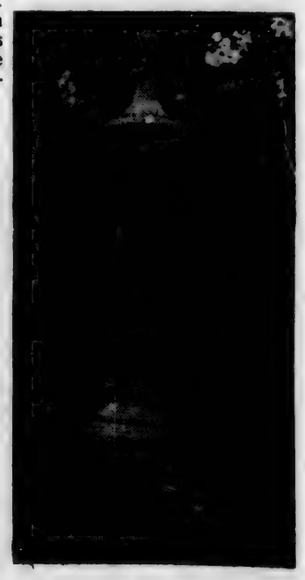
"I've had to supervise and finance the job myself," he went on. "The banks aren't too much interested in art, you know."

He stepped back and glanced over the building. "An Italian villa. At least that's what the plans call for, but my wife thinks we may just have another garage."



CLASSIC TOUCHES abound in the artist-turned-architect's concept of an Italian-style villa. Above are columns flanked by stacks of brick Tempest is using to construct the villa.

STAINED GLASS WINDOWS, Roman arches and large, open, skylighted areas characterize the interior of the villa, which the builder says is a mixture of architectures—mostly from the period around 1550.



GRECIAN URNS — Some 40 decorative urns like the one shown above will be placed the grounds of artist Tempest's villa. (Photos by Wayne King.)

'Free World'

When the Senate Foreign Relations Committee recommended Friday that aid to India be cut by 25 per cent, it adopted the Two Worlds theory long advocated by some U. S. conservatives . . . One world good, the other bad; one world free, the other slave, and nothing in between. "You're either for us or against us."

Sen. Symington of Missouri, sponsor of the aid-cut recommendation, had earlier tried to convince the Committee to strike out all aid for India. Sen. Sparkman of Alabama opposed both recommendations and has said he will fight the move on the Senate floor.

* * *

The aid cut was thought necessary because of India's "failure to line up with the free world," according to the Committee.

"Free World," the man said . . .

India is a democracy. A democracy of over 400 million people. A democracy of over 400 million people in the midst of strife-ridden Southeast Asia and bordering totalitarian Red China.

India holds elections. Free elections. Free elections in which all political groups, conservatives and liberals, democrats and Communists, are permitted to exist.

India is led by Jawaharlal Nehru, often valuable in settling international disagreements and a first-rate national leader.

* * *

. . . This amounts to an amazing ethnocentrism on the part of the Foreign Relations Committee. It believes itself capable of dilineating the Free World from the non-free. Worse, it has decided that only nations which blindly accept the leadership of the United States in all foreign affairs are worthy of the title "free."

Therefore, Portugal is free. Nicuaraugra, Costa Rica, Guatemala and the rest of Central America is free. South Korea and Formosa are free.

But India is not free.

. . . Reasonable?

Ridiculous.

* * *

If America is to continue to lead the "Free World" . . . if there is to be a Free World, the U. S. must not alienate fellow democrats, fellow free-men, men who are on the side of freedom more than they are on the side of Communism or capitalism, the East or the West.

Congress must soon decide the basis on which it is to continue to give foreign aid. Shall it reward subservience in foreign relations and sterile stability in internal affairs? Or shall democracy and freedom be the judging factors. What do the American people want to encourage—subservience or freedom?

At the moment subservience is in the lead. (jc)

Talk

On page one of today's Tar Heel there is a news analysis of an absurd situation; the selection of an editor for next year's Yackety Yack.

Since the Publications Board elected Louis Legum, and the subsequent challenge by John Randall of the selection, there has been a great deal of talk about the validity of the Pub Board's action, a great deal of talk about a possible ruling of the Constitutional Council, a great deal of talk about possible new candidates for the position, and just a little talk about the work that must be done between the selection of the editor this spring and the end of the semester.

There seems to be a lack of willingness, or at least there is a pronounced hesitancy, to act. There is just a great desire to talk.

But there are serious problems that get worse each day, as the talk continues. If there is to be a yearbook next year, there are committees that must be formed, there is a staff to be appointed, there are assignments that must be carried out over the summer; in short, there are decisions that must be made, and made promptly.

Right at the moment, no one other than Louis Legum has expressed any concern for publication of the Yack. Everyone is just talking about possible developments in the "selection" incident. And at the rate of positive action now in evidence, there will be no appointment within the remaining few weeks of this semester. Although there certainly will be a great deal of talk about it.

* * *

No one is questioning whether Legum is the best man for the job. Mr. Randall is just questioning whether or not Legum has been legally given the job.

It is fine that someone on campus cares whether or not the position is appointed legally. But now it would be nice to find someone on campus that cares enough to be sure that the editor is appointed in time to even put out a Yack.

Mr. Randall has stated that the publicity was not sufficient to let everyone know that the editor was to be appointed. Legum knew; he came before the Board with pages of proposals, with plans that need to be put into effect right away, if there is to be a Yack next year.

It would seem that anyone familiar with the Yack, as those rumored to be interested in the editor's position are said to be, would have known that in the spring of each year the position is secured, and that anyone on second floor of GM could have given them information on the appointment.

At any rate, Legum knew, and he would like to serve as the next editor. Would someone stop talking long enough to give him a fair shake. (cw)

Candidate On The Constitution

(Note: the writer of the following letter is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, Sixth District, which includes Chapel Hill.)

To the Editors,
The Daily Tar Heel:

The Constitution is the rule book of freedom. Even children cannot play baseball without knowing the rules. The Constitution tells us what we must not do if we are to preserve freedom.

One of the fallacies of the Kennedy Administration is the equal division of weath, that is for the other fellow. The Kennedy family makes little if any attempt to take care of the poor out of the huge millions which constitute their own personal estate. We must remember that power does not make men just, and we fear that those now in power have little concept of what made America great.

When Big Government takes care of you, it is using money that has been taken from some one else. Our constitution gives us the right to fail as well as the right to succeed. Those who succeed have an obligation to those who fail, but enforced giving through high federal taxes is not the just way to fulfill this obligation. It should be met through Christian giving through our churches and to private organizations.

These are some of the motivations that prompted us to stand for public office as Member of Congress for the Sixth District including Guilford, Alamance, Orange and Durham Counties. The counties are the basis for self government in North Carolina, just as the states are both foundation and guardian of the rights of the people. Our present Representative has voted 73 per cent of the time for Big Government, for more spending, against sound money, and against States' Rights. The voters have a very clear choice for the first time in many years in that we are utterly opposed to 73 per cent of the Kornegay voting record. We firmly believe that a Congressman should represent his poeple, not a national political party nor Big Brother Government.

On May 26 the voters will have an opportunity to express themselves. If they do not turn out in large numbers, they will find ever increasing taxation and more government controls parading under the guise of Urban Renewal, city planning, and other devices to take even the operation of our towns and cities and counties from the citizens. No matter how many criticisms may be made of a mayor or of a city council duly elected, they are far better than having outside dictators move in under the pretense of caring for the people. Local self government is our surest bulwark against these tyrants and dictators. Urban Renewal is only a Trojan Horse which has been sneaked into our gates at night as a gift. Let us beware such gifts which have been bought with our own money.

YAF Not For Whitener

To the Editors:

Mr. Wuamett's points in his recent article on YAF and Congressional candidate A. G. Whitener are well taken, and I appreciate his concern for a rational, intelligent YAF on this campus. But there are two points raised in his article that need clarification.

1) YAF does not endorse Mr. Whitener as Mr. Wuamett implied in his article. YAF has not endorsed anyone for Congress. Our motives for inviting him to speak to us were strictly those of curiosity and interest in hearing what Mr. Whitener has to say.

2) Mr. Whitener's platform with which Mr. Wuamett takes offense was not available to those attending the meeting until after Mr. Whitener had spoken. Consequently, there was no opportunity for anyone to question Mr. Whitener on such matters as the Peace Corps and the Alliance for Progress.

* * *

The Young Americans for Freedom is an organization interested in promoting an understanding of conservative philosophy and conservative ideals, and in no way endorses or associates itself with fanatics of any sort. But we would not be so quick or so smug as to descredit Mr. Whitener as a "reactionary" as Mr. Wuamett has done.

Mistreatment Of Employees

To the Editor,

This letter concerns a small minority group at UNC and since minority groups are recognized here, I am sure this letter will never be printed. The students who work at Lenoir Hall as busboys are mostly boys who are unable to attend college without part-time employment. Being in this position, they are easily taken advantage of by the management of Lenoir Hall.

For example, the lunch crew of busboys at the beginning of the semester numbered thirty one. Now the crew consists of six boys who are forced to work three times as hard for the same amount of pay. These twenty five busboys quit because of low wages and hard work. Instead of hiring more boys as a sensible man would do, Mr. Prillaman insists upon sending one or two colored workers from the kitchen, who do practically nothing in the way of help out on the floor to assist the busboys.

In addition to the increased work piled upon the lunch crew, Mr. Prillaman now insists that the busboys remove the silver from all the trays before placing them on the conveyor belt. This process is fifty per cent slower than the old method of sending the silver down on the tray. The busboys would rather work with one arm tied behind them than follow this process.

Last but not least is the policy followed by the management of Lenoir Hall in connection with the Alumni Banquet. The busboys are asked to come back to the campus about a week after exams to work for three days at the graduation banquests at seventy-five cents an hour. It matters little to the management if the students lose their summer jobs on this account. These are the students who need summer employment the most and many of them lose up to forty dollars during this banquet period and some lose their summer jobs. On this account, many busboys fail to show up at the banquets. When they fail to work this required period, their names are sent to the student aid office where they are blacklisted and will not be hired by any campus establishment.

This article is co-authored, but only one real name is signed, because one author is employed by Lenoir Hall as a busboy and would be fired as soon as his name appeared in print. This article should be of interest to all students in pointing out the dictatorial and unfair practices used by many of our campus employers. So the next time you brave students who eat at Lenoir Hall need a clean table at lunch, you can thank George W. Prillaman for the huge supply (6) of labor that will assist you in finding a place to sit while you consume your nourishing (?) meal.

Baez Protest Had No Sting

Joan Baez, in those who talked to her and saw her closely, touched deep and unfamiliar chords of feeling.

Her tranquility, her beauty of character and person, was as fresh and natural as a mountain spring, and sprang from sources just as deep.

Even her "protest" was so gentle it had no sting and converted what could have been political malice into simple "love of humanity that all could accept.

Her message was not really for the bearded set, in whose vague minds she is the uncomfortable symbol of something, because they did not understand her and really misused her kindness.

Phoniness passed over her without a trace, from whatever source it came. She accepted everyone who approached her — professor, beatnik, newspaper reporter, fraternity man, pseudo-intellectual, and just plain admirer without any prior commitment to anything about him except his humanity, and remained herself.

What she really did was to provide a contact with a past that is more basic and real than the present. It was that which touched everyone who really heard her.

There is something about her that is like life itself, deeply mysterious yet fundamental.

To have met her is to know something that you did not know before.

Brown Objects To Profanity

To the Editors:

On Thursday a letter was quoted which contained a word that has been condemned by all respectable societies since Adam. This is the first time to my limited knowledge that such a word has been quoted in the Daily Tar Heel and I would venture to bet that it is the first time in many years. Sure there is freedom of the press, but like freedom of speech it has its limitations and the college newspaper is not the place for such eccentric freedom. There are only ten commandments that have been set down for man to follow through life and one of these says that the Lord's name shall not be used in vain as it was in the letter. The DTH is not the place for such use. What will the hundreds of people who read the Tar Heel and are not students going to evaluate from this? What about the parents? I along with many others condemn this action as unethical, sacriligious, and by all means out of place.

Kennedy's Steel Action

To the Editors,

When President Kennedy challenged the $6 price-increase of steel he caught the conscience" of industry, labor and consumers, according to Assistant Professor of Economics Dr. D. Brown.

The unemployment specialist said that Kennedy provided U. S. Steel with a stage for the play, "I Am Going to Stop Inflation." And he did.

"Kennedy's violation of the spirit of the law, when he prevented in a public appeal last month a steel price-increase, was part of his responsibility to maintain economic stability and growth."

The professor doesn't believe that government has the right to set prices, but he agrees that the steel price-increase was inflationary and in violation of an implicit agreement among government, labor and industry.

He said that the steel companies have backed away from their price decisions, but that they don't agree in the President's right to set prices in defiance of the "letter of the law" which protects the market-price system of American enterprise.

He said that the President's action in calling for executive price-reduction measures will reduce the inflationary potential in the future.

"Public opinion is going to be more sensitive to the problem of inflation and will be more willing to oppose any inflationary pressure as a consequence of the President's decision," the professor said.

Review Of Last Concert

It was indeed gratifying to see Hill Hall filled nearly to capacity for the concert by the University Symphony Orchestra last Tuesday evening, especially when one can recall other musical performances there which have been attended by only a handful of people. Perhaps some came only to hear Mrs. Enid Katahn noted pianist, who was soloist for the performance of Liszt's "Concerto No. 1," for Piano and Orchestra. These were certainly well rewarded with an outstanding performance by a truly outstanding performance by a truly outstanding artist. Yet, it is hoped that many others came with a sense of pride, to hear good music performed by the orchestra that is the "university's own."

Composed of students, faculty members and residents of the community, the University Symphony is an important part of the cultural life of this area. For many years, it has been dedicated to presenting to the people the best in musical literature.

Although many have commented on the fine playing by Mrs. Katahn and the orchestra, the real hero of last Tuesday's concert was the man who has been the hero throughout the history of the orchestra, Dr. Earl Slocum, the conductor. Dr. Slocum, professor in the Department of Music, has worked tirelessly for and with the orchestra for many years. The University can well be proud of and grateful for the efforts of this devoted musician. The audience rewarded him with generous applause, and he can relax a bit now, knowing that he has contributed to one of the highlights of Carolina's music program.

Girls Will Be Girls...

To the Editors:

Certain girls on this campus have a remarkable pre-disposition toward boys. They can't help it; they were born that way.

There is nothing unusual about this. It happens every day—doctors tell us every nine seconds, barring unforeseen Christine Jorgensons.

In fact, if this were not true many (nay, most) of us would not be hopping around today. It is one of those phenomena in the world for which we are all thankful. Many like Kinsey himself, have conducted embarrassing surveys on it.

One can only conclude that, for better or worse, the best solution is to compromise the whole thing. After all, girls will be girls; they were born that way.

Wellman On B-52 Missiles

Mr. Gerald Good — The Skybolt missiles carried by the B-52 are theoretically designed to hit ground targets, they can also be turned against aircraft if necessary. Admittedly, this is somewhat like shooting a deer with a cannon, but it can be done.

As a second point: I said that the B-52 was headed for obsolescence. I did not say it was obsolete.

Reflections

In his First Inaugural Address, Thomas Jefferson gave this description of a good government:

"A wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned."

Presbyterians Begin $ Drive

By WALT SPEARMAN

Forty students in the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church will stage a campaign this week to see the 1,257 Presbyterian students registered in the University to secure pledges for the Sanctuary Completion Program now being held for the local church.

Frank Mansfield, student campaign chairman, and Wendell Manuel, president of the Westminster Fellowship, will head the student drive. Volunteer student workers will meet at the church tonight (Tuesday) at 6 o'clock to begin their campaign. In the last two campaigns to raise funds to build the Student Center University students pledged $16,000. Dr. Dan Martin, chairman of the Campus Christian Life Committee, said that with the increased student enrollment at present, the student workers hoped to secure increased pledges.

Officers and members of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church under the general chairmanship of Professor Joel Carter of the Music Department, are attempting to raise $150,000 toward the $222,600 needed to complete the new sanctuary, which is now under construction to replace the old church building destroyed by fire in 1958.

More than 250 members of the church are working on the various campaign committees. Those working on the Student Participation Committee include Bernard Boyd, James R. Caldwell, Jim Hickey, Julian Mason, Dr. Dan Martin, Arnold Perry, Malcolm Seawell, George Taylor and Earl Wynn.

Rev. Vance Barron, pastor of the church, expects the new sanctuary to be completed in time for use this fall. At the present time, students, faculty members and townspeople are using the Fellowship Hall of the Education Building as a temporary sanctuary. With the completion of the new building and an expected increase in number of Presbyterian students in the University, the church is already planning an expanded student program for the fall.

By fall the church officers expect to increase the paid staff to include a full-time director of Christian Education, a church dietitian and housekeeper and two ministers to students in addition to the pastor.

Honor Awards Presented Cadets

Chancellor William B. Aycock presented awards of achievement to outstanding Naval midshipmen and Air Force cadets at the annual Awards Day of the UNC Naval and Air Force ROTC units held at Fetzer Field Thursday.

Before the presentation, Chancellor Aycock inspected the honor guards of the drill teams from each unit. Many parents of the award-winning candidates and the public attended the ceremony.

Hoehn, Harrison Win Doubles

George Sokol Is ACC Champ

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

SPECIAL TO THE DAILY TAR HEEL—George Sokol climaxed his first varsity season as a North Carolina tennis performer in fine style yesterday afternoon by winning the singles division of the ACC Championships Tennis Tournament.

Sokol, a blond sophomore out of Bryn Mawr, Pa., who was the top-seeded individual when this three-day net festival began on Thursday, easily disposed of Clemson's Bobby Burns in the final match yesterday, 6-1, 6-4.

The Czechoslovakian-born new champion had reached the finale by defeating his Tar Heel teammate, Keith Stoneman, in the semi-final round by 6-4, 6-4 while Clemson's Burns had eliminated Dave Dickenson of Virginia, 6-4, 6-3 in their half of the semi-final draw.

Sokol, who beat Burns in three seats earlier this season, was too much for the Clemson star as he wore Burns down with the invulnerable, steady ground game that so conspicuously marks the champion's game.

Sokol's victory was hardly a surprise but the doubles' winners certainly were. Ted Hoehn and John "Bitsy" Harrison came into this tournament in the shadow of UNC's number one team of Stoneman and Charlie Shaffer. But yesterday it was all Hoehn and Harrison.

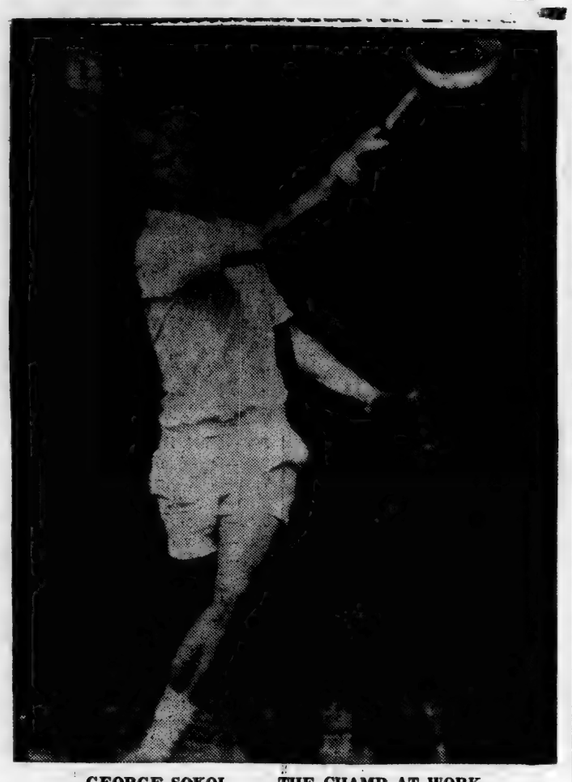
The two sophomores started out the day with the unenviable task of having to play three matches to win the championship. However, Ted and Bitsy were not fazed and came on to do jnust that.

In a quarter-final match the UNC tandem knocked off Clemson's top-seeded duo of Burns and Stewart, 6-3, 6-2. The semi-finals saw Stoneman (a defending doubles champion) and Shaffer facing Virginia's Dickenson and Bruce Farrell in a battle of seeded teams while Hoehn and Harrison went in against Al Citrenbaum and Gene Gerber of Maryland.

Dickenson and Farrell toppled Carolina's Stoneman-Shaffer pair, 7-5, 6-2 while Hoehn and Harrison were pulling off their second upset of the day—an easy 6-2, 6-4 verdict over the Terrapin aces.

The final match of the afternoon proved to be the best as Hoehn and Harrison brought back a second championship to Chapel Hill, 1-6, 6-2, 7-5.

The Kenfield trophy, which the Tar Heels clinched yesterday, went to UNC with 27 team points. Clemson was second with 17.



GEORGE SOKOL . . . THE CHAMP AT WORK

Murals Advance To Finish Date In Five Sports

By JOHN MONTAGUE

Intramurals advanced rapidly last week toward the May 21 closing date, with action in five sports. Point-system battles in softball, tennis and horseshoes featured the slate which also saw competition in two all-campus tournaments, water polo and golf.

In softball, Delta Sig and Kappa Sig advanced toward a Monday meeting in the Frat Blue finals, by knocking off ATO and Kappa Sig respectively in the semis. Delta Sig's brother team, the red-hot Rogues, downed Chi Phi in the semi-finals, and will go against the Phi Delts, conquerors of DU, in the Frat White finals Monday. The Rogues, it should be noted, also are in the running for the horseshoes and tennis championships, with semi-finalists in both tourneys.

Joyner, Stacy and Avery are in the dorm semi-finals as a result of Friday afternoon victories. On the same afternoon, Mangum took a 14-13 first-round triumph over Navy, Jerry Odom's disputed two-run homer in the last inning pulling the game out of the fire. This game may face judgment by the Rules and Regulations Committee. As it stands now, Mangum will take on Alexander Monday in the quarter-finals, the winner going against Joyner in the semis.

Dudley Pace hurled his second straight shut-out of the play-offs, a one-hit gem over Aycock Friday, as Stacy romped, 7-0. This puts Stacy against Avery, 11-3 winners over AFROTC, in Monday's other semi-finals clash.

In the graduate divison, two semi-final battles are on tap for tomorrow afternoon, Law White taking on the Peacocks while Med I battles the Law School. The finals here are set for Tuesday, as is the dorm finale. The All-Campus Series gets under way then too, the two frat champions tangling, with the dorm-grad battle and the championship set for Wednesday.

Law School Wins Grad Horseshoes

The Law School captured the horseshoes championship in the graduate division, outpitching the Peacocks in the finals. Members of the winning team are: Bill Rand, Don Lassiter, Neil Brumley, Lloyd Horton, Paul Whitfield and Aram Chorebanian.

Duke Takes ACC Golf Crown; Abernathy, Folke Deadlock

By ETADIN MOLADNU

WINSTON-SALEM—Duke University successfully defended its team title here Saturday afternoon as the Blue Devils coasted to the ACC Golf Championship with a four-man total of 587.

Coach Dumpy Hagler's linksmen had three of the top six finishers as well as the meet's individual co-champion while moving to their seven-stroke margin over second-place North Carolina.

Sophomore John Abernathy, somewhat overshadowed all season by teammates George Smith and Dick Dion, brought a slice of the medal award back to Durham as he mastered the Old Town Country Club course for an even-par 71.

Ken Folke, the pre-meet favorite from Wake Forest, also shot a 71 yesterday to deadlock Abernathy for the title. Folke and Abernathy, both having come in with 73's on Friday, played together yesterday and as the two leaders teed off on 18, the Deacon star led Abernathy by a stroke. But on the final hole, Abernathy sunk a 25-foot birdie put while Folke had to settle for a par, thus creating the tie.

South Carolina's Chuck Simons was all alone in second place with a 72-73—145 while three men deadlocked for third spot in the race for individual honors.

Abe Andes, the UNC sophomore from Mami Shores, Fla., who shot a first-round 72, came in with a 73-73-146 while Duke's number Duke golfers at the 146 total.

Jack Faalfield had an identical 72-73—136 while Duke's number one man all season, George Smith, tacked a superb one-under 70 onto Maryland sophomore Pete Rivera, who led the opening-day action with a 71, faltered badly Saturday and could only manage a 79 as he finished way down in the standings with a 150.

Carolina Coach Ed Kenney had hoped for a little better performance than the 594 second-place total of his Tar Heels. Included in this score was the disappointing 76-74—150 of UNC All-American Peter Green.

Other Tar Heel scores included Mike Dore 78-71—149, Harvie Hill 73-76—149, Jay Harris 74-79—153, and Sam Duckett 81-72—153.

Trailing Duke and UNC in the team scoring were Wake Forest—595, South Carolina—601, Maryland—605, and Virginia—618.

Willard, Others Lead UNC Frosh In 14-4 Record

By LOU ROSENTHAL

The Tar Babies ran their record to 14-4 this week behind the strong hitting of Ken Willard, Frank Gallagher, Dick Prindle and Ron Barlow.

The freshmen started with a double win over Duke, Tuesday, and then beat State Wednesday and Oak Ridge Thursday before losing to State Friday, 9-5.

The wins over Duke were highlighted by a seven-run first-inning in the first game, and an inside-the-park homer by Catcher Ken Boykin in the same game. Walton Ward got the win to extend his record to 3-0.

The second contest was led by Barlow and Merle Kruer, who each had two singles. Jerry Davis (4-1) was the winning pitcher.

The Tar Babies won the first State game, 10-3, behind the eight-hit pitching of Bill Danneman (5-0). Gallagher had a single, a double, and a three-run homer, and Willard went 3-3, to pace the freshmen.

White In Shutuot

Joe White threw a five-hit shutout at the Cadets from Oak Ridge as he got fine support from Willard, Gallagher, and Prindle. It was White's first decision.

Friday, the Tar Babies lost to State, when the Wolflets jumped on starter Mel Sechrest for five runs in the first two innings. Ward came in to relieve Sechrest but was tagged for four runs in the fourth and Coach Bruce Crump sent in Davis. He pitched 5 2/3 innings of shutout ball, and allowed only two hits.

Prindle had three singles and Willard two as the Tar Babies attempted to come back. Bobby Reagan was the first Tar Baby to get on base as he walloped a three-bagger to lead off the third.

The Tar Babies played at Wilmington yesterday. Dannemann was the scheduled starter.

Dannemann Leading Hurler

He leads the mound staff with a 5-0 record and a 1.70 ERA. Davis is next in the earned-run department with a 1.83, and a 4-1 slate. Ward rounds out the "Big Three" with a 3-0 record and a 4.07 ERA.

By losing to State the Tar Babies have left themselves with only a slim chance of repeating as "Little Big-Four" champs. The freshmen have beaten Duke four times, and Wake three out of four. Only a split with State, 2-2, mars the record of 9-3 in any way.

State plays Wake next week, and if the two teams split the scheduled doubleheader, the Tar Babies will win the title. If State takes two, the Wolflets will win, or if Wake wins two, the UNC frosh would take the championship.

Maryland Romps In Track; UNC Places Clark, O'Bannon

By Marty Kruming

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Maryland did it again! For the eighth time in the nine year history of the ACC outdoor track championships the powerful Terrapins clinched the title by copping seven of the sixteen events on their way to amassing a total score of 77 1/2 points. North Carolina, which stayed even with the champions going into yesterday's competition, scored 48 points to 38 fo rthird placed Duke.

Blue Devil discus and shot put specialist Dick Gesswein was selected by the eight ACC track coaches as the recipient of the Robert A. Fetzer Award, symbolic of the most valuable performer in the two-day meet.

Top individual scoring honors went to Maryland's Don Strauffer, winner of the 220, 440, and anchor man on the victorious mile relay unit, with a total tally of 11 1/2 points.

Clemson speedster Jim Wynn and hurdle ace Charlie Bradshaw of host school South Carolina tied fo rsecond with 10 points each.

Records fell by the wayside yesterday afternoon as six were dethroned and one tied by Carolina high jumper Tommy Clark of Greensboro. Aside from Gesswein's record-shattering discus and shot put heaves on Friday, new marks were posted in the 440 yard relay, 880 yard run, 2 mile run, and pole vault.

Terrapin Dick Smith's 1:51.6 clocking in the 880 earned him the Hendrick Trophy while the Kent Brown emorial Trophy went to Clark fo rhis leap at 6'5 1/2" which tied the pre-existing record.

Ex-Marine Jerry Nourse of Duke shaved 5.9 seconds off the mark set by Carolina's Wayne Bishop as he circled the two-mile course in 9:14. The only other record established yesterday was in the 440 yard relay won by Clemson with a time of 44.3.

Maryland's John Belitza clipped off more than three inches as he vaulted to a new record of 14' 7 1/2" thus bettering his mark of 14' 4 1/2" set last year.

The Tar Heels captured firsts in the high jump and broad jump as John O'Bannon soared to a distance of 23' 6 1/2". Other Carolina outstanding performers included Heath Whittle, who placed fourth in the pole vault, Rhett Everett's second in the two mile, and Bob Hart's second in the 440.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Shortstop Tom Lanford delivered a bases-loaded single in the tenth inning yesterday to give the University of South Carolina a 10-9 victory over North Carolina. It was the second Gamecock win over the Tar Heels by a one-run margin the disappointing season tomorthis season. Carolina closes out row at Raleigh against North Carolina State.

Sanford Advisor Knocks Political Disinterest Here

Joel Fleischman, legal adviser to Gov. Sanford and a UNC graduate, told the freshman roundtable discussion group Sunday night that he was greatly concerned at the lack of any political turmoil on campus over major national issues.

Fleischman was the third guest speaker in the series of discussions on state and national affairs that the freshman class has sponsored. The class officers hope to continue the discussion series next year as a regular weekly part of the University program.

In speaking on state affairs, Fleischman stated that a major reapportionment of voting districts in North Carolina was not likely in the near future. The voting balance in this state, he said, is not uneven enough to present a major problem.

Rather than reapportionment, Fleischman believes education to be the most pressing problem of state government in North Carolina today. Due to the state administrative setup, the governor can exert only indirect influence over education policies.

To correct this problem, Fleischman urged the adoption of a short ballot for the state in which the superintendent of education and other administrative officials would be appointed by the governor, instead of the present system in which these officials are elected by popular statewide election.

Fleischman graduated from UNC Law School and has done graduate work in law at Yale.

TO SERVE UNTIL FALL ELECTIONS

Phil Smith Resigns As UP Chairman; Curtis Succeeds

Allen's Manager Will Organize Party System

Chairman of the University Party Phil Smith announced his resignation yesterday and said that Don Curtis has been appointed Party Chairman until elections next fall.

"The need for someone who will continue party policy through the summer prompted the appointment," Smith said. "It is senseless for me to set up an organization I won't be working with."

Curtis was campaign manager for Inman Allen in recent elections and is dorm manager of Old West.

Smith said that the reason an election will not be held for the post is that it is so late in the semester. In addition, only one other person showed mild interest in the position.

Curtis said yesterday that he plans to set up committees for freshman orientation, draw up election strategy for fall elections, and plan election of party officers in the fall.

Committee Appointments

Executive committee membership appointments were announced last night at Student Legislature in a communication from President Inman Allen's office. The appointments will be considered by legislature and voted on Thursday.

The appointments not listed below include the Elections Board, Budget Committee, Student Audit Board, Student Carolina Athletic Council, Carolina Forum, Secretariat, Honor System Commission, Dance Committee, Publications Board, International Students Board, Toronto Exchange Committee, Student Entertainment Board, and Library Committee. These will be listed in tomorrow's Tar Heel.

COMMUNCATIONS COMMITTEE: The purpose of this committee is to inform the campus and state of the activities of Student Government. Members are: Bob Spearman, chairman; Bill Graham, Mike Channin, David Raney, Mike Pittman, Owen Bishop, Louis Samsot, Steve Nanheine, Arthur Pearce, and Judy Gray.

ACADEMIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE: This committee studies courses and academic procedures. Results of investigation provide a basis for recommending improvements. Members are: Fred Wedler, chairman; Carl Rhodes, C. Michael Smith, Lucy Ann Wood, Wayne Flye, Jeff Bayer, Tony Smithson, Doug Fambrough, Richard King, James H. Barnhiill, Judy Johnson, Jim Wagner, and Peggy Stephenson.

CONSOLIDATED UNIVERSITY STUDENT COUNCIL: The council is composed of representatives from each of the three Consolidated University schools. They meet to discuss mutual problems and plan inter-campus activities. Members are: Gerald Thornton, chairmain; Cecil Collins, Johnsye Massenburg, Donna Baily, Richard G. Lewis, John L. Currie, and Bob Rearden.

CAMPUS COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION: The campus committee coordinates activities with the national association which has 400 member schools throughout the country. Last year, the Campus N.S.A. co-sponsored the "Operation Abolition" debate. Members are: Harry DeLung, chairman; Lynda Colvard, Allen Ashby, Ford Rowan, Anne Lupton, Bill Straughn, Charles Cooper, Rick Edwards, Jim Riley, Doc Fields, Alan Goldsmith, Mike Putzel, Mike Bissell, Mike Owens, David Hendrix, and Johtn Ulfelder.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S STAFF: The staff is responsible for investigating all reported violations of the campus and honor codes. They advise and protect the rights of defendants. It is their responsibility to present all cases to the Councils under direction of the Attorney General.

Members are: Buzzy Stubbs, Attorney General; Bill Hoyle, Mac Boxley, Bryan Wright, Charlie Brown, Tim Oliver, Julie Latane, Jean Yoder, Clay Moore, Carol Matthews, Sara McClure.

PUB BOARD MEETS

The Publications Board will meet Wednesday at 3 p.m. for the purpose of interviewing candidates for Yack editorship who have not already been interviewed.

Other selections to be made include editor and business manager for the summer school paper; editor and business manager for the Carolina Quarterly; business manager for the Yack; and business manager for the DTH.

New Publications Board officers will also be selected.

More Than 4,000 Will Pre-Register

By HUBERT HAWKINS

More than 4,000 students will preregister for the fall semester, Assistant Director Frank Giles of the Central Office of Records said yesterday.

Preregistration continues in the College of Arts and Sciences and certain upper schools through Wednesday. Students will sign up for courses in the summer and fall sessions at this time.

"Preregistration will help insure getting the courses you want," Giles said. "It saves time for the student and it saves time for us. Most students learn the value of pre-registration by the time they are juniors or seniors."

Machines are being introduced in Central Records to increase the accuracy and speed of registration. "They are not infallible," he explained, "but they make many fewer mistakes than people."

Opening a door to a room full of grey machines in the basement of Hanes Hall, he described how the tickets are punched in code. The cards are sorted according to classes and kept during the term. Then they are used to distribute individual grades at the end of the term.

The same machines print checks for UNC employees, as well as light and water bills for Chapel Hill citizens.

"Our registration process has been complimented by a number of colleges, and we think it works very well. The personnel is very good, and we are fortunate to have faculty advisers assisting this process."

Certain universities simply distribute class schedules and open classes. The students find their own preferred sections on a first-come, first-served basis. The instructors then collect class rolls and send the names to the records division. Registration and drop-add are unnecessary.

Asked if this process would not eliminate much red tape at UNC, Giles replied:

"I have heard of such processes. But it seems to me that drop-add might still be necessary. Some students might find their way into the wrong classes. Or there could be a dispute over who got to a given seat first in a popular class."

Registration will be on September 19-20 for those students who have not preregistered.

3 Soap Companies Operated By Students—With IBM Aid

Seven Carolina students are gathered around, talking animatedly in what appears to be a routine bull session. But the subject this time is detergents—how to make them, how to sell them, how to make profit for the stockholders.

Down the hallway, in another classroom, are seven more students in the UNC School of Business Administration. They comprise another company in the detergent business, and they are in competition with the first company.

In another part of Carroll Hall is assembled a third team, this one of eight members, also in the detergent business and competing against the other two companies for a share of the market and for profits in a free enterprise system.

They are running their own businesses in what is known as a management simulation in the U.N.C. School of Business. All 22 are undergraduate students in Business Administration and have been operating their simulated businesses since last September.

They hire laborers, build plants, purchase raw materials for soap, manufacture different kids of detergents, advertise them, merchandise them, set up warehouses for storage, borrow money, invest in government bonds, pay out dividends to stockholders, and do most of the other things that managers must do daily in the detergent industry.

They make decisions, and they make mistakes. When right decisions are made, or wrong decisions are discovered, a company loses or gains ground in the hot competition, the students huddle together and decide what is best to do the next time, how to change their policies or strategies in order to sell an optimum amount of soap and make the most profits.

Progress Checks

They are able to check their progress weekly by means of printed outputs from the Remington Rand Univac 1105, the giant electronic computer at Chapel Hill. The Univac constructs the industrial environment and generates the reactions to the weekly decisions. This complex management game was originally devised at Carnegie Tech; the model currently programmed for the Univac 1105 at Chapel Hill is a revised version of the original game. Students in business feed their decisions into the Univac every Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The computer "processes" the decisions made by the students and produces a new set of operating statements available to the firm on Monday.

The students know then how they have fared, wether they erred, or whether they bettered their competitors. What is more, facts and figures on which they make new decisions in a new week are clearly indicated.

Actually one week in school time means one month in the detergent market in the course which is designated "B.A. 199, Management Simulation." Once every three weeks (or three months in the detergent market), the students meet with a board of directors of three faculty members. The faculty directors don't tell the students how to run their business and they don't attempt to make any decisions for them; but they do put the students on the griddle with questions. Students are called upon to explain why they made the decision to buy more raw materials than they needed; what caused them to decide to build a new factory; why they have or have not paid out larger dividends to the stockholders, why they skimped (or plunged too much) in advertising. The directors call on the students to justify and explain their actions and to keep attention focused upon the need to develop long-range plans and provide for their execution. Thus the students obtain an evaluation of their operations of the firm.

In Earnest

It's not just a contest of "wheeling and dealing" and making decisions with the toss of a coin. The teams are in earnest. They stand to lose millions of dollars in a wrong decision. Success versus bankruptcy are stakes in the competition.

And when the scorers come to make up the grades at the end of May, attention will be given not only to who wins and loses, but how the game was played, why decisions were made as they were, and what knowledge of Business Administration and Economics was displayed by each student as he participated in the management of his detergent company.

Each team has a president and directors of marketing, production and finance. Each business quarter, they change poistions, another student taking over as president, etc. so that each may find out more about the different operations.

Prof. Richard I. Levin who teaches in the Industrial Management Department of the Business School is coordinator in charge, and nine faculty members are involved as members of the board of directors.

Dr. Levin explained that each company started off the business year last Stptember with the understanding that central headquarters was in the middle of the United States, equi-distance from all parts of the nation, and that the country was divided into four sections or regions for selling soap. The people of the United States, as consumers of soap, comprise the market. Each company has two soap products to begin with, and a third product may be added, if they

Miss Clark, from Tuscumbia, Alabama, has been active in Student Government as a member of Legislature for three years. The past two years she served on the budget committee and was Clerk of Legislature in 1961. She is a 1962 inductee of the Valkyries and the Order of the Old Well, honor organizations at the University.

She has been a member of the Consolidated Student Council, the Toronto Exchange and the Canterbury Club. Last year she directed the Freshmen program of the Woman's Orientation Committee. Within her sorority, Alpha Delta Pi, she has been Activities Chairman and representative to the Carolina Sweethearts.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Leslie Clark, and has been enrolled at Carolina since her freshman year, entering as a Medical Technology major.

The award is given by the Beta Chi Chapter of Kappa Delta sorority in memory of Jane Craige Gray, wife of Gordon Gray who was University President from 1950-1955.

Study?

The University Housing Office has released notices to residents of men's dorms that they must be out of their rooms by June 1. Which means that they must leave on the 31 of May, that is, the last day of exams.

Certainly there are reasons for this evacuation date. There must be rooms prepared for parents attending Graduation exercises, and there must be rooms available for alumni returning for their class reunions. And the rooms must be prepared prior to their planned arrivals. However, the highly undesirable prospect of a boy's having to spend needed study time, frantically packing his belonings, ought to under all circumstances be avoided.

The temptation to let the books slide and procrastinate whole-heartedly is strong enough now, without having some authoritatively approved reason for doing something other than studying.

* * *

However, there are other indications that the "powers that be" are not overly concerned with opportunities for student study. We are thinking specifically, in this instance, of the elimination of he reading day. Granted, there must be some reason, known to those who make the decisions about student life, but we've yet to encounter a sudent who knew what it was.

* * *

Also worthy of consideration is the "ruling," that comes out in the form of a statement attached to the exam schedule, that "Quizzes are not to be given in this semester on or after Wednesday, May 16, 1962."

We have often wondered just what this actually means.

Does it mean, perchance, that if you happen to be in one of those classes that has a quiz scheduled on or after May 16, then you do not have to take the quiz?

Or does it mean that if you are a professor, you aren't supposed to give quizzes on or after May 16?

Or does it in actuality mean absolutely nothing? (cw)

Growing Pains

A number of leading British universities recently approved a plan "revolutionizing the procedure for entry to most universities in the United Kingdom." It is designed to meet the impact of the high post-World War II birthrate, due to hit colleges in 1964-5 and following years.

Under this system a candidate for admission to any of these colleges for the following fall, will apply on a common form not later than Dec. 31. He may list up to four universities, stating his order of preference. His application is then multi-faxed and sent along with his school reports to the university of his choice. It is up to the individual schools to interview the student and make their decisions.

* * *

Cambridge and Oxford, under this plan, have been required to complete their selection by the end of January. All other universities, if they have been named as the candidate's first or second choice, will notify him by March 25 whether he is accepted. Third- or fourth-ranked colleges have to notify students by May 25.

Students getting an unconditional offer from a first-choice institution will be required to accept or reject it at once. If he accepts, his other applications will be withdarwn immediately.

* * *

This system, to be used on a trial-basis this year in Britain, might be valuable in the United States.

It would eliminate uncertainty on the parts of students applying to major universities and would give universities a more accurate idea of how many students would be enrolled for the next year. Administrative time and money could be saved if a central office were set up to handle all applications.

This plan is one of many which American colleges should consider, to ease the growing pains of the next decade. (jc)

Whiskey

Only in Mississippi.

State legislators have refused to repeal Prohibition, but nevertheless continues to levy taxes on whiskey.

The State sales tax on wine and whiskey was raised from 8 to 9 per cent during the current legislative sessions. There is also a ten per cent black-market tax, on "the sale of any tangible property of which is prohibited by law."

A third tax proposal, now before the Legislature, provides for an assessment of $1 a case on whiskey and 50 cents on wine—and, to make the ridiculous more sublimely ridiculous, all revenue from this new tax will be used to establish treatmen centers for alcoholics. (jc)

Death Of UNC S. Government

A Student Government died the other day. Don't ask me why it died. It just died.

It had plenty of good, capable leaders, and they were concerned about the fate of the world, too. Oh, how they were concerned about the fate of the world- They weren't apathetic about Berlin, Laos, Viet Nam, Algeria, The Congo, nuclear fallout, or inflation like most of the student body was. They were really concerned, and they decided to do something about these world problems.

Various committees were set up to study each trouble spot in the world and every social problem in the U.S.A. And there were some really excellent ideas brought out by these committees that led to some really astounding conclusions such as nuclear fallout is bad, the O.A.S. is evil, the Berlin wall is a sign of tyranny, the Congo needs peace, integration is good and Jackie Kennedy is a good looking woman.

Naturally this was too far above the ignorant, apathetic herd of the student body. There were occasional crys from the herd, but no one paid much attention. The herd seem to want a better social life and better conditions to study under. But most of all they wanted to feel like they were an integral part of campus life, and that Student Government was concerned about their welfare above everything else.

But this Student Government found that it was not concerned about the welfare of the Student Body. How could it afford to be when it had the welfare of the entire world to consider? So when a student hung himself, Student Government could not even find time to ask why. (Thousands were being killed in Algeria. What's the life of one student compared to this.) When over 300 hundred students flunked out after the first semester and 200 more dropped out, Student Government did not even notice. Why should it? All it meant was that the University was rid of 500 apathetic students, and besides the Berlin situation was beginning to get hot again. There had to be a committee meeting at once to adopt a resolution warning the president to be careful about what he did in Berlin.

And so the heavy problems of the world fell upon the shoulders of this Student Government, and it struggled with them with all the insight and experience that college students are blessed with when dealing with world problems. But then someone noticed that it was almost time for Spring elections, and that Student Government would be forced to take a look at the student body for a while.

But when the leaders of Student Government took a look at the student body, they were immediately informed by both the Students and the administration that Student Government had died. It had died some time between the Berlin crisis and the Algerian peace.

Don't ask me why it died. It just died.

King: On Gans And Baker Articles

To the Editors:

A recent edition of the DTH contained articles by a liberal, Curtis Gans, and a conservative, Earl Baker, setting forth their respective ideologies. Although this debate was a refreshing relief from the YAF letters-to-the-editor which usually dominate the editorial page, it was a disappointment in that neither writer seemed to have any sort of realistic orientation to the world around him, neither writer seemed able to step off his treadmill of conservative platitudes or liberal pipedreams to offer us a tenable guide to action.

* * *

MR. BAKER, YRC President, opposes governmental intervention in the economy and the use of the machinery of the state to overcome social problems on the grounds that such reforms tend to undermine individual liberty: "Liberals SAY they favor liberty, yet turn to controls to meet problems . . . The essence of true conservatism is expressed in . . . opposition to statism." Baker SAYS conservatives are opposed to statism: but let's just for once look at the irrefragible facts of the case, the voting record of conservatives in Congress. The facts are that conservatives never oppose statism in areas of policy where it would protect and increase the profits of Big Business. Conservatives support our military budget of fifty billion dollars a year, the greatest single source of profits to the corporations. Conservatives support government subsidies to industry, subsidies which come from the worker's pocket by way of taxes (A clear case of robbing the poor to pay the rich!); and it's obvious that these subsidies, although they violate the conservative principle of "free enterprise," don't exactly harm profits. Perhaps the most obvious example of conservative statism is our federal highway system. Without this "socialistic" road network the distribution of goods so vital to profit making would be greatly hindered. While supporting these above measures, conservatives OPPOSE social security, federal aid to education, civil rights, urban housing projects, etc. —forms of "statism" which would not directly contribute to corporate profits, forms of "statism" which would merely increase the welfare of the common man. Thus we see that to the conservative politician, the political tool of the corporations, any form of federal action which increases corporate profits is non-statist and hence good; but any form of federal action which aids the people without aiding the corporations, especially any which in aiding the people endangers corporate profits, is statist, or even Stalinist, and hence bad. The corporations are perfectly willing to rob the taxes of the people in order to increase profits, but they will only incidentally allow their own taxes to be used for the benefit of the people.

This contradiction in Mr. Baker's thinking can be traced back to his semantically deceitful definition of liberty. The conservative's "liberty" is not the noble ideal that its "patriotic" use implies. In the name of "liberty" conservatives are blocking all efforts to halt the rapacious profiteering of the drug industry. At the same time, and also in the name of "liberty," conservatives are attempting to destroy the Bill of Rights! They have instituted the though-control McCarran Act, an anti-constitutional attempt to destroy those political groups in America who wish to put an end to profiteering, to the domination and exploitation of the American people by finance capital. Thus it is clear that what the conservative really means by "liberty" (based not on what he says he means but on the objective referents of the term) is freedom of the corporations to MAKE BIGGER AND BIGGER PROFITS—this and nothing more. Anything which abets this aim is good; anything which threatens this aim must be destroyed. PROFIT is the Almighty God of the conservative.

From the sociological point of view, Mr. Baker's ritualistic rantin about statism and liberty are a shrewd reflection of his class interests. From the rationalist point of view, they are sheer infantilism. The "liberty" of the conservatives, the "liberty" of the corporations, the "liberty" of the capitalists, is not the liberty of the people: we must look elsewhere for an expression of a truly democratic political philosophy. Does Mr. Gans offer it?

* * *

GANS' ARGUMENT seems to indicate that there is a Will to Progress inherent in liberalism: "They envision a world in which all men can live together in peace, freedom, possessing human dignity . . . in which greed and ambition have been replaced by love and creation." But a Will to Progress is no good without a Way, and the closest thing to a Way that Gans offers is ". . . someday through education better than we have now, through interaction, and through understanding there will come an end to the hate and bigotry that infest all parts of the world." If "education," "interaction" (whatever that means), and "understanding" were enough to make dreams come true, then the Christians would long since have ushered in their City of God! No, the liberal solution to the social dilemma is inadequate. At best, it is Utopianism, a fantasy of wish-fulfillment; at worst, it is naked hypocrisy. Considering the fact that twentieth century liberal parties have tended to ally themselves with fascists more often than with the broad mass of the people; considering the fact that Mr. Gans himself is more concerned with witchhunting campus Marxists than with sincerely proselytizing his liberalism; it is safe to say that the blessings of liberalism are not meant for the people, that they are the proverbial carrot on the stick so far as the people are concerned. Even if an individual liberal happens to be sincere in his ideals; still, because of his class prejudices, he does not and cannot point to those social forces which are alone capable of putting the highest ideals of humanity into practice. I repeat: A Will to Progress is no good without a Way. And where the Way is no more practical than Mr. Gans' Way, there is strong reason to suspect that there is no SINCERE Will. "The obstacles (to jrogress)," says Mr. Gans, "are real, and the people willing to meet them are all too few." Few indeed! And the liberals don't exactly swell the ranks.

Even, however, if we take what Mr. Gans and Mr. Baker say at face value, it is clear that neither liberalism nor conservatism offers any hope whatsoever for the solving of our nation's domestic and foreign problems. Mr. Baker says that we should NOT attempt to solve our problems, because any practical solution would necessitate the loss of cherished freedoms. Mr. Gans says that we SHOULD solve our problems and paints a glowing picture of a problemless world, but cannot offer any plan of action. Such are the contradictions one runs into when one refuses to base political theory squarely on reality, when one repudiates the scientific approach to society and atempts to think solely in terms of manmade ideals, "existential absolutes." Political theory must arise from FACTS rather than from ideals. Ideals are the product of facts, the product of the material conditions of society at a given time. As society changes, its ideals will change. Anyone who attempts to hold absolute ideals (such as Mr. Baker's ideal of unrestricted freedom for capitalists to exploit workers) will soon find that history has left him far behind, that his ideals have become estranged from material reality. When ideals become estranged from reality, they also become estranged from Man. As Man is the only thing in this universe worth bothering about, then ideals estranged from Man are no ideals at all.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

OTELIA Speaks Out

To the Editors,

We all agreed as we drove up behind Hill Hall to hear the UNC Symphony orchestra that we wouldn't live anywhere else in the world, especially this time of year, except Chapel Hill. And I will have to take back what I said about local concerts often not being as worthwhile as the FM concerts over radio.

The Band concert on the lawn and the WC and UNC Glee Club recital on Parent's Day I enjoyed very much. It was a perfect day for a lawn concert.

I thought the University Symphony was equally as good as the North Carolina Symphony orchestra of last week. Hats off to Mr. Slocum and his musicians. Both the N. C. and the UNC orchestra happened to play my favorite—Enesco's Roumanian Rhapsody, No. 1 op 11, which brought down the house. Enid Katahan was deserving of special mention. She was gracious, lovely to look at, and her playing was superb.

* * *

The next event to look forward to with more than ordinary zest is the Alumni Luncheon on June fourth at Lenoir Hall. Mr. Prillaman is taking off for the National Convention of College Restaurant Managers in Chicago, where he will get some fancy ideas for the luncheon, and incidentally, will address the Association of School Accountants. You better get your tickets for the luncheon early, because they might run out.

GOP Chances In States

By RAYMOND LAHR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The GOP dream of winning control of the national House of Representatives next November, but it is almost equally concerned about retiring a bevy of Democratic governors.

Republican hopes are riding on men like former Vice President Richard M. Nixon in California, Rep. William W. Scranton in Pennsylvania, state auditor, James A. Rhodes in Ohio, former Secretary of Interior Fred Seaton in Nebraska and George Romney, the compact carbuilder, in Michigan.

In their realistic moments, Republicans admit they have only faint hopes of gaining the 44 seats needed to take over control of the House next year. But they are convinced that there are many vulnerable Democrats in the new preponderantly Democratic lineup of governors.

Although governors have faded somewhat as contenders for the White House, their offices are still the seats of great political power, particularly in the big states.

GOP Has 16 Governors

The GOP now holds only 16 of 50 governorships. In the pivotal states, those which will cast more than 15 electorial votes in the 1964 presidential election, they now hold only the New York base of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Rockefeller himself must win reelection and win big next Nov. 6 to stay in contention for the 1964 presidential nomination. In their floundering search for a candidate, New York Democrats offer their national party little hope that Rockefeller will be eliminated this year.

In the other big states—New Jersey, Pennyslvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Texas and California—Democrats now hold the governorship. The GOP lost its chance in New Jersey last year when Gov. Richard J. Hughes stopped former Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell.

The Illinois governorship is not at stake this year, and Texas is still not a major Republican target comparable to Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and California.

Budgets Bother Democrats

The Democratic administrations in California, Ohio and Michigan are all beset by budget problems along with liabilities which accrue whenever blocs of voters are offended by decisions on issues like tax or highway improvements. In Pennsylvania, the big issue is unemployment.

Nixon, who lost to President Kennedy in 1960, must win in California to stay alive in national politics, although he already insists he will not contest for the 1964 presidential nomination.

Romney is expected to be matched against Gov. John B. Swainson in Michigan and Scranton against Richardson Dilworth, former mayor of Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania when the primaries are over.

Scranton and Romney victories in November would thrust two new figures into the GOP national leadership for clinical examination before the 1964 political conventions.

UNC Press Picks Book On Merit

thors from this region and those from elsewhere. A manuscript is considered strictly on its merits regardless of the race, color, creed, sex, origin, previous occupation, present opinions of the author. Nor is any attention paid to whether a work has been turned down by other publishers. The manuscripts of some books that have sold 10,000 or more copies were almost worn-out by previous consideration before they were finally published here.

Quality Judgment Difficult

The advice of scholars is the primary method of determining the quality of manuscripts, but as a past Press director said, "getting opinions on manuscripts is just as difficult as it is important. In dealing with this problem one must remember that it is never a pleasant thing for a reader to give an adverse opinion on a colleague's work, whether that colleague is on the same or another campus. Then too, academic people in the same discipline are frequently blinded by the same prejudices and are therefore literally incapable of criticizing each other's work."

There is no safe procedure of selecting manuscripts such as requiring approval from a certain number of readers, so the board of governors of the Press have set up certain precautions in judging manuscripts. One is the requirement that local scholars' books must be recommended by outside scholars.

The most important tool, however, is good judgment. The Press staff therefore has a large part in determining what is published; otherwise it could not be responsible for the fate of the program.

Finances

Finances also require good judgment and must also know something of the Press' financial history and makeup to understand the operation of the Press itself. In the first year's budget, Dr. Wilson, then director of the Press, broke down the $3750 budget into $2000 for Monograph series, $500 for advertising, $250 for a revolving fund to finance publications of books that would pay for themselves eventually, $500 for office expense and $500 for the director.

For five years until 1927 the Press struggled for existence. In 1927 they received a grant of $50,000 which was to be given annually for three years. From 1930 to '35 appropriations from the University were cut to zero. The Rockefeller Memorial Fund grant expired in 1930, but for two more years the Press received financial assistance from the Rockefeller Foundation.

After that, it had only its receipts from the sale of books on which to operate. This income from published books for the next three years averaged only $12,000 a year and there was no unpledged money available for any purpose. There were no manuscripts in hand that could be expected to pay for themselves. Staff members were discharged and salaries were cut. Only because printers were anxious to work and were willing to extend credit on almost any terms was the Press able to continue to operate.

New Aid

Not until ten years later was substantial outside aid secured. In 1946 the Press obtained grants from The Rosenwald Fund and the Carnegie Corporation. In this new period of increased funds the Press began to reap the rewards of experience gained during the lean years.

At the moment, the Press budget is several million dollars and not only has its budget increased, but also its self-sufficiency. In the last few years, income from publications has been about 80 per cent of the total budget. The figure is still increasing, and illustrates that there is a market for scholarly publications, and that the U.N.C. Press has been and is filling a need.

Reasons For Press

Why should there be a university press in Chapel Hill? Why attempt to publish learned journals and books here? Why not leave the job to well-established and well-financed centers of publishing? Why stretch this area's already limited resources?

W. T. Couch, former director of the Press, both posed these questions and attempted to answer them. These are his answers.

"Original thinking, writing, and publishing are as necessary to the development of a society as air, water, and food are to the life of the individual. Whenever a people chooses the easy way and allows all of the important leadership to be developed and exercised elsewhere, the consequences to that people are poverty and subservience."

In order to prevent stagnation of knowledge, he stated, and to stimulate invention, creation and discovery, you must have a press. "Money is not the limiting factor in the South. The limiting factors are lack of public interest and a woeful ignorance among educators of what education ought to be. Scholarly publishing and higher learning are interdependent. It is impossible to have one without the other.

"In order for people to work at thinking and writing they must know that if the work they are doing is worth publishing, it will be published. A press must be accessible."

These are some of the questions, answers, and problems of the UNC Press. But whatever its weaknesses may be, or whatever its successes have been, the Carolina Press has arrived. "It has started a task that somehow has to be done if the South is to realize its possibilities."

Faculty Members Presented Awards

Two annual awards were announced here Saturday at the annual Student-Faculty Day of the University School of Medicine.

The Professor Award went to Dr. Colin G. Thomas, professor of surgery. This award is voted by the graduating class each year to "that faculty member who by his willingness, understanding and ability has contributed most to our medical education."

The Henry C. Fordham Award, named for the late Dr. Fordham of Greensboro, was presented to Dr. Hilliard F. Seigler of Asheville, assistant resident in surgery. It is presented annually by the graduating class to "a member of the house staff in recognition of his qualities of patience, humility and devotion to medicine as were possessed by the late Dr. Fordham, resident in medicine, Memorial Hospital, 1957-58."

wish, but not more than three.

Wide Discretion

The three competing firms have wide-ranging discretion in the kinds of action they may take. They are free to move prices up or down, to increase or decrease advertising expenditures, purchase market research information, engage in various distribution tactics or develop new products. They must be quick to detect the effects of specific decisions. A price change will have repercussions upon sales, inventories, and stocks in various regional warehouses. A run of bad decisions will depress the price of the firm's stock and impair its capacity to find outside financing. Maintenance expenditures must be kept in line or down time will rise, production fall and inventories decline to the point where the firm will be unable to meet orders placed with it.

Both students and faculty regard the complex management simulation as an extremely useful and sophisticated training method, and there is high enthusiasm in all quarters of the Business School.

Beats Case Method

"It is one step further than the case method," said one student. "I have enjoyed this course more than any other I have studied at Carolina. But I want to assure you it isn't easy. It is tough. I have put in more time and hard work than any other course I have ever had. But it's worth it. For we know more about the actual working of a business, and it's the next best thing to being in business. If we can make some of our mistakes here, maybe we won't make quite so many when we graduate and go into business."

Editor's Note: This is the first installment of a 3-part series on Management Simulation, a course in the School of Business Administration at the University of North Carolina. Tomorrow a chapter on a board of directors' meeting and statements from students about their experiences in running a soap company.

Planetarium Easter Show Viewed By 20,002 Persons

The Morehead Planetarium's annual "Easter, the Awakening" program this year was seen by 20,002 persons, and Director Anthony F. Jenzano today attributed the near-record attendance to the "generous and consistent cooperation of the press, radio and television."

It was the first time in five years that the attendance exceeded 20,000 persons. The largest on record was 1949, the year the Planetarium opened, when almost 30,000 patrons viewed the story of the Resurrection and tribute to spring.

"Because of the inspirational nature of the Easter and Christmas programs," Jenzano said, "it has always been the policy of the Morehead Planetarium to accommodate as many school and religious groups as possible by presenting extra demonstrations when the scheduled ones become filled.

"During the past Easter season, numerous additional programs were opened on short notice, and the public was notified only through the communications media of this state. We accommodated thereby a near-record number of patrons, many of whom would not have been able to see the program without generous and consistent cooperation of the press, radio and television.

Winston Rolls In Dorm Murals

Winston, forerunners in the dorm division point race, has placed a team in the tennis finals as well as in horseshoes. The dorm net finals are scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, Winston's opponent being a formidable Navy Blue squad.

SAE already has captured a spot in the frat white finals and is advancing toward a similar position in the frat blue tourney. The white team will take on the winner of the Delta Sig Rogues-DKE Red semi-final clash in the finale on Wednesday. The blue unit meets Phi Delt in the semis on Monday, the winner to meet the victor of Tuesday's semi-final match between DKE and KA, in the championship match on Wednesday.

An all-Law finals is a possibility in the grad net tourney. Law-B has already advanced to the finals, scheduled for Tuesday. In Monday's semi-finals, Law-A will tangle with Med I.

GOLF FINALS DEADLINE

All intramural action will wind up on Wednesday afternoon, with the exception of the All-Campus Golf Tourney, the finals deadline for which is Monday, May 21. Kappa Sig and Grimes have already gained semi-finals berths, four other teams still battling in the quarter-finals. The winner of the Dental Bulls-Kappa Psi match will meet Kappa Sig, and the victor in the Phi Kap-Dental Frosh pairing will go against Grimes. The semi-finals deadline is Thursday, May 17.

Awards Night has been set for Thursday evening, May 17. Team and individual awards as well as organization and managers awards will be presented at this important meeting, and all managers are urged to attend. The meeting will be in 301-A Woolen at 7:30.

SYMPHONY CONCERT

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, directed by Benjamin Swalin, will give a concert at 8:15 this evening in Page Auditorium at Duke University. Guest soloist will be Eleanor Steber, world-renowned soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Regular seasonal membership cards in the Symphony Society will be honored at the door.

ACC Season Nears Finish

By ED DUPREE

North Carolina's Tar Heels reign again as the Atlantic Coast Conference tennis champions. Duke's Blue Devils captured the golf title, and Maryland, as usual, walked away with the conference track championship. The Terrapins also topped the conference in lacrosse this year.

Only baseball remains on the ACC schedule and Wake Forest supporters are wondering if the bug that bit UNC's high-flying team in May, 1961, is on the loose again. The league-leading Deacons lost to Virginia and Maryland over the weekend and must beat State Wednesday to clinch a tie for the title. Last year UNC needed a win in one of two games at Charlottesville, but Virginia clubbed the visitors twice to hand Duke the title. The Cavaliers have picked up where they left off, winning seven and losing four. A Virginia victory over Maryland, coupled with a Wake Forest loss to State would make UVA 8-4 and Wake 9-5. If the Cavs still can win the championship after these games, then they would have to make up a pair of postponed games with South Carolina. No other team can win the baseball crown.

WATER POLO HONORS TO DKE

DKE splashed to a wet 4-2 triumph over Theta Sigma Nu's in the finals of the All-Campus Water Polo Tournament on Wednesday. The championship roster included: Hank Foscue, Tate Kemper, Stark Sutton, Dave Wysong, Bruce Sims, Mike Bissell, Pete Gilchrist, Bill Boardman and Pope Shuford.

Valkyries Tap 9 In Pre-Dawn Ceremony

Beth Walker

Order Honors 6 Seniors, 3 Juniors For Service

In predawn ceremonies this morning, black - hooded figures stalked the women's residence halls calling forth nine undergraduate women to membership in the Order of the Valkyries, the highest women's honorary organization on campus.

Tapped were Seniors Lee Kohn, Montgomery, Ala.; Elizabeth Randolph Latta, Louisburg, N. C.; Mary Franklin McGehee, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Margaret Karen Nelson, Starkville, Miss.; Dorothy Jane Shaw, Durham, N. C.; and Cameron Lee Taber, Glen Saint Mary, Fla.; and Juniors Judith Belinda Deal, Landis, N. C.; Jan G. McColskey, Lake City, Fla; and Elizabeth Anne Walker, Jacksonville, Fla.

Limited to two per cent of the coed student body, Valkyries corresponds to the highest men's honorary, the Order of the Golden Fleece. It was founded in 1941, when it replaced Alpha Kappa Gamma, national women's honorary society. Members are recognized for their scholarship, leadership, character and service to the University.

Citations to the new members read as follows:

Miss Deal ". . . one who has combined academic endeavor and service to the University in a unique manner. While maintaining an excellent scholastic average, she has shown leadership and dedication in her dormitory, the nursing profession, and in her many campus activities. Miss Deal is to be recognized for her strength of character and ability to stand by her own convictions. Her keen sense of humor and warm personality have brought happiness into the lives of all who know her. Miss Deal's depth of understanding and sincere interest in her fellowman is exhibited in every phase of her daily life."

* * *

Miss Kohn, ". . . one who has shown strength of character in disappointments, true leadership with quiet but strong sincerity, and a radiant personality which truly reflects her kind spirit and love for people. Her excellent work on the Carolina Symposium as the chairman of the Hospitality Committee, and her many services to her dormitory are a few indications of her carrying out her responsibilities with joy and hard work. Miss Kohn is one of those rare people who is always ready to give not only her time but her full attention to those in need of understanding; who, by her maturity makes a calm and constructive contribution wherever she may be; and one who is most worthy of this honor for she has never sought recognition in giving of herself to her University and fellow-students."

* * *

Miss Latta, ". . . one who has responded with dignity and industry to the demands of her dormitory administrative duties and to her responsibilities on Women's Residence Council. While standing firmly by her convictions, Miss Latta has continued to maintain a warm and sympathetic understanding toward others. Her depth of character, sound judgment, and imaginative leadership have merited the esteem and approbation of her fellow students."

2 Apply For Yack Editor Positions

Publications Board Meets Today To Decide On New Editor's Post

The Pub Board will meet today to select an editor for next year's Yackety Yack. Ben Cone, candidate for Yack editor, submitted the following statement to the DTH:

"The Yackety Yack is a very important publication to the student body of the University of North Carolina. It is a book for the students and by the students, and, for this reason, every student who is interested and capable should have a chance to participate in its publication.

"I, as a candidate for co-editor of the 1963 Yack, did not have a chance at the job because the time of the selection of the yearbook editor was not announced publicly. I believe I should have an equal opportunity to try out for the position.

"Since it is so late in the year, the experience of Julie Latane, who did an excellent job as managing editor, and myself will give us a starting advantage towards publishing the annual. The short amount of time remaining will be sufficient for our spring preparations.

"We have had previous experience in publishing a book and have extensive knowledge of the mechanics of organizing a large publication. Also we will be able to quickly pull together a competent staff composed of new members and experienced members with whom we worked last year."

Men's Council Suspends 2 For Semester

The Men's Honor Council considered two cases last week, according to Council Scribe Whitney Durand.

"On Thursday, May 10, the Men's Council met to consider two cases. In the first, a second-semester freshman was alleged to have copied almost verbatim two papers which were handed in for credit. The plagiarism was discovered by his teacher and reported to the Council.

He entered a plea of guilty and received a sentence of suspension from school for a period of one full academic semester. In this case, as in all cases where cheating is established, the defendant received an "F" in the course.

The second case concerned an alleged attempt to defraud the Chapel Hill Telephone Company. The defendant, a senior, entered a plea of not guilty to charges for a number of phone calls to other cities.

Testimony was given by an official of the telephone company, and the defendant was linked to the charges. He was found guilty and suspended from school for one semester."

Ackland Painting To Arrive In Fall

Jacopo del Sellaio's fifteenth century oil painting of the Madonna and saints, recently purchased by the Ackland Art Center, will not be in Chapel Hill for another six months. The painting is now being sent from England for Ackland's permanent collection.

Students and townspeople flocked to Kemp's yesterday afternoon to meet and have their records autographed by world-famous jazz pianist George Shearing.

Kemp arranged to have Shearing at his store and also arranged a "throne" composed of a huge wicker chair and a table covered with bright red satin.

At the table Shearing signed autographs with the aid of representatives from his recording company. He has been blind since early childhood and required aid in autographing the albums.

Shearing arrived from Charlotte about 4:30 p.m. and went directly to Kemp's. He was greeted by the Fabulous Frenchman himself at the door.

The pianist was flocked with questions about himself and his music. Jazz buffs of all kinds gathered around to greet one of the pace-setters of the keyboard.

Meanwhile Kemp was busy selling dozens of Shearing albums.

Students in the infirmary yesterday included Mary Allen, Larry Kramer, Abda Bardawil, Spencer Wolmack, III, Robert Lowe, Odell Harrill, Jr., Sean Fitzsimmons, Howard Marsh, John Cassels, James Latane, Merritt Spoon, Jr., Harvey Whitley, Kay Fletcher, Walter Honour, Jr., Don Carver and Will von Glahn.

SP To Investigate UNC Integration

Party Passes Bill Supporting Desegregation After Hot Debate

By HARRY DeLUNG

Integration in the University and Chapel Hill will be investigated by the Student Party projects committee after the Party's passage of a resolution supporting desegragation efforts.

The resolution, which was introduced last week by Mike Putzel, was passed Monday night after heated debate. It pledges the party's support for any local integration group "which does not conflict with the party's purpose."

Dave Williams, who spoke against the resolution, said that the wording implied that "immediate" integration was supported by the party. Williams said that persons who urge total integration on this campus "necessarily sacrifice other ideals." A member from the floor pointed out that the word "immediate" was not used in the resolution in any form.

In opposition to Williams, Bill Straughn said that "Williams seems to believe that people should have the freedom to exploit others' freedom."

Rufus Edmisten urged an amendment to the resolution which would throw out the second article which gave party support to integrationist organizations. Dave Williams and Franklin Adkinson also favored an amendment version of the resolution.

A vote to delete article two came to a 12-12 tie which was broken by party chairman Robin Britt who voted to leave it in.

Mike Lawler, the S.P.'s only successful candidate in the big-four race this spring, said that the party had supported integration in its platform, and he advised that they continue to take a stand. The resolution was passed by a 13-6 vote.

The party also selected their advisory board for the coming year. Elected members are Rita Johnson, Mike Putzel, Dave Williams, and Phil Matthews.

SL Slates Funds For Intramurals

Intramural managers' salaries were appropriated by Student Legislature last night, totalling $3,944.50. The funds will be used next year to promote the intramural programs in all men's dormitories.

Bruce Welch (SP, DM III), who introduced the bill, said that the paid managers system had been tried on an experimental basis in six dorms this year. "The success of the system is shown in the fact that the participating dorms finished in the top six places in competition," reported Welch.

Also passed with little opposition was a bill to establish permanent bulletin boards at Lenoir Hall, the Scuttlebutt, and Graham Memorial. Arthur Hays (SP, DM IV) said that current legislation would be posted on the boards, similar to the board which is located at Y-Court.

The special Monday night session was called so that presidential appointments, which were announced then could be voted on by the last session which will meet on Thursday.

PUB BOARD MEETS

The Publications Board will meet today at 3 p.m. for the purpose of interviewing candidates for Yack editorship who have not already been interviewed.

Other selections to be made include editor and business manager for the summer school paper; editor and business manager for the Carolina Quarterly; business manager for the Yack; and business manager for the DTH.

New Publications Board officers will also be selected.

The Liberal Hour

The Liberal Hour is over and party politics have returned to normal . . . The Student Party Monday night elected a conservative Advisory Board and then paradoxically passed a strongly liberal resolution, which was mildly opposed by a considerably minority of the party.

By a 13-6 vote the party instructed its projects committee to investigate Chapel Hill segregation. Earlier Chairman Robin Britt had broken a tie vote to retain an article in the resolution supporting other campus groups which work toward integration.

Opponents of the resolution claimed that "the Student Party hasnt decided yet whether it supports integration" and said "I hope the SP decides NOT to support campus groups which work toward integration." (—Dave Williams, new and old Advisory Board member.)

Resolution defenders placed it in the historical context of the party —the SP decided to work for community integration in 1948, in 1951, in 1953, in 1957, in 1961 and in years between. One of the planks of the party in the recent election stated the party's support of desegregation activities.

* * *

The trend of most speeches, however, was against taking a stand on this issue, against taking any stand on any issue . . . because of political expediency.

At least two party members said, "The duty of the Student Party is to get its men elected"—Elected to what? How? Why? Who are "its men"? Why should anyone join such a party?

Several of those who made pleas for political expediency were speaking from the ranks of the losers, persons who had run for office on the platform of having-no-platform and who failed to decieve the voters —persons who hope to lead the Student Party into the comfortable abyss of No-Think.

The SP's expedient politics disregard the fact that their only winning Big Four candidate this spring was Mike Lawler, who spoke in favor of the integration resolution. (The other three SP spring candidates weren't even at the meeting.) Their successful president-vice president candidates the previous year, Bill Harriss and Hank Patterson, strongly supported integration. Most of the party's successful candidates, chosen in the Liberal Hour of convention-time, for the past decade have been liberal integrationists.

By the same token the University Party usually runs Big Four candidates who are more liberal than the majority of their constituency.

* * *

But the Liberal Hour is over, the major student government offices are filled, and the party hacks must be content with cries of "We can't take a stand . . . it's not politically expedient." (jc)

Cuba, Prematurely

Since the ill-fated and totally embarrasing attempted invasion of Castro's Cuba, quite a lot of confusion prevails. No one is quite sure what degree of Communist effectiveness has been achieved, and no one is certain just how involved the Central Intelligence Agency has managed to get.

The confusion and uncertainty persist on all levels of U. S. involvement. But the uncertainty on behalf of too many uninformed and uncertain students could be eliminated, or at least lessened, with some good old fashioned emotion.

That is to say, we are tired of hearing the quaint and clever catch-all evasion, "premature," thrown at any attempt to diagnose the Cuban fiasco. Surely, much has been said about Cuba that is not totally correct; certainly, opinions have been formed that suffer from insufficient information.

Just ask any political scientist, adroit historian, or clever graduate student; ask them what is the best book to be written on the Cuban situation, they will tell you that none of them are any good, "all too premature." It is too early to judge, too early to decide, too soon "to know."

Of course we ought to consider all of the best analyses that are presented; that is, read them to stay informed, discuss them to appear concerned, then label them "premature," and discard them; just don't take them too seriously, after all they will obviously be "premature."

Well there are many things about the Cuban situation that are decidedly premature . . . . quite a few deaths for instance .

We may rest assured that those Cubans who lost sons in the invasion—those who have relatives rotting in Castro's prisons, they are not content to wait before passing any judgment. They are not sitting back to let time heal. They do not care that their opinions may be "premature." They are involved. Totally involved, as we should be.

They may acknowledge our cool and learned "wait and see" attitude. They may admit to the prematurity of many analyses . . . . but they are more aware of that other premature incident, death.

What should be do? Well, let's start, let's just begin by remembering that those imprisoned and exiled Cubans are fighting for right. They are struggling to defend their political freedom. They want their country back . . . prematurely as hell. (cw)

Subvert Ourselves? —U.S. Rep.

(The following letter was written by Glenn Cunningham, U. S. Representative from Nebraska, in answer to a series of attacks by the Washington Post on the bill banning Communist mail by bulk postal rates.)

The April 26 edition of The Washington Post vontained so many glaring errors that I feel I must set the record straight. It concerned Section 12 of H. R. 7927, the postal rate bill passed by the House Jan. 24. Section 12 bans free or subsidized delivery of Communist propaganda by the U. S. Post Office Department. This was, incidentally, the third editorial in The Post about the same section. There was also a front-page feature article in the Jan. 28 "Outlook" section.

All three editorials and the article have repeated statements which simply are not true. In fact they are ridiculous. Section 12 was carefully drawn to accomplish two things:

—Retaliate against Communist governments for their failure to live up to international mail agreements by:

—Ending the subsidy being given by the Post Office Department to Communist propaganda.

That is what the amendment aimed at that is what it will do.

It has no effect on first-class mail; it does not deprive anyone of Communist propaganda; it does not invite retaliation because we are the nation that is retaliating; it does not totally ban Communist propaganda from the country; it does not ban Communist propaganda from the mail; it positively has no effect on freedom of speech nor the right of Americans to choose what they want to read.

On the contrary, the House action does proceed along an avenue provided for in Universal Postal agreements; it is a possible means to step up the free flow of information across the Iron Curtain — both ways; it merely puts Communist propaganda in this country in a higher mail rate category.

The Supreme Court has held that Congress not only has the power to set postal rates, it also has the power to prescribe the rates at which material may move through the mail. The defining of political propaganda poses no problem since such definition (in existing law) has been upheld by Federal Court.

There is no possible way this language can affect freedom of the press or any American newspaper, no matter what it prints, unless such newspaper is financed or sponsored directly or indirectly by a Communist-controlled government.

Of course it may be that The Washington Post and the House of Representatives approach this matter from different viewpoints. I do not know of many if any Members of the House who subscribe to the statement in your latest editorial: ". . . today the Communist Party in the United States is wholly negligible."

Negligible is defined by Webster as meaning "That may be neglected or disregarded."

I believe most people would prefer to take the word of J. Edgar Hoover rather than The Washington Post as to whether we should disregard the Communist Party in the United States. Mr. Hoover said recently:

"The atheistic Communist dictatorship now controls one fourth of the earth's surface and more than one-third of her peoples. The Communist threat from without must not blind us to the Communist threat from within. The latter is reaching into the very heart of America through its espionage agents and a cunning, defiant and lawless Communist Party, which is fanatically dedicated to the Marxist cause of world enslavement and destruction of the foundations of our Republic.

"All I Asked For Was An Increase In My Allowance!"

Cosmonauts: No Dream

The recent visit of Soviet cosmonaut Gherman Titov to the United States revealed one thing with telling clarity. Titov and U. S. astronaut John Glenn share perhaps the most tragic characteristic of modern times — they both have been brainwashed by their respective governments.

Titov is a Russian, and Glenn is an American. And the press conferences demonstrated that neither one is much of a human being.

It was the same old dogma all over again. Titov and Glenn had little to say except to repeat the standard disarmament lines of Russia and the United States. And everyone who listened to them had heard it all before, a million times. One might have expected to head a disembodied voice announce, as each of them spoke, "this statement is pre-recorded from Washington (or Moscow.)"

Titov and Glenn stood not as symbols of humanity, but as straw men of geography and bureaucracy.

What sleep machines of our Brave New World destroyed their minds through such careful "education"? Who drew the ineradicable boundaries of maps so deeply in their brains?

These men have been closer to the stars than any other creatures that ever lived on earth. They have begun the exploration of infinity. The earth is full, and so man moves beyond it. Or does he?

Glenn and Titov lied to us. Neither of them ever left the earth. Neither of them ever saw the stars.

Legislature Performs Well

To the Editors:

Lest anyone be deceived by a misinformed editor of the Daily Tar Heel into thinking that the student legislature is not performing its duty with thoughtfulness and discretion, let me hasten to set the record straight.

In a recent editorial by (jc), the editor makes mention of the fact that at its last session legislature overwhelmingly defeated a motion to close debate and vote on the pending question, after which no one had anything further to say on the bill. From this astute observation, jc concludes that "the legislators didn't know what they were voting on . . . a not too unusual situation."

The plain fact of the matter is that legislators did know what they were voting on, and moreover, were extending a common courtesy to one of their group. After the previous question had been moved, the Chair asked the body if there was any objection to closing discussion. At this time one legislator clearly voiced an objection. In accordance with parliamentary procedure, the Chair then was forced to call for a vote on the motion to close debate. Assuming that that protesting legislator had some further comment to make on the question at hand, most legislators acted (in good faith and with complete cognizance of what was going on) to defeat the motion in order to extend to their colleague the privileges of the floor.

As to the charge that it is not an unusual situation for legislators not to know what they are voting on, it may be discarded as unwarranted and unfounded slander on the integrity of the student legislature and the members thereof.

I might humbly suggest that it is you, Mr. jc who didn't know what the student legislature was voting on. In the future we may hope that THIS does not become "a not too unusual situation."

Concentration Camps In U.S.?

To the Editors:

Gus Hall, Communist spokesman in this country, recently released thru the Gus Hall-Benjamin J. Davis Defense Committee, a copy of a letter written by James V. Bennett, on letterhead of the Department of Justice which admits the existence of concentration camps in the United States on a standby basis under the provisions of the McCarran Act. In releasing the letter Hall declared:

"This Bennett letter written in 1952 and released by a National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act in 1953, gives the locations and expenditures involved in establishing and maintaining these shameful McCarran Act concentration camps for future use in our land. Although this Committee of prominent individuals has not been in existence for a number of years, these letters have been public documents for ten years and the camps are maintained within the prison system. The Department of Justice cannot dismiss this with the word "bunk," as spokesmen have done.

* * *

"Mr. Bennett's letter reveals that the McCarran Act camps are at Florence and Wickenberg, Arizona; Avon Park, Florida; Allenwood Pennsylvania; El Reno, Oklahoma; and Tule Lake, California.

"These camps should be closed down and that land put to entirely other purposes. This is one disgraceful mess that the Attorney General should get rid of if he expects to improve the image of our country in other lands. He cannot hide these camps under any other name in the Federal prison system. They reveal the fascist character of the McCarran law and that this law endangers the whole concept of American freedom and liberty for all the people. The concentration camp section of this law flows logically and naturally from the fascist character of the law.

"Not only should he get rid of the camps, but because of the very character of this law, he should halt all prosecutions under it, and abandon all applications of a law which so obviously violates our Bill of Rights and constitutional liberties. Congress should deny the use of any funds for concentration camps and fascism in our land.

"The fact that McCarran Act hearings have been started by the State Department to deny a passport to Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, one of America's greatest women labor leaders of this century, and that this is done on the very day that Robert Kennedy says that more Americans should travel abroad shows the absurdity and vicious character of the law. This begins a screening process on travel that hits everybody.

"The indictment of the Communist Party and of Benjamin J. Davis and myself under this law spells greater danger to all Americans than to those who are the first victims of this fascist law. These indictments should be scrapped. Any reading of the law will show its ominous character."

Pollution By Merchants

To the Editors:

A polluted creek runs beneath the town of Chapel Hill. Few people know of its existence.

Above this section of the earth's crust life goes on very busily. (So much so, in fact, that it is a bother to the downtown stores to even cash a check, to say nothing of giving conscientious service.) In the Chapel Hill sunlight — for as many know, the sun rises and sets on this town — all seems prosperous as never before.

Old Wells are everywhere: Carolina Rams are abundant: sweat shirts, beer mugs, and London Fogs all display the emblem of the institution. City auto tags advertise in a milky shade of Carolina blue, "Chapel Hill, Home of UNC."

For charlatans exploit every miracle.

The University supports the little town, the little people, and their little jobs. And the merchants hold college students in disregard, or pretended indifference. Students are a commodity, little more than tourist trade. They deserve nothing from the town or its people, for they are just passing through.

When they have passed through they will remember an egocentric, provincial, pseudo-sophisticated little town basking in banal traditions and poor glories that grow with time.

They will remember the people who loved to think of themselves as "a friendly folk" in "the Southern part of Heaven." But really after being rescued from insignificance by a growing university, they showed themselves as neither very cultured nor very intellectual — snobs. And now their paltry motives bloom in every corner of their garden spot.

The recent voting dispute was representative.

Salaries here are not high and a student population is eternally needy. Yet the Franklin Street bloc keeps prices high, for the big University seems to be over a barrel.

And the student mass is inert (It accepts atrocities within the University as well.) But is every one content to blend in the mass?

Meanwhile an underground stream flows beneath us in the dark. Its stagnant waters dissolve the stone foundations of our oldest buildings, poison the roots of blossoming trees, and one by one they fall . . .

To change its course will take a little dynamite.

Missing Pulitzer—For W. R. Hearst

In the newspaper Valhalla, and surely there must be one, we suspect that a certain Joseph Pulitzer may be smirking at the looming shade of William Randolph Hearst. When they were alive, firing memos with lethal warheads at trembling editors, the two great publishers engaged in a feud that was the rowdiest rumble in the annals of American journalism.

Pulitzer came to New York first, and in 1883 made the World the prototype of a new kind of journalism — bright, breezy and crusading. He ran the first color cartoon, "The Yellow Kid," and soon conservative critics were complaining of "yellow journalism." In 1895, Hearst bought the New York Journal and did his best to outdo Pulitzer in saffron sensationalism. He succeeded.

One incidental byproduct of the newspaper feud was the Spanish-American War. "War Ship Maine Split in Two by Enemy's Secret Infernal Machine!" Country Thrills With War Fever." Soon Hearst was sending the artist Remington to Cuba, with instructions to provide the pictures while the Journal took care of providing the war.

As time passed, however, Pulitzer left the field to Hearst and abandoned lurid headlines for a different approach. The World came to reflect Pulitzer's belief that "accuracy is to a newspaper what virtue is to a women." In another prescription, Pulitzer memorably added:

"I must see that my readers get the truth; but that is not enough. I must put it before them briefly so that they will read it, clearly so that they will understand it, forcibly so that they will appreciate it, picturesquely so that they will remember it, and, above all, accurately so that they will be wisely guided by its light."

For this part, Citizen Hearst took a different view. "Make a paper interesting, distinctive & accurate and complete," he instructed. "Those requirements are named in the order of their importance." The priorities express the contrast. The fatal weakness of the Hearst press — and Hearst was by no means wholly devoid of genius — was that the papers became a reflection less of the world than of the personality who owned them. As Hearts himself became more remote from reality, his newspapers followed along.

When Pulitzer died, he founded the prizes that bear his name and that are intended, in part, to advance the craft of writing. One prize is for biography, with the stipulation that it go to a work "teaching patriotic and unselfish service to the people, illustrated by an eminent example." This year, the jury recommended W. A. Swanbergs' Citizen Hearst, but in a virtually unprecedented gesture, the trustees of Columbia University refused to accept the recommendation. Hearst imparted the most thunder; but once again, Pulitzer, as always, had the last word. The missing prize pronounces a judgment more decisive than any that were awarded.

"WE MADE A KILLING ON THAT ONE!"—Student executives representing a detergent company in a "Management Game" program at the University of North Carolina Business School are pleased over their standing in competition with other soap firms. The students above, all candidates for the Master's in Business Administration degree at Chapel Hill are, left to right: John Hardman, acksonville, Fla.; David Crawford, Atlanta; Jim Adams, Atlanta; Pete Kelley, Savannah, Ga.; Neil Lehrman, Silver Spring, Md.; Jerry Fox, Chapel Hill; and Robert Ashby, Jackson, Tenn.

Students Become Soap Manufacturers

Seven students are seated at a long table, and facing them is a smaller table at which three faculty members preside. The faculty members are a "board of directors" of a large detergent company, and the students are the managers of the company — the president, directors of finance, marketing, and production and students holding other positions in the soap-making firm.

After a "quarterly" report on decisions they have made in operating one of three competing detergent companies, the team of seven students, seniors in the School of Business Administration, must justify their actions to the board of directors.

A faculty member addresses the president of Company A. "Why didn't you advertise more?" asked the faculty director.

"We sold all the soap we produced," answered the student. "We could have sold more. We couldn't seem to get a strong correlation between advertising and sales."

"Why didn't you raise prices?"

"We didn't raise prices, because we were looking at the long run. We thought our competitors might have undersold us."

"Since you sell all you produce, don't you think you should expand production?" asked a faculty director.

"We feel the other companies are trying for a short-term bonanza," said the president. "Our profits have actually been higher than theirs. This demand can't go on forever. We'll be in better position in the next quarter than they will."

In another room in Carroll Hall in the School of Business Administration on another day, Company C met with its faculty board, and the same sort of questioning took place.

"What is your pricing policy?" asked the faculty director.

"To have a price lower than the other companies," said the marketing manager.

"But look at the results," said the director. "You sold at a lower price, and you sold more soap, but your profits are not as high as Company B."

"I suppose we got carried away and thought we were going to make a mint," said the president. "We thought we'd take a flyer on getting a larger share of the market by selling the soap at a lower price, and then try to retain the hold we have on the market."

In another session in another quarterly meeting with Company B, the president of the company explained why his company was in third place. "We're behind because we failed to bring out a new product fast enough. Our competitors beat us to the market. Second, our advertising budget was too high. Sales were going down, and our efforts to counter the seasonal trend with advertising were eating into our profits."

"What are you going to do about it?" asked a faculty director.

"We have improved our plant efficiency, and we have decided to bring out a new product. We hope to increase production and sales, too."

In each of the meetings between the management teams and the faculty board of directors, it was apparent that the faculty members kept hands off the decision-making process. They were frank and sharp in their questioning and indicated criticism, and running through the colloquies was the central theme: be sure you know why you made the decision. Don't decide just by the flip of a coin. Study the market, know your product, learn the relationships between production, sales, and finance. Understand why you are in business, the obligation to the stockholders, to the public, to your employees.

The management simulation game began last September, and the undergraduates, all seniors, now are on the last lap before graduation from the University. In another week or so the scores will be tabled, and 22 students will be given grades for their year's work.

"But we've gotten more than a grade," said one of the students. "We learn something about what it's like to run a real business, meet the competition, to make decisions and be prepared to make changes in the light of new conditions."

Danielson At Conference

Wayne Danielson, associate professor in the School of Journalism, will be one of six university professors from the nation participating in a special conference of the Associated Press Managing Editors Research Seminar to be held at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., this weekend.

Professor Danielson, along with the five other university specialists in communications research, will be working with about 30 managing editors of the nation's newspapers. They will consider how new applications of research can be applied to the problems of the nation's newspapers.

Professor Danielson is the newly elected chairman of the Council on Communications Research of the Association for Education in Journalism. He has been a member of the UNC faculty since 1959. Professor Danielson attended the University of Iowa where he received a B.A. degree in 1952. He received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Stanford University in 1953 and 1957, respectively.

State Rallies To Defeat Tar Heels By 8-6

Carolina Loses 5-0 Lead, Takes Eighth Place In ACC

By LOU ROSENTHAL

N. C. State, behind 5-0 after six innings, came back with four runs in the seventh and the same number in the eighth, to defeat the UNC baseball team, 8-6, Monday night in Raleigh.

The defeat marked the first time a UNC team has finished last in any sport in the ACC. It was also the first time in 12 regular season games that State has beaten Carolina in baseball, a skein dating back to 1956.

Vernon Strickland was the only State batter to get more than one hit off the four pitchers Coach Walter Rabb used. He went 4-5 including a double and three RBI's.

Andy Billesdon was the starter for the Tar Heels, but was relieved in the seventh. Jack Kees replaced him but was knocked out in the eighth. Co-Captain Dave Murr came in, but was charged with the loss as the Wolfpack scored four runs. Bob Carter finished up, but the damage was done.

The Tar Heels started the scoring in the fourth, when Buddy Tilden walked and Paul Swing tripled to center to score Tilden.

In the fifth, Heyward Hull singled, Jud Spainhour was hit by a pitch, and Len Dellollo walked to load the bases. Billesdon walked to score one run, as did Tilden and Swing, and the score was 4-0.

The next inning started off the same way: Hull singled, Spainhour was hit, and Dellolio walked. Bernie Isgett hit a long fly ball to center, but it was caught. Hull scored after the catch to make the score 5-0.

But in the seventh, State started to roll. Billesdon had only given up two singles, both to Strickland. Ron Erb started it off with a walk, and pitcher George Allen also did the same. Warren Lineberger singled in Erb. Strickland then got his third single, driving in Allen's runner.

Rees replaced Billesdon, but was greeted by Wayne Edwards' single, that knocked in Linetberger. George Hayworth then singled to drive in Strickland.

The Tar Heels got one run back on Neal's single, Hull's sacrifice. Spainhour moved Neal to third on his infield out, and Dellolio singled Neal home.

The Wolfpack applied the clincher in the bottom of the eighth, as Erb again started with a walk. Murr came in and got Allen to force Erb at second, but Lineberger walked. Tom Hines singled, but Allen's runner was out when the batted ball hit him.

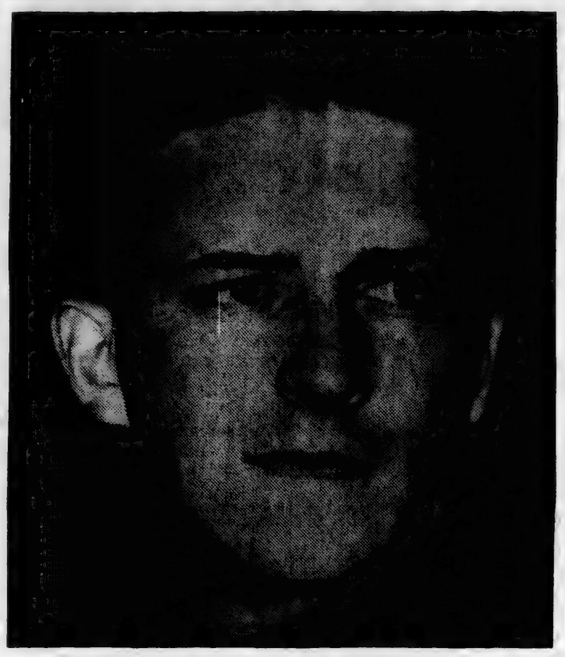
Two were out, but Strickland doubled to center, driving in a run. Edwards got on by an error, as Hines scored. Don Montgomery singled to make the score 7-6 State. Hayworth hit a grounder, but the third was in the dirt, and the score stood 8-6.

Billesdon struck out seven in 7 1/3 innings, but allowed seven base-on-balls. Rees walked only one and struckout none.

George Allen was the winning pitcher. He is now 2-3 for the season. John Boughan started for State but was knocked out of the game in the fifth. Doug Harris relieved him but was replaced by Allen in the sixth.

Murr is now 1-4 for the year.

Hull was the only Tar Heel to get more than one hit, but the State outfield threw out three men on double plays to aid the Wolfpack.



RAY FARRIS

By ED DUPREE

A big man on the football field for UNC for three years was Ray Farris, the likable senior from Charlotte. Ray, the permanent president of the senior class and Mr. Alumnus, appropriately is the first Tar Heel athlete to be recognized as the Daily Tar Heel salutes UNC's senior athletes.

The 5-11, 185-pounder played quarterback behind Jack Cummings in 1959 and was generally conceded the top spot at the position for his junior year. But Ward Marslender entered the picture and started the 1960 season as the Tar Heel field general.

After one game, the son of a former Carolina grid great, was back at the number one post and proved his offensive ability by leading the team in touchdowns scored (six) and total points (36).

In addition Ray had the third highest rushing yardage on the team (257), 63 completed passes out of 143 attempts for 865 yards, punted 53 times for a 37.6 yard average, and had the distinction of completing a pass to himself for a two-yard gain in one of the most unusual plays of the year.

When the 1961 season started there was little doubt that Ray would be the number one man at the helm of the UNC offense. By the end of the season he was second team All-ACC, second in the conference in toal ofense behind Roman Gabriel, N. C. State's All-American signal-caller, and second in passes completed.

Ray was in 259 plays and accounted for 1028 total rushing and passing yards for a 3.9 total ofense average. He completed 71 of 159 passes for 875 yards and two touchdowns. For the second straight year he punted for a 37.6 average on 62 punts.

Ray's four touchdowns and 24 points made him the eleventh leading scorer during his senior year in the ACC .

A game UNC fans will long remember, the 22-21 victory over Tennessee, saw the Tar Heel quarterback at his best. He scored Carolina's first touchdown of the game, but near the end of the contest the Vols led 21-14 and Tar Heel hopefuls began leaving Kenan Stadium with only 81 seconds remaining.

But Carolina had the ball on its own 20 and Farris and company began to roll. Ray hit end Steve Yates and Bob Lacey with passes to start the drive. Then he connected with halfback Gib Carson to advance the ball again. A 15-yard penalty moved the ball to the Volunteer 28 and two plays later Farris tossed one to Ward Marslender for the touchdown.

Farris accounted for the final points when he tossed one to Carson for the two-point conversion. The Kenan crowd, finding it hard to believe that UNC had scored in only 6 6seconds, went wild. Only 15 seconds remained on the clock—Farris's arm had tamed one of the strong Southeastern Conference teams.

This fall, when Jim Hickey's footballers take on one of the roughest Carolina grid schedules in history (Ohio State, Michigan State, Notre Dame, and the ACC rivals), Mr. Farris will not be around. The man who handles the quarterback chores may equal or surpass Ray's performances, but Farris unquestionably will be missed in the Carolina offensive unit.

Whittle Heads Monogram Club Officers' Slate

Heath Whittle a junior pole vaulter from Davidson, N. C., is the new president of the North Carolina Monogram Club. Heath succeeds Joe Davies.

Other elected officers are John Runco of Arnold, Pa., vice-president; Bill Croom of Durham, secretary; Jerry Stuver of Berkley Heights, N. J., treasurer; Duff Greene of Wynewood, Pa., sergeant-at-arms; Vic Esposito of Staten Island, N. Y., social chairman; and Bob Kepner of Natick, Mass., representative to the Carolina Athletic Association.

Under the new slate of officers the Monogrammers have already initiated new lettermen in basketball, swimming, and wrestling, and also held the annual Monogram picnic Sunday.

One of the big events in the Monogram Club year for 1962-63 will be the planning of the second annual Alumni-Varsity football game. The Alumni won the first annual game, 10-7.

Footballers Lead Frosh Batting; Danneman Tops Tar Baby Pitching

By LOU ROSENTHAL

The UNC freshman baseball team, sporting a hefty .272 team batting average, ended its season Friday, with a disheartening 9-5 lass to the N.C. State frosh.

A scheduled game with Wilmington Jr. College was cancelled after showers in Wilminton made the field too wet to play ball.

The Tar Babies recorded a 14-4 slate, and were 9-3 in the "Little Big Four." Power hitting and strong pitching were the big factors, as Coach Bruce Crump's charges scored 134 runs in 138 innings.

The frosh were led by Frank Gallagher's .444 BA and 18 RBI's. Ken Willard was the closest with .320 and 15 RBI's. He also led in homers (three), total bases (30), base-on-balls (18), and strikeouts (20). Both Willard and Gallaher came out late, because of spring football.

Willard tied shortstop Dick Fleming in doubles with four apiece. Gallagher was second in homers with two.

Other leading hitters were: Ron Barlow, .317; Dick Prindle, .310; Fleming, .300; Merle Kruer, .281; and Ron Stanley, .277.

Ken Boykin and Bobby Reagan had one homer each.

Prindle led in stolen bases with seven and tied Fleming in hits with 18. Fleming led in runs (17), and sacrifices (five).

Bill Taylor and Reagan led in three-baggers with two each. Taylor also was up at the plate the most, coming to bat 68 times.

The pitching staff came through for the Tar Babies, as the mound crew finished with a composite 3.59 ERA. Bill Dannemann, Norfolk, Va. righthander, was the mainstay of the staff, as he won five and lost none, and had an ERA of 1.70. Jerry Davis, hard-throwing lefty from Cramerton, N. C., had a 2.05 ERA and a 4-1 slate. His only loss was an extra inning affair against Wake Forest.

Walton Ward, Durham righthander, compiled a 3-0 chart, with a 4.07 ERA. He struck out 11 men in a seven-inning game at Wake Forest.

Joe White, another righthander from Winston-Salem, pitched a five-hit shoutout over Oak Ridge for his only decision.

Davis led in strikeouts with 27, followed by Dannemann, 24; Ward, 23, and White, 23.

The pitchers also came through in the hitting department, as Ward hit .400, and Dannemann .357. Dannemann had 6 RBI's.

The Tar Babies averaged 7.4 runs and 8.6 hits a game, against their opponents' 5 runs and 8 hits a game.

The only statistical categories that the freshmen were behind in were at-bats and strikeouts.

Get Basic Education –Kiplinger

Speaker Shares Advice With Reporters

Comments and predictions on journalism and the national scene were tossed around here Tuesday night by the founder of the Kiplinger News Letter.

Willard M. Kiplinger told a Howell Hall audience that to become a good reporter, "you should get as much basic education as you can."

Delivering the Fourth Journalism Lecture 1961-1962 on "Fifty Years of Reporting," Mr. Kiplinger noted that he and George Shearing (who was performing the same night) "are similar in that we both play by ear."

Reporting in the last fifty years, according to the Washington newsman who started in 1912, has changed in that there is less faking, more addiction to the truth and more breadth to national and international news. Comics, the color press and the great influence of the weekly news magazines are some of the changes in the last half century of the American press.

"Journalism gives the student the greatest opportunity of any trade to bring thoughts and ideas to the public—to the people who need and use them. Information is the reatest need of the people."

During the question and answer period that followed the speech, Mr. Kiplinger gave his views on a variety of subjects.

Journalism: "Journalists are not born, but made." "I sell judgment, not information." "Newspapers should concentrate more on local news and condense national and international news." "I'm not partisan, I'm a reporter." "The next fifty years of journalism will see an increase in depth reporting."

Politics: "The trouble with the Republican party is that it doesn't have a grass root organization." "The 1962 elections will not change Congress." " Rockefeller will be nominated in 1964. Who else is there?" "Kennedy will win in 1964." "The time will come when the South will have a two-party system and North Carolina may well be the leader."

Business: "The stock market dropped because it was too high. The Administration was overly rosy in its predictions and the steel controversy alarmed investors." "Business looks good until the middle of next year. After that the picture gets misty." "A personal and corporation tax cut submitted to Congress by President Kennedy will be approved. This is for a bulwark against a recession."

HELEN OF TROY (Rhoda Blanton) comes to Faustus (Gordon Clark) as his paramour in his last request of the Devil in "Doctor Faustus," which opens tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the Forest Theatre. The Carolina Playmakers will present this "under-the-stars" version of the Christopher Marlowe Elizabethan spectacle again the following night. Tickets will be available at the Forest Theatre box office for $1.50 each prior to show time each evening. In the event of rain, a holdover performance will be held on the next rainless night.

SG Appointments Up For Approval

Executive committee membership appointments were announced Monday night at Student Legislature in a communication from Inman Allen. The appointments will be considered by the legislature and voted on Thursday.

STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE —This committee seeks to promote the standing of the University throughout the state by publicity, and personal contact. A particular goal is the advancement of our interests through state legislative appropriations. Members are: Pete Goldberg, Bob Greeson, Glenda Lackey, Bill Marvin, Huge Stevens, Alan Glanderson, Rita Johnson, Wm. A. Davis, John McMillan, Joe Sam Routh, Gib Ruark, Fred Ricca, Nields De Vere, Ralph Mosley, John Jennrich, Wm. Hoyle, and Bill McAllister.

MEN'S COUNCIL CLERKS — These appointees keep proper records of all men's trial proceedings. Members are: Ted Steinbergs, Perry McCarty, Erskine Duff, and Martin Freedland.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL CLERKS— This committee keeps records of all women's trial proceedings. Members are: Diana Dial, Barbara Hanson, and Lindell Frances.

PUBLICATIONS BOARD — This board is responsible for supervising the activities of the various student publications. Members are: Wayne King, Bill Townsend, and Chris Farran. (Other members are appointed by legislature, or on by virtue of position on a publication.)

3 Rising Seniors In Journalism Win Scholarships

Three rising seniors in the School of Journalism have been granted merit scholarships for 1962-1963.

The Quincy Sharpe Mills Scholarship for $350 has been awarded to Charles R. Mooney of Statesville who will work on the Charlotte News this summer. Mooney held the scholarship this spring semester.

Harvey L. White, Jr. of Bethel, Ohio, holder of the Louis Graves Scholarship this year has again been awarded the same scholarship covering the Summer Session and the fall semester. He will receive $275.

Legum Appointment As Yack Editor Reconfirmed By Publications Board; Summer Paper Interviews Friday

Bourne, McConnel To Head Quarterly

Louis Legum was re-elected editor of the Yackety Yack by the Publications Board in a three-hour meeting yesterday afternoon.

Legum had been appointed to the post previously, but his appointment was challenged due to a lack of publicity for interviews. The challenge was brought up by Julie Latane and Ben Cone who were seeking co-editorship of the Yack.

* * *

Legum announced after his election that he would hold interviews for positions on the Yack staff today, Friday, Monday and Tuesday from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. in the Yack office of GM.

In other business, the Board elected Louis Bourne editor of the Carolina Quarterly. He was unopposed. Ben McConnel was unopposed for business manager of the Quarterly.

Gary Dalton was elected advertising manager of the Daily Tar Heel, and Dave Morgan was elected business manager. Morgan was unopposed.

The Publications Board will meet at 4 p.m. tomorrow to select an editor and a business manager for the summer school newspaper, The UNC News. Bill Wuamett, Bill Hobbs, Mike Robinson and Harry Lloyd have shown interest in the position. Jimmy Lawler and John Tasker are candidates for business manager of the News.

Also on Friday a business manager for the Yack will be selected. Jack Jones is among those showing an interest in the position.

JEAN YODER (left)and Julie Latane are urging Carolina women to unite and attend a watermelon cutting co-sponsored by CWC and the Pan-Hel Council. The party will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. on McIver lawn.

George Shearing, 'The Man Of Velvet,' Prefers Quintet Over His Old Style

By JOE DeBLAZIO

Kemp's resembled the great hall of a "music king." His subjects gathered around to meet him while the hi-fi blared his version of "The Hall of the Mountain King."

Sitting there signing autographs was the man they had to come to meet — George Shearing. His "throne" was a huge wicker chair and his table was decorated with bright red satin symbolizing his famous "satin sound."

"I enjoy playing for college concerts much more than night clubs," Shearing said in a light, gay voice that was answering questions with clarity and a rapid speed of tongue. He was being assisted by representatives from his recording company.

He made the change from straight jazz to his more commercial quintet sound in early 1949. "The idea was Leonard Feather's. After Buddy DeFranco left the group Leonard suggested that we add vibes and guitar. Later on we added strings and brass."

Asked if he liked playing the quintet sound more than his old style of piano and rhythm: "I enjoy it much more," he replied, "It gives me a chance to do the old stuff in addition to the quintet."

Shearing, who was blinded during early childhood by an eye disease, required assistance in signing the autographs. He had just finished signing some music books for a young Chapel Hill resident.

He moved to the U. S. from England in 1947 and now makes his residence in California because, as he so plainly put it, "I like the weather."

When asked how many concerts he plays during a year he had to ask his assistant. The answer was "Oh, at least a hundred."

Shearing then broke in, "We go on tour about eight months out of the year. We might play about 25 one-nighters and then go to a club for two weeks.

"I have been playing the piano since I was three," said Shearing, "and I made the switch from classical to jazz at about 18." But, the pianist still like to play classical music. "Sometimes we even play concertos with symphonies," he said.

When asked the "man of velvet" who his favorite piano players were, he answered quickly: "I like Oscar Peterson, Erroll Garner and Hank Jones. I am also fond of Ray Bryant; as a matter of fact we are doing one of his numbers tonight."

As for his preferences in vocalists, Shearing said that he liked Ella Fitzgerald, Edie Gorme, Andy Williams and Nat King Cole.

"I like Frank Sinatra but only his old stuff," he said, "like his songs with Axel Stordahl. Nat King Cole and I had a good time working (on their new album) and I admire him as a singer."

"I like the standards in music," Shearing continued, "but I also like some of the new modern sounds. But if they are far out just to be far out I don't like them. I don't particular like the far-out pianists either."

"Tonight we are playing 'Lullaby of Birdland' (his own composition), 'Bernie's Tune' and 'Autumn Leaves' among others." As he said this he brought out a few three-by-five file cards with his program for the night written in Braille. He ran his fingers over them and mentioned some more of the songs he would play.

"The members of my group are Israel Crosby, bass; Howie Collins, guitar; Vernel Fornier, drums; Doug Marsh, vibes; and Armando Peraza sits in with us on a few numbers with the bongos and conga drums."

At that time the interviewer felt the hand of Shearing's manager touch my shoulder and knew it was time for him to leave. For that half-hour they talked it seemed as if there was no one around.

But Kemp's was still filled with autograph-seekers and jazz-buffs. The "Shearing Spell" had caught them as it had caught him.

'What To Get From College' Radio Topic

"What Should One Get Out of College?" is the subject of this week's "Carolina Roundtable" discussion to be heard at 7 p.m. today on WUNC-FM radio.

Participating in the program will be three graduating University of North Carolina students, Pam Parker, who has been active in extra-curricular activities and has held the dorm presidency," James P. Pittleman, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and George Campbell, ex-chairman of the Men's Honor Council.

The discussion will be oriented not only toward the general philosophies of a college education, but is expected to be of interest to those who engage in the extra-curricular vs. academic controversy. As usual, listeners may phone in questions to be directed to the panel by calling WUNC at 942-3172. James Wadsworth will be the moderator.

WUNC, with a radius of up to 150 miles, can be heard at 91.5 on the FM dial. Students who do not have access to FM radios will be able to hear the program as part of the regular carrier - current broadcasting.

N. C. MEMORIAL'S CHAPLAIN SAYS:

More Serious Thinking Done In Hospitals

By TOM LEONHARDT

"There is more serious thinking per square foot in a hospital than in any other place," state Fred W. Reid, the new permanent chaplain at N. C. Memorial Hospital.

Chaplain Reid in this statement was alluding to the effect that serious illness, pain, suffering, and the possibility of death have upon a person's normal view of life.

Normal concerns of life lose their perspective under these stresses and become gravely enlarged problems for the patient. By working in close conjunction with the hospital physicians and psychiatrists, the chaplain is able to find the patients that need his help most.

* * *

Reid became N. C. Memorial Hospital's first chaplain in 10 years. Legislation was finally passed making this position possible, a position that was already present at Duke, the Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, Dorthea Dix Hospital, and several other hospitals in this area.

Chaplain Reid took his B. A. degree at the University of Richmond (his hometown), his Bachelor of Divinity at the Southeastern Baptist Seminary in Wake Forest, and his Master of Theology at Duke Divinity School. While at Duke, Rev. Reid studied pastoral care and served an internship in his field at the Duke Medical Center.

Clinical application of religion is what is stressed in pastoral care, explained Chaplain Reid. He stated that the internship, usually lasting one year ,is a time for the chaplain intern to gain insight into himself in order to be able to help patients and their friends and families. Rev. Reid offered this analogy, "It's much like a psychaanalyst that first has to be psychoanalyzed before he can start helping others."

He emphasized that he worked with the family and not to the exclusion of the family minister. He attempts to minister to individual religious needs and representes no particular faith or denomination. "I feel that a person's religion is a resource—good or bad."

"I find myself very much at home in a hospital," says Rev. Reid, whose wife is a nurse. He considers the hospital his church so to speak, even though he has no chapel yet and holds no religious services in the hospital. There are long-range plans for a chapel but he fears they are too long-range to worry about.

IN COOPERATION with Dr. Richard Peters, Chaplain Reid talks with Mr. and Mrs. Hilderbrand, whose daughter is undergoing open-heart surgery.

American Press, I:

"There is less a disposition to accept what newspapers say than to try to estimate the probable truth on the basis of what they say, like aiming a rifle that you know has a deviation to the right."

This is A. J. Liebling's view of public acceptance of American newspapers, as presented in his book THE PRESS, published last fall. Liebling is a columnist for the New Yorker magazine and author of two previous books on the press.

He points out what everybody knows and few people worry about: the lack of newspaper competition, leading to a drastic reduction in "the number and variety of the voices speaking to the public through the press" (from England's Royal Commision named to investigate the condition of the press.)

In the United States this lack of competition has led to a condition where the press is overwhelmingly Republican, conservative, anti-labor, anti-foreigner, and often afraid to be outspoken, to take any risks at all.

* * *

This situation is a potential danger to American democracy, which is based on the education and awareness of the people. The press has a vital role in creating this awareness and improving the quality of the education.

Thomas Jefferson has been quoted (accurately) as saying he would prefer a nation to have newspapers without a government, than a government without newspapers. He was emphasizing the importance he placed on "the opinion of the people," on freedom of information and public awareness of the activities of government.

This public awareness now is threatened, not by a congressional act or presidential order, but by the willful self-censorship and partial news-editorial degeneracy of newspapers themsleves.

* * *

Most newspapers give adequate, often exceptional, coverage of local and national news events. Local news staffs have grown while international correspondents have become rarer. But editorially the U. S. press remains lopsidedly Republican (over 80 per cent of American dailies endorsed Richard Nixon for President in the 1960 election, according to the American Newspaper Publisher's Association) and overwhelmingly pro-business and anti-labor.

It is not unnatural that newspaper publishers, who are themselves big businessmen, should favor business in its fight with labor, but it is disturbing that the sentiment should be so one-sided.

"No newspaper anywhere in the nation," said Liebling, "has had a kind word for the working man since about 1936—on this point the press is not lopsided, but unilateral, monolithic, solidary and unanimous."

Concerning the Republican hold on the press Liebling said, "Mr. Nixon, after the last campaign, charged that reporters were telling the truth behind their bosses' backs, but this was so inherently improbable that nobody took him seriously."

Most newspapers are wary about whose feet get tread upon in other areas. "Civil rights" is a great rallying cry for Northern editors . . . a magnificent crusade—just as long as the crusade is in deepest darkest Alabama and not in New York City or Chicago.

These Northern editors remember that, as Liebling said, "The function of the press in society is to inform, but its role is to make money"—to make money by not making anyone mad. (jc)

Religion 93

Too often we hear students moan about having to sit through uninteresting lectures in the heat of a Chapel Hill spring. Quite often we know exactly what they mean.

But the unjustifiable tendency is towards forgetting the number of good classes that we attend, and only mentioning those that habitually drag. There are those courses in which a straight lecture and note-taking procedure is the only feasible means of covering the subject matter, but they are not, by definition, boring classes.

A good majority of the classes on the upper college level are made interesting by practiced and polished lecture presentations. But the stimulating lectures are often detracted from by the necessity of of taking voluminous notes. And quite often the opportunities for class discussions are severely limited by the straight "lecture" procedure.

Yet, there are still those courses, which occasionally fit into your schedule, in which an actual open forum prevails.

In Religion 93, Christianity and Interpretations of History, such is the case. The material is interesting, and everyone has read up on all assignments, prior to attending the classes in which a particular topic is to be discussed. Usually everyone has some ideas about what he has read that he wants to hash over in the class when he's given the opportunity. And most often, he is given the opportunity, consequently, stimulating class discussion is the rule rather than the exception.

Any course that stimulates thought, welcomes questions, and furthers education through guided discussions deserves campus-wide recognition.

Dr. Hill's Religion 93 is such a course. (cw)

Lenoir Hall And Liberals

Serving Girls Don't Care?

To the Editors:

Since controversy in the TAR HEEL has once again turned to Lenoir Hall, we would like to get in our two cents worth. The quality of the service is unbelievably poor, although we grant that one would not be too enthusiastic about rendering service while working slave wages and slave hours. But, since when does the paying customer not have the right to choose a good slice of meat over a burnt, gangrenous en piece? It's ridiculous!

Mr. Monroe, one of Lenoir's floor-walkers, frankly admitted that the serving girls culdn't care less whether the customer gets a shoe tongue or the slice of meat he orders. (Our wording is somewhat stronger than his.) But, since the girls are instructed to give the customer what he asks for, we can't understand why the slovenly ones aren't fired, as in most establishments would be the fate of recalcitrant employees.

Of course, everyone realizes that the reason for the unconcern about the customer lies in Lenoir Hall's near-monopoly on hamburger (one for 25c) a la gristle, fish patties a la sewer trout and "beef stew" a la blubber. Lenoir need not worry about the quality of the food either, for it is a matter of eat it or go broke at one of Chapel Hill's famous greasy spoons. The captive gourmet need not applaud.

Wouldn't it be nice if the serving girls really gave a damn and that we could count on their sentiments lying in this lyric:

A student dining said "phew"
At finding a large mouse in his stew.
The serving girls ran out,
Said, "Don't shout and wave it about,
Or the others will be wanting one too."

Adding Insult To Injury . . .

To the Editors:

As a former employee of Lenoir Hall, I would like to confirm what W. M. Helmes and "THE PHANTOM" stated in Sunday's TAR HEEL about working conditions in Lenoir Hall. However, I would like to add an "eensy-weensy" complaint of my own. The already under-paid busboys are paid in Lenoir's own meal tickets which can be redeemed nowhere else but Lenoir Hall. Isn't that adding insult to injury? Of course, the boys might be lucky enough, in redeeming their meal tickets for "food," to find some valuable treasure such as finger nails, Blackjack chewing gum, buttons, long black hairs, shoe strings, roaches, or cigarette butts beneath their rusted lettuce leaves. But still, even these fringe benefits are not adequate compensation.

Hall Is Weak, Insignificant

To the Editors:

One wonders what the hell other than professional envy is bothering campus guitarist Mike Hall who (Saturday in the Tar Heel) took issue with Joan Baez as a singer of songs of social protest. He doesn't like Pete Seeger playing the role of Daddy Warbucks to her.

What can one say to a cat with views like his? Nothing that would do any good. It's obvious that he rather missed the point in his study of folksinging through the years. What does he think to be his intent as folksinger? TO ENTERTAIN! Well, that may be. There have been some singers who did very well with that. But one can aim higher in their art and I am one of the many who are grateful to Miss Baez, and to Mr. Seeger, for picking up the tab that so many like Mr. Hall seem too weak and insignificant to carry.

'. . .Too Much Of Clotfelter'

To the Editors:

I looked forward to the prospect of having two co-editors for the DTH as it might be different and bring interesting results. However, after looking the result over for the first two weeks I find an unfortunate trend has developed, whether planned or not, in the area of the paper that brings the editors out most clearly: the editorials. Every editorial about national and international affairs is written by '(jc)', the rest, mainly more trivial matters about the University, are written by '(cw)'. May I suggest that this procedure be switched around for a while, to see what Mr. Wrye has to say about national affairs, and to escape for a while the one-sided approach offered by Mr. Clotfelter's liberalism. Or its it that liberalism has been so enfused in the Carolina way of thinking that it is akin to a revolution to have anything but the left of the left have a voice in a semi-official capacity? Let's give Mr. Wrye a chance.

North Should Help 'F Rides'

To the Editors,

The intemperate reaction of some Northern groups to Southern efforts to send "Freedom buses" North well illustrates the arrogant hypocrisy with which they usually deal with race questions (in the South).

No one has yet pointed out exactly what is wrong with the plan. It is in the best American tradition for those who are not prospering where they are to light out for new territory

Why aren't these Northerners, who know all the answers, willing to import the problem where they can deal with it, instead of exporting the solution to those who don't want it?

Maybe they are not so concerned about the Negro after all (unless he is in the South). Obviously brotherhood is much easier in Hyannis Port where there is no one to integrate than in New Orleans where there is 30-40 per cent of the population. There is an elementary justice to this fact which thousands of vocal South-haters have not yet allowed to penetrate their bigotry.

Teddy Kennedy's, Hary Golden's, and the Urban League's gestures to individual imigrants are not likely to help the thousands who leave the South every day on their own and head for the ghettos of Northern cities.

If the things that are commonly believed in their circles are true, it would appear to be their moral duty to hasten the migration from the South, instead of hinder it. Aren't they the ones who are exploiting human misery.

Southerners gleefully await the day when race will no longer be their problem, but will convulse the Heartland of Brotherhood.

—CLYDE WILSON

'Liberal Papers' Are Extremist

To the Editors,

One of the favorite pastimes of the Liberal Establishment, and indeed o fpetty Liberals also, has been the constant attempt to discredit the Conservative movement with continuous cries of "extremism" and "irresponsibility." It is rare indeed to find a Liberal nowadays who seeks to battle the Conservative trend on its own ground; i.e., a logical and reasonable appeal to the rational mind of man.

We often hear Liberals dictate to the country exactly what "responsible conservatism" should contain. It is interesting to note that if all conservatives espoused only the convictions set up for them as "responsible conservatives" by their Liberal opponents, we would all be in the left wing. Conservatives have refrained from defining what "responsible liberalism' 'involves. We feel that given the facts and the use of a little common sense, most people are capable of figuring that out for themselves. Herein, we present a few facts and leave the conclusions about "responsibility" and "extremism" in America's Left Wing to you.

A recent book entitled "The Liberal Papers" was published under the auspices of a group of 12 Democratic Congressmen established in 1960 as the "Liberal Project." The purpose of the 12 essays, according to Rep. James Roosevelt (D-Calif.), who wrote the introduction, is to "formulate a program that is responsive to our obligations as a great power." Among the obligations of a great power, according to the book are:

—To permit the Soviet Union to "plug in" on the DEW (distant early warning) radar defense line to permit the Russians to be warned in the case of an American attack.

—Immediate recognition of Red China and "recognizing Peking's unquestionably valid claim to the offshore islands" of Quemoy and Matsu, and admission of the Peking regime to the U.N.

Additional diplomatic recognition and admission to the United Nations of East Germany, North Korea, and North Vietnam, all, you understand, for "stabilization of international relations."

—To offer economic aid to any Communist country which requests it in order to "make a powerful impression" on other nations, and "liberalize" all trade policies with Communist nations.

In addition to such specific proposals for action, the "great power" will certainly understand and recognize certain facts. Among these facts of international life:

—That "West Berlin is of no particular value" except for the incidental moral obligation incurred there.

—That "there is nothing more Communist about Castro Cuba than there is democratic about Franco Spain."

That "atomic testing is not vital to American military security."

—That Red China would have gladly "continued to press quietly for its interpretation" of the Indian border dispute, had it not been for the revolt in Tibet, which was a purely "internal" Chinese affair.

And last but certainly not least is a statement (contained in 'The Liberal Papers") by noted Harvard sociologist, David Riesman that if you consider yourself a "decent American" who is "humane" enough to prefer peace to an "egocentric national honor," no doubt you find it "increasingly difficult to be genuinely anti-Communist.

"Extremism," we've been told, is a trait indigenous to the Right. Documents such as "The Liberal Papers" seem to belie such statements. And people who live in glass houses . . . .

A Pixie Girl:

Afternoon of a pixie sweetheart. An interview with Joan Bayou:

Pretty pixie Joan Bayou stood in the lobby of the Carolina Inn, kicking her shoes into a basket set at the other end of the room.

"Hello Miss Bayou" we replied gruffly. (We had come for an interview and were all business.)

"What should a folk song do, Miss Bayou?"

"Well" she said, her pixie eyes lighting up, "that's a very good question, golly how smart the students here are. Wow that is a tough one but I think that a folk song should start quietly and continue until a wild orgy consumes the entire audience."

To emphasize this point she leaped high into the air sending her old mountain guitar crashing into a five thousand dollar Victorian chandelier.

One of us helped her up while the other restrained the manager of the Inn.

"We understand that your tour with the Greenbriar boys is getting rave notices," we chuckled.

"Well me," she squealed, elbows akimbo but always the pixie, "they like me!"

You had to love her for her sincerity. This was an artist!

"May we ask a few more questions?" we questioned squealing with delight.

"Dealers choice!" our pixie pal piped, but make it fast, time is money in professional folk singing."

"Who are your favorite performers Miss Bayou?"

"Well," she said in a serious tone, "I like the old mountain fiddle of Lester Lanin. Les played at my debutante ball. Great guy. Of course he can't touch me for authentic professional folk singing, but that's show biz."

What a Chick! There was nothing more to say.

"It was a lovely interview Miss Bayou" we called.

A hint of pixie charm came to her wonderful Waif eyes.

"So's your goddam old lady" was her reply. What a Chick!

Liberal Offers Books

(From the National Review:)

A Liberal, having read our "Liberal Bookshelf" (February 27), offers a rebuttal, a CONSERVATIVE BOOKSHELF.

—"I Was an ADA for the FBI." by Herbert A. Goldbrick. One man's deadly masquerade as an agent of the Liberal Conspiracy, and how he lived to tell about it. And tell about it. And tell about it.

"Why We Are Losing in the Peloponnese," by the Old Oligarch. Skousen translation. A classic study o fthe No-Win Policy, especially significant in light of current events.

—"Brainwashing in Our TB Sanitariums," by Dr. J. B. Johns. A daring expose of the One-Worlders in White Coats who actively seek to overthrow Conspicious Consumption.

—"From Joyce Jordan's Diary," a girl interne's reveoling account of Communist cut-ups and government cover-ups in the Health, Education and Welfare Department during the disastrous Roosevelt years.

—"A Businessman Looks at Liberalism," by Oliver ("Daddy") Warbucks. A simple Man of the People casts a damning light on the subversive bleeding-hearts who seek to destroy his six-billion-dollar munitions empire.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Tilden's .339 Tops UNC Batting

By ED DUPREE

Winning was indeed a problem for this year's UNC baseball team. The team batting average of .253 and the pitcher's earned run mark of 4.80, coupled with 31 infield errors in 22 games were a few reasons for the 4-10 ACC record and 8-14 overall mark.

For the first time in recent years the Tar Heels, coached by Walt Rabb, didn't have a man high in the ACC batting category. Buddy Tilden's .339 mark paced the team. The stocky left-fielder appeared in 18 games, went 21 for 62, and hit two of the team's seven homers.

Larry Neal and Paul Swing, both seniors, followed Tilden in the batting race. Neal hit .326 on 28 hits in 86 at-bats and also hit two home runs. Swing had 28 hits in 89 at-bats for a .315 mark.

Neal was the top RBI man on the team, driving in 16 team mates. Swing had 12 RBIs and Heyward Hull, on 19 for 75, a .253 batter, drove in 11.

Hull, Swing, and Dave Pope each hit one homer to account for the team total.

Other averages for the regulars and "semi-regulars" are Jud Spainhour .282 (11-39), Bernie Isgett .273 (12-44), Pope .241 (7-29), Cronin Byrd .226 (12-53), Len Dellolio .224 (15-67), and Jim Speight .217 (10-46).

Jack Rees and Bob Wacker with 2-1 records were the only pitchers with winning records. Bobby Cox was 2-3, while no other hurlers picked up more than one win.

Spencer Willard had a 1.59 ERA, but pitched only 5 2/3 innings. Actually the top man in the category was Rees with 3.38. Dave Murr, though losing four of five games, had a 3.70 mark.

Murr led the team in strikeouts with 32 in 56 innings, but Andy Billesdon, with a 1-2 record, struck out 27 in 27 2/3 frames on the mound.

Dellolio, the dependable fielder at first base, was in 206 plays without making an error for a perfect fielding mark.

Alexander Is Victor

By John Montague

Buddy Baldwin pitched and batted Alexander to a 2-0 triumph over Stacy in the Dorm Softball finals Tuesday afternoon, and led his champions against the Grad winner yesterday afternoon in the All-Campus Semi-Finals.

A freak home run by Baldwin was the difference in a brilliant pitching dual which saw Dudley Pace on the mound for Stacy. The two teams had advanced into Tuesday's finale on the strength of semi-finals victories Monday. Pace tossed a 4-hitter at Avery as Stacy chalked up a 6-1 win, and Alexander scored a 3-2 decision over Joyner with a run in the final frame. The Strikeouts from Alexander had dropped Mangum, 8-5, in a quarter-final contest the same day, coming back to score three in the last inning after blowing a 5-run first inning lead.

The Delta Sig Rogues came up with eight big runs in the 6th inning to capture the Frat White championship from the Phi Delts, 9-8. The brother Blue team from Delta Sig made it a clean sweep, battling back from a five-run deficit to down Kappa Sig, 6-5, in the Frat Blue finals. The two teams met yesterday afternoon for the Frat Championship, the winner to go against the Dorm-Grad victor in the All-Campus Finals, this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Missing Sculpture Returned

A piece of sculpture reported missing a week and a half ago was found leaning against the door to the upstairs Art Gallery on Franklin Street at 1:00 o'clock Thursday morning.

Bill Norton, a senior at UNC, found the piece leaning against the rear door of the Gallery. He has a studio behind the Gallery.

Norton said that he ran with the piece to the police station to report that it had been returned. The police returned it to the Gallery later Thursday morning.

The piece, which is called "Trio," is by Robert Shannon, a well-known Chapel Hill artist. It stands 38 inches high and is constructed of welded steel. It was reported missing from the storage room of the gallery a week and a half ago.

Miss Jane Hasland, one of the operators of the Gallery, said that the price of the piece would go up from $200 to around $300 now that it had gained notoriety.

Chapel Hill police said Thursday afternoon that they were still tracking down a lead as to who removed the sculpture. There was no indication as to whether or not the robbery was tied in with the recent theft of a $1,500 piece of sculpture from State College.

Shannon's "Trio" was the second piece of metal sculpture to be stolen from Chapel Hill in recent weeks. The first, Mike Hall's "Bug," was stolen from Merritt's Service Station and returned shortly afterwards.

Mao Tze-Tung Is Di-Phi Choice For Man Of Year

Mao Tze-Tung

Mao Tse-Tung was named Di-Phi Man of the Year Wednesday night, a selection that annually goes to the man who in the estimation of the Di-Phi has most influenced the course of the world during the previous year.

Others nominated for the honor were Dag Hammerskjold, John F. Kennedy, Milovan Djilas, Linus Pauling and Edward Teller.

Arthur Hayes was re-elected Di-Phi president in an executive session which met after the regular session. Other officers elected were Nat Dean, president pro-tempore; Bob Bullard, sergeant-at-arms; Hank Patterson, parliamentarian; Julia Steanson, clerk; Bill Phillips, treasurer.

A resolution asking for the admission of women to the freshman and sophomore classes of the General College was introduced for debate in the fall.

Marines Set Up Bases Close To Laos Border

British Announce They Will Send Men If Needed

BANGKOK (UPI) — Eighteen hundred U. S. Marines trained for jungle warfare set up bases within striking range of the Laos-Thailand border Thursday, joining 1,000 U. S. troops, Air Force planes and the 80,008-man Thai army in the job of containing Laos pro-Communist rebels.

Britain announced it was ready to dispatch military forces to Thailand and had alerted an Air Force Squadron in Singapore. Australia and New Zealand said they woul send in token forces if asked and Pakistan and the Philippines were preparing to do the same.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy said yesterday the United States is counting on the three princes of Laos to reach politicad agreement which would avoid a "shooting war in the jungles ozf Asia."

Eelsewhere Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said yesterday that U. S. actions in Southeast Asia are "very bad" and are complicating the situation there.

Gromyko also repeated previous Soviet warnings that Russians will resume their nucle ar testin. But he did not say when the tests would begin.

The U. S. Defense Department said in Washington a total of 5,000 U. S. combat troops would be used in Thailand to prevent direct invasion by sealing off the border and to help the Thais combat Communist infiltration. So far no such penetration has been reported.

In Laos itself the fighting appeared at a standstill and indications were the three rival princes of Laos—right-wing Premier Boun Oum, neutralist Souvanna Phouma and pro-Communist leader Souphanouvong—might meet soon to try to form a coalition government that could end the war.

Marines Move Near Border

One thoustand U. S. Army men already were in Thailand at start of the present crisis. The 1,800 Marines armed and ready for battle landed early Thursday by helicopters and assault ships and sped through the streets of Saigon and then flew off to the "front."

The Marines, members of the 3rd battalion, 9th Regiment, 3rd Marine Division, began setting up tents under full field conditions in a dry plaeeau area near Nqng Han, about 20 miles east of Udorn. Udorn is 400 miles from Bangkok and about 35 miles south of Vientiane, Laos.

The American troops will be deployed in a horseshoe-shaped area with a 500-mile front on the Mekong River border. They brought with them tanks, 105 millimeter howitzers, tank-like track vehicles armed with recoilless weapons.

Newman, Thibaut Named Distinguished Professors

Two new Alumni Distinguished Professors were named Monday by Chancellor William B. Aycock, bringing the total number of these professorships to eight.

The two new professors are John W. Thibaut, professor and chairman of the Department of Psychology, and William S. Newman, professor of music.

JOHN W. THIBAUT

WILLIAM S. NEWMAN

A former undergraduate student at UNC, Dr. Thibaut received a B. A. degree in philosophy in 1939. He has a Ph.D. degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He has taught at Harvard, Boston University, the University of Michigan, and came to UNC in 1953.

Dr. Thibaut, along with Professor Harold H. Kelley of the University of Minnesota, is the author of a book entitled "The Social Psychology of Groups," a study of social interaction and group functioning. This book was published in 1959, and was selected as one of the "fifty" outstanding books of the year, chosen by the Brunner Book Bulletin in 1961. This bulletin annually picks out the best professional books published in areas of psychology, neurology, psychoanalysis and psychiatry.

In 1954, Dr. Thibaut was named chairman of the Organizational Research Group of the Institute for Research in Social Sciences at UNC, and director of the "Small Group Laboratory," engaged chiefly in behavioral studies.

Dr. Thibaut has served as a member of the editorial boards of "Sociometry," a journal published by the American Sociological Association, and of the "Journal of Personality." In 1961, he was elected chairman of the Advisory Committee on Psychology to the Veteran's Administration in the southeastern states.

Professor William Newman joined the UNC staff in 1946, after separation from Army Air Forces Intelligence, and has been teaching courses in music appreciation, music history and theory, and graduate musicology since then. He has also served as chairman of instruction in piano. He is internationally recognized as an author, pianist and teacher. He has taught at Western Reserve University, and during summers, at Bennington College, University of Colortado, Columbia University and the Juillard School of Music.

Dr. Newman has centered much of his research around the history and present status of the sonata. He is currently writing "A History of the Sonata Idea," of which the first volume, "The Sonata in the Baroque Era," was published in 1959 by the UNC Press. The remaining three volumes will cover the classic, romantic and modern eras of the sonata.

One of Dr. Newman's most successful activities is his book, "Understanding Music," published by Harper and Brothers, and revised in 1961. This book is a text at UNC. Dr. Newman has also conducted a successful television course on WUNC-TV, Channel 4, on which he taught music appreciation.

Dr. Newman has appeared as soloist with numerous orchestras including the Cleveland and N.B.C. symphony orchestras. He has given solo recitals in cities from coast to coast including Washington, New York, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis,

Sanders To Head Institute

John Lassiter Sanders, associate professor and an assistant director in the Institute of Government, will become the new director of the Institute on July 1, Chancellor William B. Aycock announced recently, with the approval of University President William C. Friday and the Board of Trustees.

Professor Sanders succeeds Albert Coates, who retires July 1 to devote his time to the study and teaching of law.

A native of Four Oaks, Professor Sanders became a member of the UNC faculty in September, 1956, as an assistant director at the Institute. From 1954-55, he served as a law clerk to Judge John J. Parker, chief judge, U. S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. During 1955-56 he served as an associate in the law firm of Manning and Fulton in Raleigh.

Professor Sanders attended Four Oaks High School. He received a B.A. degree in history from UNC in 1950. During 1950-51, he was a graduate student in history at UNC. He received a J. D. degree from the UNC School of Law in 1954.

His research areas are in the field of state government and administration, performed for state agencies, study commissions, and the General Assembly. He has been in charge of the Institute's services area research staff to (1) the Commission on Reorganization of State Government 1957-61; (2) to the General Assembly of 1961.

Professor Sanders was on leave during 1961-62 to serve as secretary to the Governor's Commission on Education Beyond the High School.

DORM ROOMS

The Housing Office has announced that all dorm rooms must be vacated at the end of the examination period, May 31. Persons remaining for summer school must move to their assigned rooms by the end of the exam period.

Degree candidates may remain in their rooms through June 4.

Allen Pleased With Committee Turnout

"This year's substantially increased turnout for Student Government committee positions is a reflection of the new interest being taken by all students in their government," said President Inman Allen yesterday.

Allen's comments come at the end of three weeks of committee appointments which were completed last night with Student Legislature's approval of his appointees.

Appreciation was extended to the 450 who applied for positions, and Allen said that all applications would be kept on file. He estimated that 250 appointments had been made, and said that additional openings would be available next year.

"Those who did not get up for an interview this spring and those who wish to re-express their interest should apply when innouncement is made this fall," Allen said.

The student body president expressed thanks "to the many people who worked in the committee membership drive." He cited particularly the publicity work done by Communications Committee Chairman Bob Spearman.

University Press Is Presented Award

The University Press has received the "Fifty Books of the Year," 1961, award for the book entitled "The Poems of Charles Hansford" which it published for the Virginia Historical Society last October.

The "Fifty Books of the Year" award, the highest honor in the graphic arts industry, is presented annually by The American Institute of Graphic Arts for the 50 best designed, printed, and bound books published in the United States. More than 800 entries were submitted for the current award.

The Fifty Books of the Year are now on exhibit in New York City, Boston and Washington, D. C., and at the 4th International Book Fair in Tokyo.

'Zero,' New Literary Magazine, Slated For Distribution Soon

ZERO, a new literary magazine, will appear on campus this weekend. Published by the North American Zeropological Society, the oddly shaped magazine promises to "provide an identifiable forum for the free exchange of cecacious . . . ideas."

Interviewd in the campus office of the NAZS, editor Myles Eric Ludwig explained that "the editors of ZERO believe that there is room in Chapel Hill for a new publication. You see, we want to establish a new market for those writers who feel that the two existent publications do not satisfy their stylistic needs.

"I'm pretty excited about this first issue. Bart Weinhirsh has done a wonderfully simple cover for us, and we've got a tremendously profound short story by Peter L. Van Riper. A. J. Winkelman has provided us with one of the finest short poetic statements I've seen in a long while. But perhaps the highlight of the issue is a crossword puzzle for the intellectual's intellectual."

ACADEMIC AFFAIRS

The Academic Affairs Committee will meet today at 2 p.m. in the Grail Room in Graham Memorial.

'99.4 Pct. Of BA Faculty Use Kleeno'

A product "Kleeno" was heralded. "The favorite soap of 99 44/100% of the faculty of the School of Business Administration," someone wrote.

The students in "B.A. 199, Management Simulation" were having fun. Kleeno is one of their three soap products in a detergent company. They are in competition with two other teams in the business school. The three companies manufacture soap, stockpile raw materials, distribute soap, sell it, advertise it, invest in plant, employ workers, pay dividends, do all the many things that must be done in a business.

The students do have a good time, but the enjoyment is just a by-product. The management "game" requires hard work, and students have to call upon all the knowledge of business administration they have learned in four years at Chapel Hill. They must be diligent, painstaking, and put in many hours of laborious detailed work.

With the aid of the Univac 1105, giant electronic computer, they find out their gains and losses weekly, and are informed of their standing in contrast to competing companies. The game is based on a model originally developed by Carnegie Tech. Three teams of undergraduates participate.

Although the students made many good decisions, based on sound economic facts, and improved from week to week, it was significant that when they reviewed their actions, they dwelt upon some of their mistakes and what they would do about it if they had another chance. They were aiming at perfection.

A second management simulation was organized in February for students in the Master of Business Administration program, working towards the MBA degree. The graduate students report equal enthusiasm and benefit derived from the competition. There are three teams in the MBA group, too; and the contest between the companies is fierce, though friendly.

The students on rival teams kid one another about the competition. "How about buying you out?" one company president may say.

Company members are careful not to let any remarks slip by that the competitors might use. They go to great lengths to prevent any competing company members from getting a tip on their possible actions in sales, or investments or new product development.

One management game member summed up his impressions and got a nod from others. "I have learned a lot about compromise," he said. "Some time I would go into a meeting and was determined to push some new idea I had. Then I heard what all the others said, in finance, in production, in sales, and I found that we lacked coordination. Communication between managers is important, one of the most important lessons I have learned."

Another thing they learned: summertime is the best season for selling soap. More washing goes on in hot weather.

Business men of the future have learned much in the computer-programmed management simulation in the UNC Business School, both in the way they have bested one another in certain areas of competition, and in mistakes they are resolved not to repeat.

IT MUST BE SUMMER

A Warm Day, Chicks & Watermelons

A fair showing of the fair sex turned out for the CWC and Panhel-sponsored watermelon feast yesterday afternoon on McIver lawn.

While eating watermelon, chatting, playing bridge on the grass and even playing ouija board, the co-eds were entertained by the folk songs of Dan Brock, assisted by Guerry Matthews.

"No men allowed" was the original rule concerning the Watermelon Feast; however, there were a number of Carolina Gentlemen present helping the co-eds cut the watermelons, and several others watched the party from the edge of the lawn, while enjoying slices of watermelon thoughtfully sneaked over to them by the girls.

Local Monopoly

The American press is in a state of localized monopoly. Around the country most of the competitive newspapers which exist are dying and on the verge of being bought out. More than 1,450 U. S. cities have at least one daily newspaper, but less than 60 of these have competitive dailies. And only 24 cities have papers in competition at the same time of day (morning—afternoon.) The public continues to buy its home-town papers, knowing they are the only local papers which could be bought.

* * *

At first glance the layman would expect that the free enterprise system could take proper care of all monopoly problems — whenever a newspaper area becomes overly lucrative, another paper sets up shop and evens out the profits.

But rising labor, production and circulation costs discourage newspaper ownership. The chain magnates of the past eras — Hearst, Scripps, Col. McCormick — are all dead now and their survivors have no intention of risking any money by going into a (shudder) competitive situation.

Also responsible for cutting into the number of independent papers are these factors: competition from advertisers for larger circulations and less duplication of readership; and the decline of openly partisan news reporting, when the paper was under the ownership of an industrial company, a political party, or the like.

Newspaper publishers have come to realize, according to Washington correspondent Ben Bagdikian, "There is no longer any second place in community newspaper publishing."

One of the most disturbing aspects of the monopolistic newspaper condition is the resultant poor foreign coverage.

Foreign news has become an underplayed portion of the average American newspaper, and what is carried is often of trivial travelogue-quality.

The Associated Press, United Press International and several major newspapers retain foreign offices. But often these are manned either by native "stringers" who are subject to the (often, dictatorial) censorship laws of the foreign country, or by Americans who don't know the native language or the country's history and political situation (and who thus are suckers for government lies and sham.)

The overwhelming majority of the world's nations have no American newsmen. (The U. S. public was understandably confused over the sloppy news reports coming from Equador after the riots there last year. Why—there wasn't a single U. S. journalist there prior to the riots.)

According to author A. J. Liebling, one formula which newspapers have fallen back on for foreign news is " 'Man go to church, good man, no lie. Man, not go to church, bad, lie.' Ergo 'Franco, Salazar, Adenauer, Christian Democrats, good, truthful. Communists, bad, whatever they say lie.' In handling any story outside the United States, then, it is necessarily true, and you have solved your problem in reporting without trouble or expense."

(jc)

(This is the second of a three-part editorial series on the American press.)

Edits . . . (cw)

On Thursday the DTH carried a letter from a student in which one of the editors was asked to give more of his attention to national and international affairs. He (the editor) was criticized for writing only about trivial affairs of the University. It might be apropos at this time to consider just what is the function of a student editor on a campus newspaper.

* * *

Certainly any individual aspiring to serve as Tar Heel editor ought to have views on world situations; there ought to be an awareness, on his part, of the problems with which so far as the editor sees the relevance of international vents for his campus, he ought to comment freely on the issues involved.

It is at times clever, and indeed enjoyable, to expound our world views. The temptation is to scream for freedom, tell the campus what is right, and preach vital concern for world problems. It is hard to resist preaching. We all like to argue the major issues of the day, but the screaming of opinion ought to be done in the proper place . . . that is, over a beer.

Obviously, there are innumerable incidents that happen daily, endlessly, the world over; and in a typically collegiate style an editor has his feelings about these events. But the obligation is to resist the "over-a-beer" sweeping solutions, and to demonstrate the reflection of these major issues on the local campus. The editor can best accomplish this by making his editorial comment (trivial as it may be) on matters about which he is more informed and with which he is more familiar.

The inclination is to scream, editorially, about bearded insanity that prowls the streets of Havana, or to moan about ignorance-with-a-nose that dominates so many frogs; it is hard to resist vomiting into the edit column the sickness that comes from reading of the activities of the OAS. For these are strongly felt opinions of an aspiring student editor.

But editors still have an obligation to confront the issues, be they trivial or practically non-existent, that arise on their own campus.

And if it appears that the best way to get a rise out of our student body is to comment on noise in Memorial Hall or to bemoan classroom apathy, then the editor is obligated to get them thinking, somehow, through these comments, about the time-worn issues and universal principles that may be involved in these—University matters. Race To The Moon

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Nikita Khrushchev seems to be getting skittish about racing the U. S. to the moon.

There are several reasons, why the Soviet Premier is beginning to talk plaintively about the "burdens" of space exploration and to suggest that he would like to call off the contest and make the whole thing a joint enterprise:

Both a U.S.S.R. and a U.S.A. satellite now lie alongside each other in the dust on the dark side of the moon. Another American Ranger craft will make the 238,857-mile journey this year. We now have the power and the accuracy to land.

The crucial Soviet advantage has been the more powerful thrust of Soviet rocketry. The gap between Soviet rocket thrust and U. S. rocket thrust is being steadily closed. The Soviets are still ahead. Cosmonaut Titov has disclosed that the thrust which put him into his 25-hour orbit was 1.3 million pounds. The rocket which boosted Astronaut Glenn into his five-hour flight had 360,000 pounds thrust. As yet neither side has the power to orbit and land a manned spacecraft on the moon. But the powerful U. S. Saturn rocket, twice successfully tested, has a 1,500,000-pound thrust potential. In the judgment of American space experts the prospects of our overtaking the Soviets in thrust capacity is good.

For more than a year a manned journey to the moon and back has had first priority among all our space projects. We have put this foremost because all our technicians concluded that this was the area in which we could be first. The Government has already committed $400 million to it. The total cost, including rocketry and support facilities, will not be less than $20 billion, may reach nearer $40 billion. No wonder Mr. Khrushchev wryly remarked to Gardner Cowles, editor of Look magazine, recently: "It will cost a lot to fly to the moon and back. We would welcome a joint project by the Soviet Union and the United States."

We are both racing furiously, but Mr. K is showing some signs of running out of breath. Maybe this is only a maneuver to see if he can persuade the U. S. to slow down its efforts.

I doubt if he will succeed. Dr. Wernher von Braun, director of the Space Flight Center at at Huntsville, Ala., and one of the world's leading rocket authorities, said a few days ago: "We have the capacity to be the first to the moon; therefore we must be first." The word from Brainerd Holmes, the over-all chief of manned space flight for NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration) is: "This Nation cannot afford to lose by default at something it has the technology to do."

1970 is the farthest target date for the moon landing. Some believe that it can be done earlier. Next year the United States will put two men in orbit for periods up to seven days to get additional information on radiation and weightlessness. Following these tests, we will experiment with a technique which may reduce the time to make a moon landing. This will be the "rendezvous" which a crew of astronauts will hitch themselves to another vericle already in outer space. One Saturn rocket, which will ultimately have a thrust of more than seven million pounds, will boost a translunar engine into orbit. A second Saturn will send up the crew, plus the lunar landing and return takeoff equipment. The crewmen would guide their craft to the other vehicle through space carrying the engine to propel them the rest of the way to the moon.

"Project Rendezvous" could prove impracticable. If it does, NASA is readying a rocket of 12 million pounds thrust capable of lifting crew, vehicle, and all to its lunar target.

If Mr. Khrushchev wants to call off the race and combine with the U. S., President Kennedy will examine the proposal carefully. Judging from past experience, I would expect that by the time we could reach such an agreement one or the other of us would be on the moon—waiting to sign it.

Grows Like Magic

Give Books—Korea

To The Editors:

I strongly urge students to contribute to the gift of drama books to the students of Dong Kook University in Korea (see story, page 1.) This is a great opportunity for us to express our concern for our counterparts in Korea, and to help spread the democratic and libertarian ideas which are embedded in the culture of the Western world.

To give enough to buy a single paperbook book is not hard for most of us. Many are available for fifty cents or a dollar. And what does this amount mean to us? Two or three beers, a copy of Playboy or Rogue, a movie that is more likely to be a pain than a pleasure, a couple of student specials in Lenoir Hall (of which the same can sometimes be said), or a copy of Vogue or the like.

One of these books will mean more to more persons at Dong Kook than any of the other items is likely to mean to any one of us. These books will be our gift to the faculty and students at Dong Kook. They will be important articles in Korea.

Let us be generous when we stop at the table in Lenoir Hall lobby to contribute.

Letters To The Editor

M. L. Wilson On 'Black Monday'

More light has been shed upon the iniquitous Black Monday desegregation decision of the United States Supreme Court.

The February 5 issue of "U. S. News and World Report" contained a speech by Dr. Alfred H. Kelly, professor of history at Wayne State University of Detroit. Kelly was engaged by NAACP chief counsel Thurgood Marshall "to prepare a research paper on the intent of the framers of the Fourteenth Amendment with respect to the constitutionality of racially segregated schools."

Kelly accepted. He found that the "Globe" in 1866 had a great deal to say about school segregation. "Unhappily, from the NAACP's point of view, most of what happened there at first blush looked rather decidedly bad . . . ."

The original Civil Rights bill had been so broadly worded that it would have struck down and outlawed entirely all state segregation laws.

But the measure had been bitterly attacked on grounds that Congress utterly lacked the power to legislate against segregation in the states. Such an admission from a Congress that interpreted its power so broadly that it forced amendments upon the South at the point of bayonets!

The attack sent the bill back to the House Judiciary Committee, where the disputed ambiguous language was stricken out.

It was Marshall's view that since the Court had asked that the final arguments concern themselves with "legislative intent," the Court would pounce upon ANYTHING that could remotely justify a desegregation ruling.

The result of this study was, as Kelly put it, "not the historian's discovery of the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the Truth."

"It is not that we were engaged in formulating lies . . . But we were using facts, emphasizing facts, bearing down on facts, sliding off facts, quietly ignoring facts, and above all, interpreting facts in a way to do what Marshall said we had to do—'get by those boys (The Court) down there.' "

When the argument, in grossly distorted form, was presented to the Warren Court, it was seized upon by that political and soft-headed aggregate.

Warren noted briefly that there was "general disagreement" among opposing counsel and historians about what the Amendment as of 1866 had been intended to mean. He thereupon proceeded to junk the historical approach entirely and settle the question of segregation on straight-out sociological grounds (information that had been supplied by socialists — foreign and domestic — with scores of Communist front affiliations—including some under the employ of the NAACP).

The Court elected, as William D. Workman aptly put it, "to wander afield into sociological morass, taking cover and refuge amidst verbiage which astounded the lawyer, horrified the white Southerner, and gratified the politically-potent NAACP."

If there was "general disagreement" on the Amendment's intent, there should not have been. It is a matter of record that the same Congress which drew up the Fourteenth Amendment refused the readmission of South Carolina to the Union on the grounds that its Constitution (drawn up by the carpetbag governments, of course) provided for racially mixed schools!

South Carolina was not readmitted to the Union until that provision was removed from its Constitution. It should further be noted that this same Congress set up segregated schools in the District of Columbia.

The Warren Court thus made a travesty of law. Having asked for arguments on "legislative intent," it showed a bizarre ignorance of history and a fine disdain for the intent of legislation.

The blunder resulted in upheaval, political manipulation of minority blocs, and set racial amity back a generation.

The Court executed one of the most mangled hatchet jobs ever committed upon the Constitution: that document and the people supposedly governed by it still bleed from the stabbing.

Collegiates And Spread Of Communism

You, the college student, whether you realize it or not, are the rich earth which the Communist conspirator hopes to till. Your mind is the soil in which he hopes to implant alien seed. Your subsequent acts are the products whose growth he strives to direct. The harvest which he seeks is the destruction of our democratic processes of government.

What then, can you, the college student do about Communism? Awareness of danger is the first requisite to combating that danger. First, then, know your enemy. That necessitates learning what Communism really means, not what its apologists say it means.

How is one to separate truth from propaganda? I can only say, "Set yourself the task of developing a free mind — a mind which seeks facts." Such a mind accepts neither the minority version nor the majority version; it seeks and considers evidence. It is not satisfied until irrefutable evidence points out the road which leads toward irrevocable truth.

* * *

When you have learned everything possible from the experience of those who have escaped from "Utopia"—where they learned the bitter difference between promise and reality—then steep yourself in the history of America. Go back to the heart and soul of its origins. Read the documents, books, and letters of the immortal giants who, with faith and prayer and idealism, shaped and molded a form of government which is a continuous expression of faith in the individual. There you will learn that true Americanism is an act of faith—an overwhelming God's help, is an intelligent being belief that individual man, with capable of self-rule. That faith is essential to the continuance of the American form of government.

In its simplest terms, the struggle lies between the spiritual and material. The Communist seeks to rob you of your birthright by destroying your faith in our republic. The mess of pottage which he offers intempting the weak, the shallow, and the shortsighted, is the illusory promise of material security— the security of the slave. The Communist offensive must never be underestimated for that promise has seduced millions of people and the ultimate objective is to swing all the peoples of the globe into the Communist orbit. Like the Confidence man, therefore, the Communist labors incessantly to get his victims in the proper frame of mind—to "set up the suckers for the kill." Diligently and indiscriminately he pours his corrosive acid of disunity, hatred, and discontent over the worker, the professor, the artisan, the student.

* * *

What can you do to combat it?

Communism is the antithesis of Christianity. To endorse Communism is to deny all the tenets of Christianity — the great teachings which have guided our civilization long, upward climb toward the during the dark ages of mankind's light. You can be Christian.

Communism is immoral. The Communist teaches that the end justifies the means. You can live positively. You can promote the dynamic morality which is essential to the preservation of a free nation.

Communism seeks "fronts". Don't provide protective coloring for subversive organizations by being an indiscriminate "joiner." Ascertain the ultimate objectives of groups which mouth platitudes and espouse causes before you lend the strength of your name to their petitions and their rolls.

Communism feeds on ignorance. Be informed. Never yield to the disastrous luxury of emotional or "fuzzy" thinking. Stick to the facts.

Communism seeks change. It would make the state the master and the individual the slave. You, therefore, need to gain a true understanding of the republic in which the individual is the key. Our form of government is only as good as the people in it. Consequently, it cannot be perfect. But active and intelligent effort has made it function in such a manner that it has been the marvel and the envy of the world. You hold the future in your hands. Be a crusader for democracy.

Communism lives on lies. It corrodes honor, destroys integrity, and subverts all the qualities which combine in an individual to make him, in the truest sense, a man. Whenever there is an honest man, there is an island of strength. Live honorably.

Lastly, Communism wears a cloak of many colors. Learn to recognize those colors, and no act of yours will tend to bring to fruition the destructive harvest which the Communist seeks, and toward which all his efforts are bent.

Three score and ten in now nearly the life span of the average American. It now stands at 69.7, up 4.6 since 1957.

Scholarships Must Be Renewed

The Office of Student Aid announced yesterday that all students who currently hold student aid scholarships must submit renewal applications in order to receive the scholarship next year.

Beginning this summer a student who already holds a University scholarship and elects to attend summer school in order to finish three years, or attends for other legitimate reasons, may draw on his scholarship on a pro rata basis, No new scholarships will be granted for the summer session, and no scholarships will be increased.

However, a student may elect to receive part of the scholarship money which he ordinarily could expect for four academic years for use during the summer. He can receive for each summer session an amount equal to 1/6 of his scholarship total for a year. Any student interested in this plan should consult the Director of Student Aid.

The Office of Student Aid also announces that it is now receiving applications for loans for summer school. Applications for loans for next year will not be received until July.

Carolina Caravan

By PAUL HOUSTON

This is the last Carolina Caravan. It is written as a final tribute to its creator and weekly author, Jake Wade, who died last Wednesday. The writer of today's Caravan is a University of North Carolina student who knew, worked with and loved Jake Wade as his student assistant in the UNC Office of Sports Information for the past three years. To him the sad task of signing off this last Caravan has fallen.

I knew Jake for a third of his life (61 years) and all of mine. (Actually, because of our disparity in age, I always called him "Mr. Wade.") My father, Noel Houston, and Jake were the closest of friends, many being the Sunday afternoons they would gather on the terrace of my home and hash over the news and personalities of the day and yesterday. Fittingly, they are now interred within 30 feet of each other.

Stout and bright-eyed, Jake always had that cigar of his in hand or mouth, and he either wrestled with one end of it in his teeth, or occasionally smoked it, or sometimes even both. For a fact it seemed he couldn't write without it around.

He would advance down our back sidewalk with a little stroll, taking short steps as he went, with head tilted slightly up and cocked a little to the left side. Once or twice he goofed a bit and showed up just as our Sunday dinner hour, but that didn't matter and, besides, our oven kept the fried chicken warm.

Aside from all of this, Jake had, as everybody knows, quite a flair for writing. Greenhorns in the trade (like me) and veterans, too, have at one time or another either emulated, imitated, or been captivated by his style. A big Hemingway fan, Jake's words were always exactly like Ernest's and wonderfully chosen. His prose, wandering about as it did from comma to comma before eventually spotting a period, was ever entertaining and at times came close to being rhapsodic. Some said it was pretty good lyric poetry not to have appeared in iambic pentameter.

Jake had Wordsworthian characteristics and background. He was born into a rural upbringing in Dunn of Harnett County and there, no doubt, acquired the common, warm touch that marked his writing and his life until his death. He grew up speaking the language of the simple folk and understanding their ideas and ideals; his writing showed that it was a product of this.

Jake had the rare talent of being able to stir an emotion, to work the imagination of an audience, to evoke a smile. Like Wordsworth (who also grew up in simple surroundings and at least professed to use the language of the common folk), he was a romantic. Not sentimental, but romantic in that he relied on the human mind to respond imaginatively and with feeling to the words he recorded on paper. He scoffed at "statistics writers," once calling them "figger filberts."

Jake wrote from the heart, he wrote about the heart and he wrote to the heart. Oh, he could be choleric when somebody riled him, but Jake, no kidding (as he used to say), was just an old softie.

Working for Jake Wade was an experience unlike many others in this era of "controlled personnel management." Jake was nothing even approaching a dictator. Seldom in fact did he give orders. Both his secretary Mrs. Winifred Lawrence and I can vouch for that. This rather unorthodox policy of freedom for his employees proved stunningly successful, in that his sports publicity office gained a national reputation for excellence in its arrangements for press coverage of local athletic events and for its skillfully written releases.

I also mention those countless parties Jake and his charming wife Hamlin gave for the members of the press after football games and on many other occasions. In a way, those very get-togethers showed best the lovable kind of guy Jake Wade was.

For 20 years he was sports editor of the Charlotte Observer and for the past 16, director of the UNC Office of Sports Information and faithful chronicler of some of his alma mater's finest football, basketball, tennis, golf, swimming, soccer, track, and baseball teams. Now passed away, he would have joyed at the last tribute paid him: The Jake Wade Scholarship Fund for Prospective Sports Writers Entering the UNC School of Journalism.

Alexander Wins All-Campus Title

By JOHN MONTAGUE

The rampaging Alexander Strikeouts turned on the batting power in Wednesday's All-Campus finals, dropping the Grad champion Peacocks, 17-3. Everyone in the winner's line-up contributed to the 17-hit barrage.

The Peacocks had gained a berth in the All-Campus Play-offs by defeating the Law Blue, 12-6, in a re-play for the graduate title. The Blues' 14-11 victory over the Peacocks on Tuesday was nullified because of the Peacocks' valid protest that the Lawyers had been using an illegal bat.

Delta Sig Blue was to furnish the opposition for Alexander in yesterday's All-Campus finale. The Delta Sig crew captured the All-Frat title Wednesday by downing their brother team, the Delta Sig Rogues, champions of the White circuit, by a 10-9 score.

The winning tally for the Blue came across in the final frame, when, with two out, Bob Burgess, who had singled to open the inning, scampered home from second on Lee Basinger's base hit.

DKE Netters Capture Blue, White Titles

The DKE's came throuh in fine style tennis-wise this spring, capturing the intramurtal net championships for both the Frat Blue and Frat White divisions. In the finals played Wednesday, the DKE Blue downed the Phi Delts, while the DKE Red dropped SAE for the White crown.

Navy Blue walked off with the Dorm trophy, Winston being its victim in the championship match. Med I wrapped up the Grad title title on Tuesday, defeating Law-B in the finals.

Virginia Takes ACC Lead

By ED DUPREE

Yes, Wake Forest, it can happen to you!

That's what the Atlantic Coast Conference's greedy little upset bug is saying as he looks at the topsy-turvy conference baseball standings.

Wednesday night he applied the chompers and bit two more ACC teams, the Demon Deacons and N. C. State's Wolfpack. The result? A 13-11 victory for the Raleigh boys.

Wednesday afternoon the bug continued to cast his small, but effective shadow on the baseball crew from the University of Virginia. The Cavaliers, behind the ACC's leading pitcher, Bill Spencer, shut out Maryland 2-0. Spencer threw a five-hitter and upped his league mark to 5-0.

Maryland's Bob Bezendy gave up two hits and had a no-hitter going until the sixth inning. The Cavaliers scored a run in that inning and another in the seventh for the victory.

The Virginia win and Wake Forest loss combined to add one more surprising note to the conference hardball season—Virginia is in first place! Charlottesville's men now have an 8-4 record, the Winston-Salem fellows are in second with a 9-5 mark.

Ten days ago the Deacons seemed to have the top spot all wrapped up with their 9-2 record. Clemson and Duke were tied for second with 6-5 slates, State was 5-5, and lightly-regarded Virginia, 4-4.

A pair of wins in a rescheduled doubleheader with South Carolina will make the Cavs champion of the ACC. The two games will be played Saturday in Chapel Hill.

A Virginia team has never won an ACC championship in any sport. Counterbalancing this, North Carolina's nine finished in last place with a 4-10 record—the first time a UNC team in any sport has finished last.

Regardless of the outcome of the doubleheader — both games were rained out earlier in the season—Virginia has been the big surprise of 1962.

It all started late last season when UNC was in first place with a 9-3 record, Duke was 9-4, and the Tar Heels met last-place Virginia in a doubleheader at Charlottesville. Virginia won both games for their first baseball victories in ACC history over Carolina. Duke backed into first place and defeated Virginia a few days later to wrap up the crown.

Winners of two of the last three games, Virginia picked up where they left off and the disappointing Wake Forest team is on the outside looking in.

If UVA splits the two games with the Gamecocks, a tie for first would result and a playoff would be necessary. Of course, the Cavs could lose both contests and the Deacons would be back into first place.

UVA, USC Play Here Tomorrow

Virginia and South Carolina will play a baseball donubleheader here Saturday as the Cavaliers seek their first ACC championship in any sport. Two wins for UVA would make them the conference champs, one win would give them a tie with Wake Forest.

Gametime in Emerson Stadium is 1 p.m. Students and UNC employees will be admitted for 50 cents with athletic pass cards. Admission price for the doubleheader is $1.

Alexander Mauls Peacocks

Alexander's Strikeouts defeated the Delta Sig Blues, 6-3, Thursday to win the All-campus intramural championship.

The dorm men scored four runs in the third inning to clinch the victory. A walk, four singles, a double, and a sacrifice fly did the damage.

Buddy Baldwin pitched four-hit ball over the seven innings for the win. John Corbett was the posing pitcher.

Henry Taylor's two-run homer in the fourth innings was the only four-bagger of the afternoon, but then the Strikeouts had rolled up a 5-0 lead and were not to be stopped in their quest for the campus championship.

FOR NEXT YEAR

Housing Outlook Brighter

The outlook for next year's student housing is brighter than ever, according to Housing Director James E. Wadsworth, due to the construction of two new dorms, Craige and Ehringhaus.

The addition of these two dorms and the conversion of Cobb to coed housing means there will be about 1,000 more room spaces for men next fall and about 300 additional spaces for women. UNC dorms will now accommodate 4000 men and 1000 women.

There will, however, still be some three-man rooms next fall. About 17-20 rooms in Joyner, Winston, Aycock, Lewis, Manly and Alexander will have three occupants.

According to figures from Dean of Student Affairs Charles Henderson, 52% of all students live in dorms, 10% in fraternities and sororities and 38% live off-campus.

The off-campus housing is broken down into three groups with the following percentages: 20% commute from home, 62% live in private homes or apartments and the remaining 18% have married students' accommodations supplied by the University.

At present there are 86 names on the waiting list for married students' housing. Dean Henderson said, "We expect about 105 vacancies during the summer months from June to September," so there will be rooms available for all people now on that waiting list.

Says It's Only Matter Of Time Until Rebellion

OBNOVA, Bulgaria (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev said Friday the U.S. troops sent into Thailand will be driven out and "blood will be shed there."

He implied that the Thai people will compel American forces to leave and said "it is only a question of time."

Regarding the dispatch of U.S. troops to Thailand by President Kennedy, Khruschchev said: "It is an unreasonable decision" and "does not bespeak a great mind." Khrushchev, in a far-ranging speech during a welcoming ceremony at this northern Bulgarian collective village, also said the Soviet Union will resume nuclear testing.

Describes Motive As Stupidity

He described as "stupidity" the President's dispatch of 1,800 U.S. Marines and 2,000 U.S. Army men to Thailand and said:

"The President has ordered American troops to land in Thailand. However, the Americans will be driven out of Thailand. It is only a question of time. They are afraid of not only losing Laos but also of losing Thailand. The best thing the United States could do is to give up playing the role of an international gendarme."

Khruschchev said Secretary of State Dean Rusk had signed an agreement with the Thai government on the stationing of American troops there.

Secretaries and ministers can sign, he said, but it is the people who make the final decisions.

Call Thai Rulers Feudal

"This agreement was signed with the feudal rulers of Thailand and the Americans are trying to keep these feudals in power," he said. "Such agreements may be signed, but the people of Thailand will erase the SEATO pact."

"In Viet Nam," he said, "the French fought for seven years and the Americans may fight for 15 years. But they will get out of there.

"In Communist North Viet Nam where the people are in power, creative work is done. In South Viet nam where the Americans are, blood is being shed." He turned to the subject of nuclear testing and said:

"We have exploded a certain number of nuclear weapons: a certain number has been exploded by America,

UNC 'Architecturally Rich' —Planning Director Tuttle

By JOE HODGES

If you were planning to build a new building on this campus, what type of architecture would you use, Georgian Colonial, Greek, Roman, Gothic, Moorish, or Contemporary?

This question is one of vital concern to Mr. Arthur N. Tuttle, Jr., Director of Planning for the University. A registered architect holding a Masters degree in architecture from Princeton, Mr. Tuttle is also a graduate of the University of North Carolina's Department of City and Regional Planning.

"Our campus is architecturally rich," he said. "From Old East to Burton-Craige dormitory now under construction it reflects the architectural thinking of a number of periods. Some buildings such as the Playmakers' Theatre show great architectural skill and are representative of the best of their period.

Style Must Change

"As Duke University is now realizing, it becomes impractical and often impossible to perpetuate an architectural style indefinitely. Technological, economic, and social changes produce changes in arhitectural practice. Changing requirements make it wise to take advantage of advances in construction materials and techniques. Our basic goal is to add required new structures to the existing campus in an orderly and harmonious manner."

Discussing the architectural future here, Mr. Tuttle said, "De will try to preserve and restore the architecturally and historically valuable structures while adding new structures of the best possible design."

Modern, But No Boxes

He indicated that future buildings will reflect the architectural trends of today. "We do not plan to build aluminum and glass boxes, but proposed buildings such as the student union will be in contemporary styling."

When asked about the new addition to Hill Hall which contrasts red brick to the exsiting yellow brick," he said, "That is a solution that we will have to live with for a long time. It is an instance where it was impossible to perpetuate the original style."

Jet Flight Slated For Profs, Families

Students and faculty members and their immediate families may now make reservations for a special reduced rate round-trip flight to London this summer on a Pan American "Economy Jet" flight that is being arranged by the administration.

The flight will leave from New York July 19 and return from London on August 30, giving travelers almost six weeks for touring Europe. The reduced fare is $186 cheaper than the usual rate on Pan American economy flights.

One flight has already been filled, but another still has space available for faculty members and students who have been enrolled in the University for six months or more.

June 10 Deadline

Deposits of $50 for each travel ticket must be made at the Cashier's Office, Room 1, South Building. Marvin Woodward, UNC cashier, stated that faculty and students may apply for the flight up to June 10. If the plane is filled prior to that time, however, no more reservations will be accepted.

Children under the age of twelve and above the age of two pay half fare, or $150 for the round trip.

For children under two years of age, the fare is 10 per cent of the full fare, or $20 for the round trip.

Flights For Three Schools

Fred H. Weaver, secretary of the Consolidated University, is in charge of overall flights being arranged at all three institutions in the Consolidated University. Faculty and students at Woman's College in Greensboro and N.C. State College in Raleigh are making reservations for other flights.

Mr. Woodward has urged that those wishing to make reservations come by his office as soon as possible and make the deposit.

For trips to England, a passport is necessary—obtainable at the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court in Durham. Smallpox vaccinations are also required.

Space Setback

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The U. S. man-in-space program suffered the worst disaster in its history Thursday when an Air Force transport plane carying emegency recovery crewmen for Scott Carpenter's orbital flight crashed near here killing all 14 men aboard.

National Aeronautics and Space Agency officials at Cape Canaveral said the crash alone would not postpone Carpenter's flight, scheduled for Saturday, but they feared bad weather might do so.

MAY ACQUITTED

Patrick May, recently charged with the theft of a tire from the yard of James A. Bowman of Chapel Hill, was tried Tuesday and acquitted of the charge.

Police officials and clerk of the court declined to comment on the case. May himself testified for the prosecution, he said, in order to clear himself of suspicion.

Mr. Bowman said he preferred to forget the entire matter, and expressed the view that a mistake had been made on his part.

Reconsideration Of $4,000 Bill Defeated By SL

Reconsideration of the dormitory intramural managers appropriation was argued and defeated Thursday night at Student Legislature. Bill Criswell spoke against the bill as it was passed, asking that the nearly $4000 appropriation be made as a loan.

A bill to establish a campus travel agency, which was passed last week by the body, was reintroduced and passed with amendments.

All of Allen's appointments were accepted by the legislators, except the summer school women's council. Jean Yoder objected to this on the grounds that insufficient publicity had been given to the interviews.

Ronnie Anderson Wins Wall Street Journal Award

Ronnie Nelson Anderson, a senior in Business Administration, has been named 1962 recipient of the "Wall Street Journal Student Achievement Award." Anderson, a resihent of Winston-Salem, was nominated for the UNC award by professors in the School of Business Administration.

The award was made on the basis of academic excellence in the area of Banking and Finance. A Student Achievement medal will be awarded the graduating student, in addition to which he will receive a year's subscription to The Wall Street Journal. The medal will be presented to him by the UNC faculty on or about May 15.

Anderson attended Davidson College before coming to the University. At Davidson he played freshman and varsity basketball and was a member of Sigma Chi Social Fraternity. He has received a Phi Beta Kappa invitation at UNC but has not yet been initiated. He has also accepted an invitation for membership in Beta Gamma Sigma honorary business fraternity.

WUNC-FM SUSPENDS FOR SUMMER

WUNC-FM will leave the air on Sunday, May 20, for the duration of the summer.

WUNC-FM will resume broadcasting activities next fall. At that time, the frequency-modulated station, located at 91.5 on the dial, will continue its expanded 50,000 watt coverage.

The station has been broadcasting quality music and discussion programs of several domestic and foreign networks since December (with some interruptions) when its power was increased from 15,000 to 50,000 watts.

Hell Hath No Fury Like Steam Tunnels, DTH Learns

By HUBERT HAWKINS

The campus steam tunnels are for oficial use only, DTH reporters learned this week.

Gathering information for a feature story on the utilities plant, they were seen entering a tunnel near Venable Hall. Worried campus police began a seach through the passages in 180-degree heat.

Meanwhile the explorers had emerged out of the heat to cool off at the Pine Room. Returning to a tunnel entrance in front of Joyner for pictures, they were found by the sweating policemen.

Dangers of such exploration were described by the Office of Student Afairs. The intense heat, steam under pressure, and gas formation are possible hazards.

"We only send men nown there about once a month for maintenance," said Edward W. McKnight, superintendent of the central utilities plant, "and then we send them two at a time in case one passes out."

The tunnels originate from the central utilities plant, marked by a 200-foot smokestack west of the campus. They run to the medical center and the new dorms, and beneath the campus as far as Cobb. University-owned buildings in town are also heated by the system.

Local Or Partisan

Almost all newspaper cities today are monopolies. One-third of all U. S. dailies are owned by newspaper chains. Deals between chain-owners—made explicity (as in the case of the Chandler-Hearst arrangement in Los Angeles) or by an understanding—are diminishing the number of independent papers still further.

According to the Journalism Quarterly, published by the Association for Education in Journalism, there were 689 American cities with competing daily papers in 1910.

Today there are less than 60.

There are 1,733 dailies today—but 560 of those are owned by the 109 newspaper "groups", such as the Hearst and Scripps - Howard chains.

* * *

The most recent example of "arrangements" between newspaper chains occured in Los Angeles several months ago. This major American city now has only two newspapers in place of four—the Hearst chain has ceased publishing its morning Examiner and the Chandler group has stopped its afternoon Mirror. (Both groups announced their decision the same morning, coincidentally.) The Hearst paper, Herald-Express, now has an afternoon monopoly and the Chandler-owned Times has a morning monopoly, eliminating the need for any serious competition between the two organizations.

In North Carolina there are 47 daily papers in 40 cities. Combinations own 14 of these papers and the other 33 have complete monopolies in their cities. There is not a single newspaper-competition city in the state.

Only ten cities in eleven Southern states have competitive newspapers—and there are none in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Virginia and South Carolina.

* * *

The American newspaper situation, already a public liability, will get worse before it gets better, unless something substantive is done.

The theory of "freedom of the press" has been used too often as a shield behind which publishers hide from anti-trust suits.

It is ridiculous that no group can own more than four TV stations and seven radio stations, yet it can own any number of newspapers. The Hearst chain has 14 papers with a daily circulation of more than four million; The Chicago Tribune chain has three papers with nearly three-and - a - half million circulation. Scripps-Howard owns 21 papers with 3.3 million circulation. Also in the Scripps family are two more chains with 22 additional newspapers.

Several solutions have been suggested for America's non-competitive newspaper situation. Anti-trust legislation probably would be in effectual because the monopolies are local rather than national.

A. J. Liebling, author of THE PRESS, has suggested to the AFL-CIO that it consider subsidizing newspapers in areas where the existing paper is stridently anti-labor. This would be a reversion to a former situation where political organizations and other power groups owned newspapers.

Citizens of Lima, Ohio, created a paper, the Citizen, which competes with the absentee - owned News. The Citizen still survives and has a circulation equal that of the News.

But a similar attempt in Jackson, Miss., by townspeople dissatisfied with the low-quality Jackson News, failed after seven years of pump-priming by the community. In January of this year the community paper sold out to the News.

Either Liebling's suggestion or the Lima, Ohio plan appear to be the only realistic ways of meeting the problem of monopoly without infringing on real "freedom of the press." (jc)

(This is the third and final part of an editorial series on the American press.)

Thefts

For numerous reasons the incidence of petty thievery increases drastically at the end of each semester, and particularly towards the close of the spring semester.

Individuals finding themselves short of cash and long on debts must find some way to meet the increased demands of pressuring merchants. Merchants who were overly eager to extend credit, to insure sales, during the school year, are now bucking at an extension for the summer months.

With increasing pressure and confusion of exams, students are more likely to yield to temptations that would normally be resisted.

Since approximately 35 per cent of all thefts are from rooms with unbolted doors, the most appropriate and effective remedy would be the simple turning of a key occasionally. At any rate, extra caution with all valuables will eliminate the wholesale cleansing that sweeps through the dorms and fraternities every spring.

Don't close the barn door, after the horse . . .

A very practical suggestion, certainly worthy of consideration by the orientation committees, has been made by Mr. Beaumont, Chief of the Campus Police. He thinks that a definite program on the management of school finances would be beneficial for most incoming freshman.

A pretty good idea. (cw)

Frenchmen Think What They Think

THE MARQUISE WENT OUT AT FIVE by Claude Mauriac, translated from the French by Richard Howard. George Braziller, 1962, 311 pp., $4.95.

Claude Mauriac, the misguided Frenchman, thinks he's a painter. He writes a historical novel, but he doesn't tell a story. Instead, he paints a modern picture.

He creates an impression of life in a Paris quarter on a summer day bteween the hour of five, when the Marquise walks to the newsstands for an afternoon paper, and and six o'clock, when a brief shower ends.

During this hour the reader discovers Paris and Parisians. Martine Carnejoux strolls along listening to her young daughter's chatter; a lone tourist takes a guidebook tour of the square; a high school boy dreams of his sweetheart and encounters his rival; a detective looks for his suspect; a hotel maid reads movie magazines and listens in on two lovers' conversation.

An aging women emerges empty-handed from a shoe store to wonder about a maroon pair of shoes and settle for an eclair; Monsieur Loubert makes love in one room while his wife is slowly dying in the next; Bertrand Carnejoux prepares to write a novel to include all the teeming life around him.

All these are apart, yet they encounter each other to create and draw impression of each other.

The secretary on an errand sees the blond policeman as a potential lover and the hired chauffeur as pretty high and mighty for one not even driving his own car.

But what does the policeman think of the girl he sees eyeing him? And what does the chauffeur think? And the old man who watches all three from his window while he listens to his wife's tirade?

Mauriac paints a picture of many people, many incidents, many thoughts. Like most contemporary artists, he doesn't tell his audience outright what the picture is. He lets them guess.

Characters aren't introduced; they just appear. The author gives no narration; the characters do all the thinking, talking and explaining. The book has no real sequence of events. Three dots and the man in the Ferrari zooms past the policeman . . .

. . . Three more dots and a young boy faces his father's death. Mauriac used this same style of writing in his previous novel, "The Dinner Party," attended by eight fashionable Parisians. The style is difficult to follow, and the reader is apt to get lost unless he finds thought games challenging.

Mauriac is an experience worth investigating. The style challenges the intellect, and the content proves the French think about what Americans think the French think about.

World Welfare Concerns SG

To the Student Government and Mr. Alan Goldsmith:

On the front page of the May 15 News and Observer there was a picture. In this picture was a 19-year-old Communist Chinese refugee girl who was crying because the British authorities had arbitrarily decided that she was one of the refugees to be sent back to the mainland. We are not condemning the Hong Kong authorities, for it is quite understandable that a city the size of Hong Kong cannot provide for all of China, or even a small part. They are crowded to the limit now and a stream of refugees of such enormous proportions cannot be handled by a single city. Still, it seems to us that some more suitable alternative can, and for that matter, must be found. It is very easy to see the mainland of China as a huge block of humanity hell-bent on our destruction, but, after seeing a picture of a girl our age crying in the street because she must return to her "motherland," we find it much harder to look at it that way. To be sure, Communist China is our enemy, but, are the people of China, especially the one who have fled to "freedom," synonymous with the country. It is our opinion that, if the free world continues to send them back to what, from all reports we have read, seems to be a living hell, they soon will be. Communism is not working in China, and, as long as it continues to fail, there is still a chance of a people's revolt. Leaving political considerations out of it, however, the free world seems quite out of character when it sends back those who have fled starving, from their homes to freedom. These refugees have made their sacrifice. They have left their families, their friends, and their homes behind. Cannot we, too, sacrifice?

We, as individuals, can do nothing. The Student Legislature, representing the student body, can do something. It is true that the Student Government should be concerned with the welfare of the student, but it is also true that this august body should be concerned with the welfare of people in other sections of the country and the world. What happens in Hong Kong, half-way around the world, affects us as individual students and as a country. We submit that student government is not dead, but is just beginning to live. We submit that a hungry girl crying in a Hong Kong street is just as important as a student in this University. We submit that Student Government can do something about this hungry girl without betraying its obligation to the Student Body. We believe that there is an alternative to sending starving people back into a totalitarian state where, at the worst, they will be liquidated, and at the least they will continue to starve. We further believe that Student Government is obligated to do what it can, be it in the form of a mere resolution or in the more concrete form of money, to, in some small way, help alleviate the Hong Kong refugee situation. We, the so-called leaders of tomorrow, have a chance to help someone beside ourselves. It is up to Student Government.

Party Should Not Be Liberal

To the Editor:

"In the past year . . . there has has been a gradual change in the complexion of the (Student Party), a change away from the dormitory, away from liberalism," wrote Jim Clotfelter in a recent editorial which was reprinted for party members by Haynes McFadden.

Mr. Clotfelter's first "change" has not materialized. The SP is still the party that gives the dormitory resident political opportunity and voice. Not one of its spring Big Four candidates was a member of a fraternity or a sorority. Furthermore, the records of Legislaure of the past year clearly show that the SP is still a strong supporter, indeed the strongest supporter, of dormitory life improvement.

The change "away from liberalism," on the other hand, certainly has become manifest. Mr. Clotfelter recognizes this trend in the fact that the majority of party officers are not particularly liberal, that "they do not seem to be part of the Student Party's ideological tradition." Obviously this "liberal tradition' has broken down.

But why not? Why must the Student Party be tied to tradition? Its membership is not tradition; its membership is constantly growing and changing. The SP is far larger and stronger now than in past years. And this larger and stronger party does not exist through any hypothetical traditions; it exists through its members—almost 250 of them—all of whom were given the opportunity to choose liberal or non-liberal officers. Do not condemn the SP, Mr. Clotfelter, if your liberal element, prevalent for so long, now takes a back seat. This is a new Student Party: almost every semester at UNC sees a new SP. The old ones were not necessarily the best ones; they lost their share of elections.

"The duty of the Student Party is to set forth a platform committed to liberal values on and off campus," says Mr. Clotfelter, a liberal party member. As one of the conservative party members and officers, I say that this platform should be committed to such values as the majority of party members at any particular time believe in and support—not necessarily liberal. The Editor and I have in compatible convictions. The members of the party should take whatever stands they wish, but should disregard the myth of SP tradition. When we, the Student Party, have something to say, it will be us speaking, and not the SP of 1948.

Clark Foreman Corrects Facts

To the Editor:

Your fine editorial "Very Rare Thing" would have been excellent had you not been misinformed about the details of Pete Seeger's case.

I have checked my memory with Pete's attorneys and can assure you: (a) that Pete did not answer the questions of the committee with respect to any organization whatsoever; (b) he has not been in jail, although was held a couple of hours on April 4th by the Federal Marshall in New York pending the arrival of bail. That would not justify your statement that he has become a sometimes convict.

I would like to go on record as predicting that Pete's conviction in the District Court will be thrown out either by the Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court. Two other witnesses at the same hearing, who took similar positions, were acquitted when their cases came before a more enlightened District judge than the one who heard Pete's case.

All the good things you said about Pete Seeger and Joan Baez are true, and I commend you for the spirit of your editorial—also very rare.

Campus Health Being Devastated

All of us, erudite university students that we are, are surely familiar with the writings of C. Northcote Parkinson, Rafles Professor of History at the University of Malaya and creator of "Parkinson's Law."

As we know, Professor Parkinson's studies in administration are applicable to our situation here on the UNC campus, especially his Coefficient or Inefficiency and Principles of Selection. We would like to focus attention on a problem not treated directly by the good professor, but, nevertheless, suggested by him. The problem—painfully present in this academic community—is that of energetic and genuinely inspired indolence.

Using the effective Parkinson Law, one can examine the problem with a faculty not afforded by conventional scientific methods. Parkinson states: "A lack o fwork is not necessarily revealed by a manifest idleness; a lack of real activity does not, of necessity, result in leisure."

Painstaking research has revealed that the "average" Carolina student is: a male, a dormitory resident, 20.83 years old, not a fraternity member (though not at all rabid when the subject arises.) from this state, not very handsome, and the possessor of a 2.31 QP average.

This ("average" student is diseased, but not in the usual sense. He is in the symtomatic stages of acute ennui—an awesome disease that is America's number one killer. Proper medication throughout his undergraduate life determines his success in escaping the horrors of its advanced stages.

As the title of this treatise implies, our student is extremely active, but in a negative direction. He makes the cardinal error (typical of those in the early stages of the disease) of equating activity with productivity. In the more advanced case this error produces a cerebral toxin which results in a subconscious drive to direct all activity in the least toilsome direction. For examples, let us return to our "average" student.

His normal day has only ten hours (a conservative figure) available for actual labor. The rest of the time is devoted to eating, sleeping, and attending classes. Since he has not joined any committee of any description (it is well known that only Y-Courtiers or pedants join those things anyway), his extra time is not encumbered by this consideration. The substitution usually made is of a seasonal nature; presently it involves sunning the body upon the lawn. This time is not entirely lost, however, for the student will occasionally carry along his dark glasses and some edifying literature. (Nnightstands for the plebians, Henry Miller for the aristocrats).

The employment of dark glasses demonstrates our student's genuinely utilitarian disposition. They reduce glare and prevent others from realizing that he is actually sleeping or looking over his books at co-eds across the street. No doubt there has also been much careful thinking done in the selection of the dark glasses. The one thing he remembers from that course in archeology is the axiom of Vitruvius regarding body symmetry and the fact that the distance from chin to the crown is exactly ⅛ of the overall body height. Therefore, he has been very cautious in procuring the proper frame thickness for his particular form.

The process of tanning reduces the student's available time by no less than two nor more than three hours. In the time remaining he devotes his energies to other self-rewarding endeavors.

Sometimes he will try his hand at viewing the television, in an earnest desire (so he says) to verify the accusations of Mr. Minnow of the AEC (or it is Mr. Trout of the ACC?).

On of days, he will make his way to an obscure booth in one of the communities avant garde diners to partake of succulent tidbits and join souls of sterner stuff in making grandiose plans for banning things in general. He occasionally is known to nod his well-tanned head in agreement with lamentations over what a terrible, terrible thing all the philistines have done to the world. Then follows a final tidbit, a flourishing farwell, and s to bed.

In this environment the disease grows; its cancer can fill the entire body in four short years. Although the clinics that are quite capable of effecting cure are bountiful, they are disasterously devoid o patients. Although Parkinson's Law permits us to analysze the problem it can do nothing to achieve its solution. The solution, like so many things, is entirely dependent on our "average" student.

UNC Student To Man Nuclear Sub

Ronald E. McArthur, a senior midshipman in the NROTC Battalion here, has received orders to attend the Navy's Nuclear Power Submarine Schools, and is the first UNC midshipman to be accepted for this type of training.

McArthur, a math major from Wilson, was Battalion Commander of the NROTC Unit last semester and has been the number one man in his Navy class seven out of the eight semesters he has been at UNC.

In order to be accepted to the Nuclear Power Schools McArthur had to go through an extensive screening program which ended with a personal interview with Admiral Rickover in Washington.

At the end of this 18 month training period McArthur will report to a nuclear powered submarine in the fleet.

Hoffa Says He Is Not Guilty Of Assault

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Teamster President James R. Hoffa pleaded not guilty Friday to charges he beat up a union subordinate ":like a man berserk" and a jury trial was set for June 19.

The jury trial was ordered by municipal court Judge Thomas C. Sealley at Hoffa's request. Hoffa, dressed dapperly in a dark gray suit, refused to comment on the assault charges.

His accuser, Samuel Baron, sat silently a few feet from the Teamster Union chief during the brief two-minute court proceedings. He brought charges late Thursday that Hoffa knocked him down twice and shoved him over a chair during an altercation at Teamster headquarters here.

Edmond T. Daily, chief prosecutor for the municipal court, said he planned to question several persons who may have witnessed the Hoffa-Baron episode. Among them were Hoffa's personal secretary and several union employes who were in Hoffa's executive suite at the time Baron said the assault occurred.

Baron Gives Statement

Baron, who said he and Hoffa have been at odds since 1954, gave this account in his sworn affidavit:

Hoffa summoned him into his "what are you doing?" When Baron tried to answer, Hoffa cut him off and repeated his demand twice more.

When Baron moved to le ave the office, Hoffa, "like a men berserk," shouted, "what are you trying to do?" Baron replied, "Jimmy, I do know what I am doing."

At this, the affidavit said, Hoffa became "absolutely frantic" and yelling "nobody talks to me," headed toward Baron with fists clenched.

Jaker Wins Film Society Movie Grant

Bill Jaker, a graduate student in the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures, has been named the first recipient of the Creative Grant Award of the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society.

The award carries $300 for Jaker to use in experimentation and work with motion pictures. The provisions of the award require that Jaker prepare a film of three to ten minutes on the basis of the story line which he submitted in the contest.

Jaker has had a Screen Gems Scholarship for the past year, and will be a graduate assistant in the RTVMP Department next year.

A total of 14 "treatments" or story lines were entered in the contest. Jaker submitted two story lines, both of which were excellent, according to the contest selection committee. Jaker will make the final choice in deciding which treatment will be used for the final film. He has one full year for its production and can use the facilities at Swain Hall in making the 16 millimeter silent or sound film.

A copy of the finished film will go to the Film Society for its permanent film collection. In turn, the society will help Jaker find distribution for the finished product.

DIX HILL DRIVE

The YWCA Dix Hill Committee is now collecting books and old clothes that will be given to the state mental hospital to fill what doctors there call "one of their biggest problems."

This problem is the patients' feeling that no one cares for them, and the doctors say that "it is a big help if we can give the patients clothes or something else that is new to them.

"These morale boosters," they say, "are often a big aid in bringing about effective treatment."

'Pillow Talk' Is Free Flick

Yesssss . . . ?

"Pillow Talk," the romantic comedy of a career girl and a happy bachelor who share a party-line telephone but no other interests, will be the final Films Committee presentation of the year. Starring Doris Day, Rock Hudson, Tony Randall and Thelma Ritter, "Pillow Talk" is centered around a songwriter (Hudson) who does more scoring in his apartment than on paper and an interior decorator (Day) who shares a party-line with him.

"Pillow Talk" will be shown three times in Carroll Hall. Showings will be at 6:30, 8:30 and 10:30.

UVA Nine Seeks ACC Title Here; Tar Heels Edge State In Exhibition

By ED DUPREE

Only South Carolina stands between Virginia and its first ACC sports championship in history.

The baseball teams from the two schools meet here in Emerson Stadium this afternoon at 2 in a doubleheader that may decide the conference baseball championship.

Virginia's surprising Cavaliers are 8-4 in the ACC and Wake Forest has finished its season at 9-5. All the Deacons can do now is sit back and wait for the results of the two Chapel Hill contests.

The Cavaliers need one win for a tie and two wins for undisputed possession of first place. Bill Spencer, the ACC's leading pitcher with a 5-0 mark, will probably be on the mound for the Virginians in the first game. Henry Massie, a sophomore with a 2-3 record and victories over Duke and UNC, will toil the second game.

Admission price for today's contests is $1. Athletic pass card holders will be admitted for 50 cents.

On the UNC scene, Coach Walt Rabb's baseballers, minus the seniors, trimmed N.C. State, 5-4, Thursday night at Asheboro. The game did not count in season's records, as it was an exhibition game.

Spencer Willard went all the way for the win, giving up nine hits. The Tar Heels got eight hits, the biggest one being a home run by Dave Pope.

NC Trackmen Run In AAU Meet Tody

UNC sports activity ends this afternoon when Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton take their track men to Raleigh to compete in the Carolina A.A.U. meet.

The Tar Heels and Duke are co-favorites in the meet. Earlier this spring the Blue Devils surprised Carolina in a dual meet, 72-64. As a result, Duke took second and Carolina third, behind Maryland in the regular season ACC track standings.

In the ACC championship track meet at Columbia last week, the Tar Heels finished second with Duke third.

At Columbia John O'Bannon set a new broad jump record and Tom Clark also took first in the high jump. Clark holds the ACC high jump record.

Other Carolina cindermen to watch at Raleigh today are pole vaulters Heath Whittle (UNC record holder) and Barrie Tiedemann, hurdler Jim Brown, and runners Rett Everett, Jerry Stuver, Bob Hart, Scott Brent, Carmine Lunetta, Tom Brooks, and Bob Bennett.

For O'Bannon, Everett and Tiedemann, this will be their last appearance for a Carolina track team.

Intramural Champions Receive Awards

By JOHN MONTAGUE

Nine organizations were on the receiving end of 13 trophies handed out Thursday night in Awards Night ceremonies which brought to a close the 1961-62 Intramural season.

Intramural Director Tom Johnson made the presentations of the awards to the individuals and organizations which excelled in the two important phases of the intramural program, performance and participation.

Taking the Organization Awards as point-system champions in their respective divisions were: Winston (Dorm), Phi Delta Theta (Frat Blue), DKE (Frat White) and the Peacocks (Grad).

The Walter Rabb Participation Awards for team participation went to Mangum, DKE and the Law School. The Grail Awards for individual participation went to Howard Piland of Joyner, Charlie Jonas of Phi Delta Theta and Jim Recipients of the Kay E. Lewis Awards as the outstanding managers of this year were: George Stretcher of Alexander, John Brietz of DU and Bill Wooten of the Law School.

Final standings in the point-system race, with managers listed in parentheses, were: DORM, 1. Winston (Bill Hicks), 2. Alexander (Stretcher), 3. NROTC (Bob Bolan), 4. Joyner (Piland), 5. Mangum (Kent Strickland); FRAT BLUE, 1. Phi Delts (Jonas), 2. DKE (Dave Wysong), 3, SAE (Jim Jittman), 4. Delta Sig (Bill Grover), 5. ATO (John McMillan and Roger Penland); GRAD, 1. Peacocks (Jerry Koontz), 2. Law School (Wooten), 3. Med School (Frank Sabiston), 4. Physics (Jack Rugheimer), 5. Dental School (Wallace Honeycutt).

Freshman Cabinet Sponsors Variety Of '61 Activities

By BOB SPEARMAN

The Freshman Class officers and cabinet have undertaken a wide variety of projects and activities this year. A report follows.

Social Affairs—Dolly Isom, Chmn.

1. Arranged and conducted a dance in Y-Court in February with the Playboys Combo.

2. Arranged and held a dance with guests from Woman's College in Woollen Gym March 31 with the Pedroes Combo.

3. Made arrangements for more exchange dances between the Freshman Class at UNC and that at Woman's College.

National and State Affairs Committee—John Dunne, Chmn.; John Shelburne, Co-Chmn.

1. Conducted a series of polls on controversiesial campus and non-campus issues. The results have been published in the Daily Tar Heel.

2. Conducted a series of Sunday night seminars open to all with prominent state and national figures. Guest-speakers at these seminars were Judge Richardson Preyer of Greensboro, Malcolm Seawell of Chapel Hill and Joel Fleishman of Raleigh.

3. Worked in conjunction with the Carolina Symposium in arranging dormitory discussion groups.

Scholarship Committee—Park McGinty, Chmn.

1. Awarded a class teaching award for service to the Freshman Class. The recipient was Professor James R. Caldwell.

2. Set up a class scholarship fund of $100. This fund will hopefully be increased during the next two years and granted to a rising senior in 1964.

3. Worked with the Student Library Committee to get the Undergraduate Library kept open for students later at night.

Dormitory Affairs Committee—Gordon Coley, Bob Samsot, Co-Chmn.

1. Conducted a poll among members of the Freshman Class to investigate the sentiment for the establishment of quiet dorms. Because of the strong response, six such dorms will be run next year on a trial basis.

2. Conducted a poll among members of the class concerning their problems connected with dormitory life. From this poll, the committee has drawn up a set of model regulations for the Freshman Dorm next year.

Finance Committee—Al Sneed, Chmn.

1. Worked with the other committees to raise money for the class dances, the class teaching award and the class scholarship.

2. Ran Freshman Day Sale in downtown stores.

3. The following money was raised: $90.00, bake sale; $50.00, donation from University Party; $250.00, income from dances; $40.00, Freshman Day sales. Total, $430.00.

4. The following money was spent: dances, $240; teaching award, $15; scholarship fund, $100. Total $355.

On hand: $75 for next year and $100 in Scholarship Fund.

Publicity Committee

1. Handled publicity via signs, posters, newspaper articles and radio for all class activities.

CHAPIN TO STUDY AT ILL.

F. Stuart Chapin Jr., professor of city and regional planning, will spend the academic year 1962-63 at the University of Illinois' Center for Advanced Study. Professor Chapin, who was recently granted a leave of absence, will do research on urbanization and will teach a course in city planning each semester.

Baritone Set To Give Sr. Concert Sun.

Doss Phillips, baritone, will present a bachelor of music recital in Hill Music Hall, Sunday, May 20 at 8:00 p.m.

Phillips is a voice student of Dr. Wilton Mason of the UNC music department. He recently appeared in the opera workshop's presentation of "The Tales of Hoffman" as Crespel and in a senior recital.

Included on his program are works by Leoncavallo, Dvorak, and Wagner. The performance is open to the public without charge.

SENIOR CLASS ESSAY CONTEST WINNER

...'The University And Its Meaning'...

(The following essay, by Fred Anderson, is the winning contribution to the Senior Class essay contest. Bill Imes took second place with an article which we regret not being able to print because of lack of space. The contest was open to the entire student body, and essays were judged by University professors.—Eds.)

By FRED R. ANDERSON, JR.

No function in the long run is more vital to a university than its unrelenting efforts to rephrase its concept of itself and the goals toward which this concept is oriented. Hence, the problem of the university and its meaning is a constant one, for which every attempt to impart knowledge and to be the artisan for the mind of man, the university risks its credentials to this end and consequently its very life.

The meaning of the university might very well have several interpretations, or facets, any one of which could be the subject of an extended discussion. I want to call to mind several of these possible meanings of "meaning" which seem to merit careful examination in the light of today's modern university. When we ask what the university is and what does it mean, we might easily be asking for a definition, which in the case of the university is bound up in its history.

On the other hand we might possibly be asking for the accomplishments of the university; that is, what ends is it fulfilling now. Another approach to the question would lead us to an evaluation of these ends, or to the proposal of better objectives, that is, what ends the university ought to fulfill. These four problems should provide more than enough serious fare for this paper.

* * *

Immediately one wants to know what the author of the discussion is for and what he is against what he is proposing and attacking, what are his answers. During the course of the recent symposium it was a source of considerable irritation to many individuals that Dr. Crane Brinton neither set up clear, simple categories nor took a value-freighted, speculative stand on the revolutions he discussed. My purpose, then, to avoid being put in the same humble category with Dr. Brinston, is, as one can clearly see, to discuss what the university ought to be, after first trying to find out what it is and where it stands. I will of course have to conclude with a consideration of the practical worth of these suggestions.

Having cleared my conscience of the lessons and rigors of first year composition which demands a forthright simple statement of objective, I shall immediately plunge back into the murky depths of the twelfth century, from which I hope to emerge triumphant with the very first definition of the modern university.

Since all good things come from the southland, we might well probe the medieval Mediterranean shore of Europe, particularly the intellectual nerve centers of Bologna, Salerno, and Montpellier, expecting to expose historical sensitivity.

Unable, however, to find anything substantial and satisfactory we are forced to admit northern Paris and Oxford to our collection before we come up with this reasonably simple definition: a university is a society of masters and students, universitas societas magistrorum discipulorumque. Together, according to Charles Homer Haskins, they sought learning that that simple age of faith.

Notice that I was seeking the first definition of the MODERN university, for group learning did go on before the twelfth century, for example, on the porches and in the gardens and groves of the Ancient world; however, only with these societies of the Middle Ages did the pursuit of knowledge as we know it take shape. In the first universities the first degree was granted, the licentia docendi, or license to teach and the bare prototypes of dormitories, student life, and letters home for money began to appear.

It seems, then, without too much trouble we have acquired a definition for the modern university. Apparently the only thing lacking in our definition is a rapid check to make sure that it still applies to the "modern" university today. In Europe one finds no serious alterations in this medieval definition, save for the more sophisticated clauses seven hundred years of university life have added to it. In the course of these centuries universities have been reasonably true to their charge of self-criticism and revaluation.

Of course the trivium and quadrivium of the Middle Ages have given way to the more numerous and consequently compartmentalized disciplines of contemporary inquiries into knowledge. But as recently as the great Cardinal Newman, who wrote most of his "The Idea of a University" in mid-nineteenth century England, the unity of knowledge has been reaffirmed not only in medieval but in ancient terms as well. His contemporary popularity only attests to the continuity of the tradition of the modern university.

To ascertain whether the continuity of the modern university reaches down to contemporary America, which is the same as verifying our definition for the recent American university, I take recourse to an event which happened this past fall on the campus of an essentially typical modern American, state-owned university.

The occasion was a visit by the powerful temporal prince of the realm, largely at the behest of his vassel-in-chief for the region, an event only dimly conceivable in the Paris of 1200. Students in this university from all parts of the country were gathered, as did students from all parts of Europe at Bologna, Montpellier, Paris, and Oxford. Some of them were singing "Gaudeamus igitur iuvenes dum sumus" as did the medieval students at the time they wrote the song. Across the way a bell tower was visible, one capable of tolling the Medieval matins, I'm sure.

Some of the students having partaken of a spirit older than that of the university itself, were taking the advice of the lyrics above, and like the medieval student who wrote: "In the public house to die is my resolution; let wine to my lips be night at life's dissolution," were applauding youth while it was upon them with due irreverence for the grim finality of life, a favorite pastime of students of all ages. Presently, the robed masters began to make their way to the center in a solemn procession entirely befitting an academic occasion of twelfth century Paris, for the gown is unmistakably a medieval creation, and, if the French have preserved their national character, we may speculate that it too, came from Paris.

* * *

At this point I should be content to drop the parallel and consider the matter closed; however, the masters did not stop coming out

SAUNDERS VISITING POFESSOR

Dr. Jason L. Saunders, associate professor of Philosophy will serve as a visiting professor of medieval and renaissance philosophy during the academic year 1962-63 at Claremont7 Graduate School, Claremont, Calif.

HEATH RETIRES

Milton Heath, professor of economics, will retire this June after 37 years at Carolina. Heath, who has been here since he finished his graduate work at Harvard, says he plans to spend much of his time with his hobbies of gardening and music.

Although much of his work in recent years has involved graduate students, he had also acted as faculty adviser to Sigma Delta Chi fraternity and the Publications Board.

Grad Student In Sociology Awarded $400

Charles Bonjean, a graduate student in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, is the recipient of the third annual Howard W. Odum Memorial Award of $400. Bonjean received the award at UNC's annual Alpha Kappa Delta banquet. The organization is an honorary sociology fraternity.

The late Odum was a Kenan Professor of Sociology and the founder of the department at UNC, the Institute for Research in Social Science and the Journal of Social Forces.

Bonjean received a M.A. in journalism from UNC in 1956. He is currently working on a Ph.D. degree. Bonjean's major interest is in industrial sociology.

GM Chairman Curtis Makes Summer Plans

Don Curtis has been appointed summer chairman of the Graham Memorial Activities Board and has already planned several activities for the summer students.

There will be a combo party the first Friday night of the first session to welcome the summer group and another for the second session.

Ten free flicks are on tap, beginning the first Thursday and lasting until the week before each session is over.

Five informal band concerts are scheduled with all but one to be held on the GM lawn. The one exception will be at Emerson Field on the Fourth of July when UNC students and the Chapel Hill community will hold a joint independence celebration to be concluded by a fireworks display.

The YWCA will sponsor a summer film festival featuring popular French, British, and American film classics such as the original "Hunchback of Notre Dame." Films will be shown every Monday evening beginning June 11.

A foreign student will visit the campus this summer as part of the YMCA's "experiment in international living." The Y also plans several lectures to be immediately followed by a group discussion.

Changes Ahead For Lenoir Hall Workers

By HUBERT HAWKINS

Cash payment to student employees at Lenoir Hall is one of a number of approaching changes to improve working conditions, according to J. Arthur Branch, Business Manager of the University.

"I think we definitely ought to pay a higher wage rate than we are now paying," Branch said, "although as of now we have come to no complete agreement on hours or other terms of employment."

The Business Office is conducting a study of the employment situation to correct discontent which student workers have expressed. The Personnel Office and other experienced University personnel will complete their study and take action before next fall.

Sliding Pay Rate

Presently in view is a starting rate of pay which increases with the time an employee has served. Locker room conditions will also be improved during this summer.

Regarding overtime requirements of students to serve in the Senior Banquet, Branch said that some employees were perhaps not made aware of that responsibility in their contact. But he proposed that the management make this extra work optional and secure outside help.

"We want to know the things bothering the employees," Branch asserted, "and do everything we can to make conditions so attractive that students will want to work there."

Seniors Offer Their Final Ode

Editor's Note:

To express their regret and yet acceptance of a parting with Chapel Hill, several members of the Senior Class Cabinet submit the following letter:

"He prowled through the empty campus at midnight under the great moons of the late rich Spring; he breathed the thousand rich odors of tree and grass and flower, of the opulent and seductive South; and he felt a delicious sadness when he thought of his departure, and saw there in the moon the thousand phantom shapes of the boys he had known who would come no more." — Look Homeward Angel.

These were the thoughts of Thomas Wolfe about his own graduation from Carolina, and here as always, his genius put into words the things we feel. "Delicious sadness" expresses the paradox of wanting and not wanting to leave Chapel Hill, the awareness of a new freedom gained at the loss of an old security.

The years after we leave the university will change it as much as they will change us, so that the classes of 1972 and '82 will graduate from a very different school. But there are some ways in which we think and hope it will remain the same. We hope that even under the strain of increasing enrollment Carolina will preserve the personal warmth of the small school atmosphere it has today. We hope that the student body and the administration will continue to function with mutual respect, and that our faculty will always be one whose first interest is not what they teach but whom they teach.

There are other ways in which the university should and will change. Better housing and adequate social facilities may hopefully be expected to replace the cramped, transitional period of our four years. The competition for admission ought to accelerate the gentle intellectual pace too many of us were accustomed to. These are the developments the rest of you will be involved in and we will watch for as alumni. No one can doubt there is a great deal to be done by and for the university in the next few years. We graduate from Carolina grateful for our time here, proud of whatever we did, sorry that it was not more, and taking a treasured part of it with us as we go.

Carr New Soph Of Month

George Watts Carr, III, has been named Sophomore of the Month for May by the Sophomore Class Cabinet. The class expects to continue honoring outstanding class members next fall.

Carr was president of his class as a freshman, and a member of the Student Council. He is now vice-president of Alpha Tau Omega social fraternity, secretary of the Germans Club, a member of the University Party and the YMCA.

Carr has a double major in Industrial Relations and Psychology and has a 2.5 scholastic average. He won a numeral as a member of the freshman basketball team, and has been a counselor at Freshman Camp and counselor in the Orientation program.

Band Concert On Lawn Set For Sunday

An outdoor band concert in the old fashioned style—meaning that dogs as well as people are invited—will be held Sunday, May 20 at 4 p.m. on the Old Well lawn of the University .

Herbert W. Fred, director of bands at UNC, will conduct the Concert Band in a varied program. Included will be the Overture to the "Royal Fireworks" by Handel, "Finlandia" by Sibelius, and selections from "The Sound of Music" by Richard Rogers.

Also on the program will be "Spaixico" by Fred; "Sea Songs" by Vaughan Williams; "Coppelia" by Delibes; and selected marches, a jazz trap drum solo and a trumpet trio.

The UNC Music Department extends a cordial welcome to the public—dogs and other pets as well as people.

It's Up To You

Yes, this is just about the end of formal education for quite a few students. You are approaching the last of riotous good times, the end of academic worries, and the cessation of scholastic exercise.

There are those of you, with education incomplete, who will wander off into the travel of summer months, intending to return next fall, but failing to get back for individual reasons.

But most important, there are those among you who will leave Chapel Hill forever—graduated into the enlightened procedure of mastering the world, into the assumption of familial responsibilities, and into the pursuit of the almighty dollar.

As you leave, as you plunge into the great American money fields, we would submit to you a few thoughts; hopefully occasioning a bit of reflection on your approaching endeavors.

* * *

If you are leaving Chapel Hill with that door-opening sheepskin, or just with the hope that you are ready to produce, do not fail to realize your personal potential; do not fail to recognize your individual responsibility.

But recognize, as in the words of Jean-Paul Sartre (purposely out of context) that "Man is nothing else but what he purposes, he exists only in so far as he realizes himself, he is therefore nothing else but the sum of his actions, nothing else . . . but what his life is . . . In life, a man commits himself, draws his own portrait and there is nothing but that portrait."

Senior, student, what you do with that sheepskin—how you will use your education — what you will make of your life is up to you.

* * *

Yet, always remember that you do not function alone—you do not rejoice alone, and you do not suffer alone. What you will do will influence others, perhaps beneficially, perhaps adversely . . . but in the struggle for success, either temporal or eternal, you are not alone.

In the words of Bertrand Russell: "United with his fellowmen by the strongest of all ties, the tie of a common doom, the free man finds that a new vision is with him always, shedding over every daily task the light of love."

We are not alone. We are bound to involvement with others; then let the inescapable involvement be beneficient.

Again Russell: "Very brief is the time in which we can help them, in which their happiness or misery is decided. Be it ours to shed sunshine on their path, to lighten their sorrows by the balm of sympathy, to give them the joy of a never-tiring affection, to strengthen failing courage, to instil faith in hours of despair."

* * *

What you are, what you will be; the self that you will present in the external relationships of a progressing world is the sum total of your individual actions.

The decisions, and the results, will be yours. Mold them wisely, make them thoughtfully, and accept them confidently.

The University will look for a return. It will suffer from your negligence, and profit from your endeavor.

Good luck! (cw)

Won't Happen . . .

In the next year many important things will happen. But equally important are those things which won't happen.

. . . Following are the highlights of things-not-to-look-for on campus in the coming year.

The University Party holds weekly, open meetings.

The food in Lenoir Hall improve.

Social conditions in men's dormitories improve.

More than a few students be allowed to vote in Orange County.

UNC get a new student union.

Fraternity - dormitory hostility subside.

Again

They've done it again.

Student Legislature Thursday night rescinded its vote on a Campus Travel Committee bill because President Inman Allen didn't like a couple of phrases.

Bill Bowerman, author of the bill, said he reintroduced his bill to "satisfy his (Inman's) desires." Allen, said Bowerman, "seriously considered vetoeing" the bill.

So?

Why didn't Legislature let President Allen use his veto power, and then either pass the bill over his veto or let it remain dead? Or did the legislators really know what they were voting on the first time, since they so agreeably altered the bill and passed it a second time. (jc)

Fingernails In Lenoir Hall

To The Editors:

Although it's late in the year, I would like to offer some advice to the manager of Lenoir Hall—in the (perhaps vain) hopes that come September he will raise the standards of his establishment. That is . . . food.

I had the worst shock of my post-pubescent life some time ago when I discovered a fingernail (Lord help me if it was a toenail) in a salad. This trauma spirited a discussion over treasures found: (2) buttons (one with calico); (1) wire from a brush (resulting in severe oral lacerations); (1) roach (medium-rare) in addition to those listed by J. Clark in Thursday's DTH. How in hell are unknowing diners (term used loosely) supposed to eat this food? Those who have sharp eyes are a step ahead. Thus, Advice No. 1: Either inspect all the food or strain it.

The menus in the Black Pit are too repetitious and monotonous, showing no taste whatever. The hamburgers (Mon.-Tues. left-overs until they're gone) lie pathetically in the plate, begging for an easy death, while the stew (served all week) usually takes the form of an amoeba grown fat on Wilson Hall rejects. Spaghetti—a specialty and treat—is overly sweet and celeried, resembling a multilated floor mop with vengeance in its heart and paint on its surface. Therefore, Advice No. 2: Take more care in food preparation and vary the menu.

Someone plays music which is calculated to help the nauseated patron forget the mess in front of him. Since vinegar is at a premium how about serving non-bitter greens? And about the "gravy" which tastes like rice over rice, potatoes over potatoes, water over water.

I am quite serious, and if I had the strength (you see, I eat at Leoir) I would picket the place, but I have to conserve energy.

'Freedom Still Issue'–Whitener

To The Editors,
The Daily Tar Heel

Campaign advertising and its costs are a national disgrace. The high cost of running for office puts such beyond the reach of the average man. In a democracy, public office is not only an obligation but it is a duty. Thus, when it costs $100,000 or more for a senator or governor to run for office in South Carolina and proportionately more in North Carolina, we have created a possibility for graft and corruption. Any intelligent reader of the newspapers knows that the sums spent for public office are far greater than those published. Many know of donations given by special interests, sadly enough some of them by business, for which they expect some reward in the way of contracts or appointments or favors. As long as this condition exists, corruption will continue to flourish.

The law limits a candidate for the Congress to a very modest amount. It is privately reported, however, that this has been exceeded many times in North Carolina, and possibly in this very district. It does not matter that a candidate does not expend it himself, but it does matter tremendously as to who makes donations and for what purpose.

We firmly believe that if we can win on May 26 that it will be a blow for freedom, for lower taxes, and for economy in government. In the last analysis, however, it is up to the voters who must turn out in large numbers. The "promising politicians" have all but given away the last of our liberties. The hand on the Clock for Freedom is nearing the hour of no return. It is our hope that we can do something to preserve our liberties before that clock strikes twelve.

SG Coordinating Body Suggested

To The Editors:

Once again the University of North Carolina has witnessed that amazing ineptitude or blind fate which continually schedules noted speakers, debators, concerts and beauty contests on the same night and in direct conflict with each other.

Last Tuesday night saw William Kiplinger, distinguished journalist, speaking to a half-full Howell Hall audience while George Shearing played in Memorial Hall, sponsored by GMAB. Both of these events were well worth seeing and hearing. What unkind gods scheduled them to appear at the same time?

Last fall, Michael Harrington and Fulton Lewis III debated HUAC and the famous (or infamous as some would have it) movie, "Operation Abolition." Carroll Hall was filled to absolute capacity with spectators jamming the aisles and windows. Literally hundreds of students were turned away because of lack of space. This space could have been provided by Memorial Hall. Unfortunately the Yack Beauty Contest was being held at the same time in that building.

What agency — if there is one— schedules these events to be at the same time? The two examples cited above are few compared to the many other similar instances. Granted, different organizations sponsor these different events, and granted under the present situation, this makes comprehensive planning impossible. But this condition need-n't continue.

Student Government has already set up many committees which have accomplished no visible good. Why not set up one more that could coordinate all appearances by speakers and entertainers? By careful scheduling and by having the organizations sponsoring the speakers find out from the committee what days and times were open, Carolina would be able to avoid the spectacle of seeing one of America's foremost journalists insulted by an undersized audience and the equally poor sight of hundreds of disgruntled would be debate listeners turned away because of lack of space.

If the committee turned out to be impractical, it could be scrapped and go the way of so many other S. G. committees.

But one is inclined to doubt that the committee would prove ineffectual. With widespread campus consideration and help, these needless conflicts of guest speakers and entertainers could become things of the past.

Wellman Told To Do Research

To the Editors: (The below is an article in answer to Wellman's retort of 13 May.

To Mr .Wade Wellman:

I would like to know if you are a member of the Air Force high command. You must be if you have access to information of the type you have been giving out. The information you gave on the Skybolt missile is not available to the public in either civilian or military publications.

According to Department of Defense Fact Sheet 344-60, the Skybolt is an air-to-surface missile of hypersonic speed and having an inertial guidance system. I doubt that they filled you in on this system in the English department. For your information an inertial guidance system is designed to hold a missile on a predetermined course (ballistic trajectory) to its target. The Skybolt has no intercept system or a way to detonate itself if it should intercept an aircraft. The only way a Skybolt could "kill" an aircraft would be for the plane to fly into the missile. The odds against this are spectacular.

In short, if you are going to write any more articles of this nature I suggest that you go back and take English I where they teach you how to do RESEARCH or someone may accuse you of irresponsible journalism.

Jaywalkers Given Rebuff

To the Editors:

While walking across campus during the last several weeks, we have become increasingly aware of a trend that has developed to take the shortest route regardless of the walks that have been provided. Numerous scars have appeared across heretofore well-grassed and well-cared-for lawns. It has necessitated the erection of more chain fences which add little to the appearance of the campus. Although some short cuts have been done. My used over the years in some of the more remote areas of the campus, these have been few due to the generally well-planned walk system that exists. We feel that it would be worthwhile to remind those who through either neglect or disrespect ignore reasonable courtesy and mar the campus.

"Now Are You Ready To Repair The Henhouse?"

Article, Irresponsible, Unfounded

The May-June issue of "Campus Illustrated" has some really tremendous features that are bound to captivate its collegiate audience.

There is an informative outline of "22 Sure-Fire Ways To Catch a Man," a photo section on a beach-suit-clad Florida State University coed who "loves" to do the twist and, in an attempt at a more academic vein, an expose of the "Red Revival on Campus: Communists Push Drive To Win Student Support."

Unfortunately, however, the magazine's appeal to the loins is more convincing than its appeal to the political mind.

The "CI Staff Report" on campus Communism traces the party movement from the 1920 Red scare through the depression and McCarthyism, whose "excesses and revulsion" gave the Communists a "golden opportunity" to infiltrate American campuses and "victimize and exploit" college students.

* * *

Quoting an FBI official, the magazine outlines the methods by which the Reds foist off their evil designs on unsuspecting youth: an intensive speech campaign national publications, special youth committees and promotion of student uprisings and discontent by means of mob violence and subversion through peace movements.

"It has been reported that Communist cells in recent years have been actively operating on such campuses as Columbia University . . . the University, Chicago University, Northwestern University and the Universities of Minnesota and California," the magazine asserts.

This statement reveals the glaring fault in Campus Illustrated's "analysis" of the Communist situation: there is no substantive evidence presented to back up the sensational charges.

* * *

"It has been reported that" is hardly any proof that Red cells at the University or any other school really exisit, or even if such subversive groups do really exist, that they wield any sort of influence or power.

The magazine's two other efforts at supplying evidence aren't very powerful either.

Brandishing HUAC chairman Francis Walter's warning that "the strength of the Communist movement is in direct ratio to the intensity of the efforts of a few who are trained and disciplined agents," it cites the now famous 1960 San Francisco demonstrations against the committee as an example of how the Reds have duped well-meaning students.

But, as has been pointed out many times, the demonstrations have not been proven Communist-inspired. The FBI has never pressed charges against the so-called Communists cheerleaders who egged on the picketers. If these activists really were Communists, why weren't they ever arrested for subversive activities?

* * *

The magazine also explains that the Communists "can dupe students sincerely dedicated to peace into signing petitions urging the weakening of United States military defenses."

Yet although this charge serves as a handy smear tactic, the peace movement has not been proved Communist-directed either. It is indeed strange that the red-blooded Americans who are usually the first to level these criticisms forget so thoroughly the traitional American concept of innocense below being proven guilty.

* * *

Even more untenable is the magazine's second main line of substantiation citing the statements of the few remaining Red leaders as to the virulence of the party's effectiveness. National Secretary Benjamin Davis, for instance, crows that after his speeches the students "were impressed with me . . . They were people whose activities must be directed in the right direction . . ."

But using the Communists' own statements as support for their potency and danger contradicts completely what the alarmists are prone to mouth in another context: that the Russians can never be trusted, that they will tell lies whenever it suits them.

If Russian proposals or evaluations of world issues are usually denounced as lies, why are the Reds' statements on their success in duping students always taken at face value?

Fallacious arguments aside, it is conceivable that in the future Communists could form an effective program among students, or successfully dupe students activists.

* * *

It is rather difficult for any casual reader of Communist-controlled "New Horizon for Youth" to perceive its direction, and it is often difficult to distinguish Communists from leftists.

But it is gross irresponsibility to create hysteria without proof, and assert the danger of a non-existent threat. The best antidote to the possibility of student subversion is an alert and well-informed student body, one which hardly needs to be fawned over by HUAC the FBI— or even "Campus Illustrated."

Reflections

"I know of no safe depository of the ultimate powers of the society but the people themselves; and, if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with a wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them, but to inform their discretion."—THOMAS JEFFERSON.

"The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right; and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."—THOMAS JEFFERSON.

"Sometimes it is said that man cannot be trusted with the government of himself. Can he, then, be trusted with the government of others? Or have we found angels in the forms of kings to govern him? Let history answer this question:"—THOMAS JEFFERSON.

'Pay Students For College'

* * *

It is estimated that every year about one-third of America's high school students who are clearly "college material" do not go to college. At the same time it is continually pointed out that there is no need today for any first-class American student to go without a college education; there are enough scholarships and loans, enough publicly supported colleges—in short, enough opportunities for a free education—for any student who really wants a college education to be able to get one.

* * *

Thus all forms of higher education, paid OR free, present many high school seniors with a very difficult choice when it is time to think about college. A student can either go on being "supported" by his parents, who will then continue to exercise the kind of control that goes with paying for things (for in America the man who pays the piper calls the tune); or, unless he is lucky enough to receive one of the rare full scholarships, he can work part time—nights and Saturdays—pinching and scraping and dividing his energies, to support himself. He either can plan not to marry, perhaps for years; or he can look for a girl who is willing to work and put him through college—and, in the end, expect to establish toward her the same kind of dependent and resentful attitude that led him to turn against his parents.

* * *

We still cling to a belief, however, that the years spent in obtaining a liberal arts education are years during which the majority of young adults are supported while they do something which they enjoy too much and which is doubtfully useful.

All of this is essentially archaic nonsense, inappropriate for America in the mid-twentieth century. Higher education for as many of our young people as possible is not a luxury but a necessity in a society that needs ever more high-level skills. We as a people need college-educated people in all fields, just as we need policemen, postal clerks, garage attendants, bank clerks, truck drivers, copy boys. We pay the latter for doing their jobs because we recognize clearly that they are needed. But if learning is essential to a society, then those who are learning are also doing useful work NOW, while they are reading Plato, studying mathematics or languages. Doing college work properly requires as many hours a day and as much enetrgy as any other job, if not more. We need to stop talking about support and subsistence, gifts and loans and grants for students. We need to stop penalizing young people who must postpone vocational choices until they have had a chance to find out whether they want to be mathematicians or engineers or architects or astronauts—as if the process of finding themselves were somehow an illicit privilege, which had to be paid for like a luxury vacation.

The time has come when what college students are doing should be recognized as WORK. Properly recognized, paid for like any other work, a college education might also be taken more seriously. Young men and women who had to earn the right to study, by using the opportunity well, might, like the GIs of World War II, who knew that they had to do good college work to take advantage of the GI Bill, become more serious, hard-working, good students.

How would we finance a program of salaries for qualified college students? The same way we finance other necessary services—by public funds through taxes and by private funds from individuals and foundations. Education for those who are being trained for the careers recognized as most directly useful to society—doctors, teachers, nurses, engineers—would most logically be financed out of public funds. Because we are a country with a mixed economy, where private initiative and private generosity supplement our tax-supported activities, some of the education for other kinds of careers and for students who need a longer time to think, to experiment, to explore, might be privately underwritten. But all students should be paid for doing useful work, no longer treated as a dependent, overprivileged, over-indulged group who ought to be supported, domineered over, made to suffer now for what they may be able to do later. Nor should they be tr eated as a group who must work twice as hard in order to pay for something for which they should in fact themselves be paid. Our system is out of date, a legacy from the past that no longer fits any modern country. We need to change it.

RECOMMENDATION: Ralph McGill, this year's Commencement speaker, is almost worth sitting through the drawn-out Commencement exercises, to hear him speak. He's not a great speaker but he is a great man—one of the nation's bravest journalists who for over 20 years has withstood the attacks of the DAR, KKK and White Citizens Council picketers, angry Georgia legislatures and incensed state newspaper editors, has been dubbed "Rastus" by segregationists and worse names . . . and who is still a fine refined old Southern gentleman. 'Zero' Is Great!, Great?

Review: ZERO (new magazine).

From the seething underground of intellectual activity in Chapel Hill has appeared another "little magazine," whose forthrightness, integrity and contemporary promise to give violent impetus to the pataphysical revival on the Carolina Campus.

Published by the Zeropological Literary Society, this new magaine, "Zero," displays a remarkable apprehension of a too-uncommon phenomenon which, the disguised, is perhaps one of the most significant, not to say insignificant, single fact of the modern consciousness.

This is a "Nada-existential Apperception" which is scathingly and simply revealed in the three selections which appear in the first edition.

A poem by Editor Myles Eric Ludvig is a subjective musing manifested in familiar images, yet soaring to a pataphysical level of amazing, even breathtaking, revelation. Mr. Ludvig is a true visionary.

Mr. Peter Van Riper has dealt with the imposing metaphysical problems expressed in objectivist style and superimposed upon a harmonious synthesis of Freudian and Christian symbolism which is a genuine statement for our time. Upon contemplation one conjures visions heretofore existent only in the ancient Celtic and Nordic myths, here revitalized in the idiom of today's youth.

The final poem, by A. J. Winkleman is a simple statement of despair, yet hope in the joy of Nirvana. His precise use of color-words such as "love" speak to the reader in gentle ye deafening tones.

Finally, in a magnificent stroke, the editors conclude this first, exciting edition with a cryptic crossword, which to those who persevere, will reveal the underlying, unifying significance of the entire magazine. It represents an understatement of their manifesto which is certain to greatly affect literary life in Chapel Hill.

In closing praise I should like to quote a paragraph from the magazine's prospectus:

"Though the ostensible nature of laniation is all too lucidly apparent, we feel that ZERO, whose aphoristic nomenclature belies its intentional character, will be a gargantuan stride on the highway of literary revivification."

SL Must Do Something . . .

To the Editors:

During the spring elections campaign, some of the more common phrases sounded something like this . . . "What we need to insure more participation in Student Government is better communications . . . Perhaps by editorials in the Daily Tar Heel." Another good one was ". . . through closer work with the Communications Committee."

Everyone listened and nodded their heads astutely. No one bothered to ask "What are you going to communicate?" While all of this talk went on, everyone seemed to believe that the solution to all the ills of any organization was better communication. The fact that seemed to be overlooked is that better communication is not a panacea for all organizational ills.

Before communications will provide a quick miracle cure for the ailments of the many diseased organizations, SOMETHING to communicate will have to be discovered.

This "something" must contain something new and interesting for the subject with whom the organization wishes to communicate. Student government might look inward and see what it has that is worth communicating to the dorm man or the student in general. Before the penicillin-like cure is effected, SG must present an interesting, appealing program or offer or opportunity. The same old descriptions, the same old catch-phrases, will not do. The word "dynamic" was used a lot during campaign also, perhaps SG and other groups who complain could turn the full force of this word upon themselves.

Too Many Lawyers?

To the Editors:

As everyone should know by now, Democrat and Republican Primaries are being held throughout North Carolina and the nation. Such primaries are presumed to present opposite political convictions in the November elections, thus affording the people a choice.

Nothing could be further from the truth. I submit that the issues are not between two political parties but rather between the people and the politicians. As a taxpayer for many years, I have been on the receiving end of taxes and the curtailment of liberties guaranteed me under the Constitution. I have seen federal tyranny increase to such an extent that we are even faced with the loss of our voting rights in the not too distant future.

I became convinced that the only way the people would be truly represented would be for one of them to come forward for office. It is for this reason that I consented to do so upon the urging of a number of patriotic Americans.

One of the main reasons that influenced me was the fact that the Congress is approximately 90% lawyers. Here in North Carolina even more so. Law schools at Chapel Hill, Durham, and Wake Forest turn out lawyers on a mass production basis. These are trained to seek public office for the power to spend taxes which come from the labors of the people.

Lawyers write our laws, frame our tax bills, and preside over the collection of taxes, often exorbitant. Such are necessary to maintain the huge overhead of government today, which employs more people than all of agriculture. They appoint lawyers as judges, thus increasing their monopoly through interpretation.

I am not opposed to lawyers as such, because they are as necessary as some of the other professions. I would be just as opposed if 90 per cent were doctors or teachers or businessmen. The pity of it all is that they are not really law makers, but politicians, whom Webster defines as "those engaged in politics for personal gain."

On May 26 I will oppose the incumbent lawyer for Member of Congress. One of the main reasons is to try for better balance, to impress upon the Kennedy administration free enterprise is the foundation of this country. The use of political power against the steel industry is an indication of what Lawyer Kennedy thinks of those who are not represented. If you are a business man or work for one, if you believe in free enterprise rather than government ownership and eventual tyranny, then go to the polls on May 26 and vote for a better balance in Congress.

J. E. Wadsworth Is Commended

To the Editor:

I would like to acknowledge through this brief letter, my appreciation for the way in which Mr. James E. Wadsworth, Director of Housing, deals with the students. Mr. Wadsworth is polite, courteous, and above all affectionate to those who go to him for help. He is one of the few persons who is in contact with almost all students of this university, and I am sure that everybody who comes in contact with him is greatly impressed by his personality. Surely, Mr. Wadsworth is an asset to this great institution.

Irrationality In Fraternities

On page four of today's DTH there is a long, thorough investigation of the fraternity system as it exists at UNC, and of the efforts that are being made to correct its faults. The article seeks to review the progress that has been made in four years and to predict some of the future development of the system.

Despite the claims of several national magazines recently that the system is dying in America, fraternities are obviously thriving at Carolina. It is doubtful, however, if they will continue to thrive in the face of adverse national trends unless more reforms are made quickly.

The article fails for instance, to deal with discretionary clauses; the parts of fraternity charters that prohibit membership to Negroes, Jews, and other minority groups. This omission was an honest mistake and the only serious fault is an otherwise objective investigation. The problem cannot, however, be ignored.

What plans does the IFC have in regard to these clauses? How long will it be until the IFC constitution outlaws these clauses and how will this ruling be enforced? And will members of minority groups actually be pledged by Carolina fraternities? Or does the IFC choose to ignore this problem?

These questions are not meant as criticism of a body that is obviously making much progress. But we do think it is time that some statement of policy was made by the IFC concerning these clauses so that the campus could know where it stands.

Perhaps many fraternity men feel that these clauses are their right and are part of "the freedom to choose one's associates." And perhaps they are right, but this is a very irrational interpretation of this right, and in our younger days, irrationality used to be called stupidity. That was before we became sophisticated, however.

Equally irrational, however, are the other criteria by which members are chosen who pass the discrimination test. Personality, scholarship, dress, high school honors, athletic ability, and appearance are some of these "important qualifications." Perhaps there is a rational argument that will justify these qualifications other than personality, but we haven't heard one yet.

The IFC of course feels that the individual house should select its own standard of membership. But the absence of any set of "model standards" endorsed by the IFC helps perpetuate these superficial yardsticks of judgment new used, and shows that only the bare surface of the membership problem has been scratched by this group.

This can further be seen in reference to what Dean Long calls "this provincialism of pledging boys from one town, area or prep school." The administration here makes a legitimate criticism of the membership selection process by pointing out that many houses limit the experience potential of their members while here at school. This problem is ignored, however, by IFC President Jim Dillashaw.

"What would happen if this area runs out of good prospects?" he asks. "Then the fraternity would find themselves seriously cramped."

This response shows a complete lack of comprehension of the actual problem which any fraternity faces that picks its members by a selective process—the problem of limitation and isolation from contact with the world as it actually exists outside the ivy-covered signs that mark the Chapel Hill city limits.

We just can't believe, you see, despite the warnings of the Organization Man, that the qualities necessary for fraternity membership at Carolina are the qualities that will lead to success in that world beyond. And we refuse to accept the doctrine of limited success with few risks that the pinbearers seem to be endorsing.

The story of the progress made by the IFC and fraternities in general must therefore be qualified with criticism of problems that have not as yet been dealt with. And this story must also be footnoted with serious doubts as to the chances of a successful continuation of this progress. We're skeptics, you see.

Fraternities: A Look At Their Status

By JOE DeBLASIO

The recent acceptance by the administration of a plan to regulate fraternity membership and replace the "80 per cent rule" was one indication of the growing responsibility of the Inter-Fraternity Council for governing the actions of the members of the 24 social fraternities at Carolina.

This action was not a spur-of-the-moment action. Four years ago fraternities on this campus were free-wheeling organizations that did virtually as they pleased. Today they are, for the most part, responsible organizations with much to contribute to the academic community.

What brought this change to fraternities at Chapel Hill? Why have the fraternities adopted this responsibility? These questions can best be answered through studying the fraternity system in more detail, looking at what some members of the administration have to say, attempting to draw some conclusions.

Hazing

Some time ago one of the major problems with fraternities at Carolina was "hazing." This can be loosely defined as "serious physical or mental injury inflicted on a pledge for punishment."

In the early fifties the administration and the IFC put the stops on actions like "rides," "showers" and "rat courts." Since then the IFC has developed "Greek Week" to replace the "Hell Week" that used to precede initiations at many houses.

During "Greek Week" pledges from all 24 houses compete for honors in scholarship, athletics, extracurriculars and other phases of fraternity operations.

According the Dean William Long, Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, physical hazing has been virtually eliminated but there is still a small amount of mental harrassment used by houses. He feels, however, that hazing is on its way out.

Extracurriculars

Fraternities have long been interested in getting their members to participate in extracurricular activities. Other than the good experience derived from these activities, there are two major reasons for this interest.

The first is prestige. The more men the individual house has in extracurricular activities, especially the top student government jobs, the higher it rates in prestige.

The second reason is for social purposes. Getting into extracurricular activities means meeting other people, including coeds.

Vital To Student Government

"I am pleased to see both fraternity and dormitory men in extracurricular activities," said Dean Long, "but I would also like to see more organization in the dorms. I don't think the student government system would be effective without fraternities, but I am disappointed in fraternities that do not participate."

Dean Long also feels that with organization the dorms could have a greater voice in student government. Dean Charles Henderson, Dean of Student Affairs, said that he "would like to see more dormitory men active but felt that since fraternities were more organized, they deserved the laurels of the high offices. My main objective is for responsible student leadership on all levels."

Fraternity Life

Many people are under the impression that fraternity life is built around the party and that frat men study between their weekend binges.

This is not the case at Chapel Hill. Although Dean Long's office estimates that the average fraternity has about two combo parties a month, Jim Dillashaw, President of the Interfraternity Council feels that it is even less than two.

"I would be surprised if any house had more than a little over one combo party a month," said Dillashaw, "and I feel that this number has dropped considerably in the past four years."

Both Dean Long and Dean Henderson feel that the party situation is not serious but Dean Henderson added, "I deplore the fraternity that lives from party to party."

"Grossness"

Dean Long seemed seriously concerned with the increasing amount of "grossness" that is going on at Carolina fraternity parties. Dillashaw felt that this type of action has been on the decrease.

"I think that parties here about four years ago were much worse than they are today," said Dillashaw, "and I feel that they are not getting any worse."

Fraternities party in an organized manner. Their parties range from the small, Friday night jukebox party to the big pledge weekends that often run into the $1,000 bracket. According to a survey of five fraternities by Dean Henderson's office last year, not one of the fraternities in question had less than a $5 social fee and one ran as high as $8 per month.

But, on the whole, parties at Carolina are not out of hand and the big "party house" is on the decline because of many academic pressures.

Selectivity

Why are some men chosen for fraternity membership while others are not even extended a bid?

Why did Carolina fraternities, in the year 1960-61, initiate only 278 of the 532 men they had pledged in the fall?

Some critics of the fraternity system point to these facts and claim they are an undemocratic method of operation. Fraternities base their rushing and initiations on one of the oldest rules of mankind—the freedom to choose one's associates.

During rush week the fraternities at UNC look over prospects, many of them carefully screened even before they reach the house, and choose their associates for the next four years. Considerable care is taken to make sure each individual "fits" into the pattern of the house.

Desired Qualities

In Dean Henderson's survey, houses listed personality, scholarship, dress, high school honors, athletic ability and appearance as some of the more important things that they looked for in a rushee. Pledges are "blackballed" for these same reasons.

Dean Henderson, Dean Long and Dillashaw all felt that the present rush week of about five days to a week was too short for the house and the rushee to make an accurate decision about his final choice. This may account for part of the difference between those who pledge and those who initiate.

Dean Long and Dean Henderson said that the deferred rush scheduled to begin in 1963 will alleviate some of this. Dean Henderson also said "standards for selection are entirely inadequate."

Dillashaw felt that, under the circumstances, rush was as fair as it could be. He added that, "under the present system it is impossible, with 300 to 500 boys passing through the house, to be fair to all of them."

"Blackballs"

A large amount of criticism has surrounded the "blackball" method of choosing members in the individual fraternities. Basically the blackball system works in this manner: If the brother in question dislikes a rushee or a pledge he may disenfranchise him from the fraternity by a single no or "blackball." Some houses use the two or three system where no one brother can eliminate someone by himself.

Regardless of the method used, virtually all fraternities have some method of individual approval or disapproval. Dean Long brands the individual blackball as "undemocratic" but this is still the preferred method of operation at Carolina.

Provincialism

Because of this blackball, many fraternities limit themselves as to the type of men they pledge.

Dean Long said that "this provincialism of pledging boys from one town, area or prep school forms a kind of geographical incest in the house. This is a poor situation."

Dean Henderson feels that this type of pledging breeds conformism and that "the houses limit themselves by choice."

Dillashaw felt that it is the fraternity's choice how they rush but he felt that a house may limit itself if it only chooses one geographical area to draw from. "What happens if this area of the state runs out of good prospects?" asked Dillashaw, "then the fraternity would find themselves seriously cramped."

Sometime back in 1960 the administration passed their 80 per cent rule. This rule was passed because the administration felt that fraternities were not living up to the standards of the academic community.

Much talk surrounded the 80 per cent rule although not many people knew exactly what it was. The way the rule was set up was: Each house was required to have 80 per cent of its active brothers at or above a "C" average. If this was not the case the fraternity would receive probation and if the house failed to make the grade two semesters in a row it would lose rushing privileges until such time it could meet the standard.

At the beginning of this academic year four fraternities on the UNC campus could not participate in rush. Those houses had not met the qualifications of 80 per cent for two consecutive semesters. For a while it looked like many houses were in the same serious danger.

Evasion of Rule

Many houses were beginning to feel the danger of losing their rushing privileges. They were evading the 80 per cent rule through the "deactivation" method. Briefly, this method worked like this: The house would "deactivate" members of the brotherhood who thought they would not make a "C" average.

Many of these "inactives" were inactive in word only in order to evade the rule. The houses had found a loophole in the rule and were making full use of it. In Dean Henderson's survey, three of five fraternities on the sheet deactivated sub-standard members.

What happened to the all-fraternity average that cause the 80 per cent rule to come into effect? In Dean Henderson's survey, the all-fraternity average was a little more than a "C-plus" or about a 2.83 (on a system counting 1 for an "A") for the five years preceding 1960-61.

Even though the all-men's average was about the same for these years, the faculty felt that the fraternities should have some incentive to improve their academic standing.

Rule Caused Friction

With the entrance of the 80 per cent rule on the fraternity scene, there was considerable friction developed between the administration and the fraternities. In May 1961 a special conference was held at Southern Pines to try to iron out these differences.

The leadership of the IFC has been working for over a year and a half to eliminate this rule but the administration said at Southern Pines and frequently during the year that the IFC would have to present them with an acceptable rule to replace their 80 per cent rule before they would revoke it.

On April 30, 1962, the IFC added a by-law to its constitution which states that any brother in a fraternity that did not make a "C" average total would be deactivated automatically.

This by-law was designed to put the academic responsibility on the individual instead of a collective or house basis.

On Friday, May 8, 1962, the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities revoked the 80 per cent rule with the stipulation that the IFC maintain responsibility for the individual fraternity scholarship.

The IFC agreed to put its "C" average rule in place of the 80 per cent rule. In addition to the cumulative "C" average requirement for activation, the IFC imposed a two-semester "C" average rule which states that any brother who did not make a "C" average for two consecutive semesters would be de-activated.

Test of IFC

Now the IFC is on "probation." The very group that one of its own past-presidents called "the most spineless organizations on campus" has rid itself of one of the most severe rules in campus history.

Dean Long has expressed his confidence in the fraternities. Jim Dillashaw said that "the IFC has a general plan to enforce its new rule and specific details will be worked out in the fall."

"I feel that this suspension of the 80 per cent rule is a sign of the increasing confidence that the administration is putting in the IFC," Dillashaw continued. "This rule will be a hard rule to enforce but I am going to do everything in my power to enforce it.

"We are going to have house-to-house inspection," said the IFC president, "along with checks on kitchen lists and intramural rosters.

"The IFC does not feel," continued Dillashaw, "that this can be done without the cooperation of the individual houses. It is quite a challenge for the fraternity system at Carolina as well as the IFC."

Four Years' Progress

So, the fraternities that once were regarded as "just a bunch of boys that party together" have taken on a great deal of responsibility in the past four years. Dean Henderson, Dean Long and Jim Dillashaw all agree that fraternities have improved much in the past four years.

The 24 fraternities that once ran free and then were abruptly halted by a scholarship rule have now stated that they want more confidence and responsibility to govern themselves.

Today there seems to be a new breed of fraternity at Carolina that wants to be self-governing and has taken a major step in that direction.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

This is the final column of my eighth year of writing for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and this year, as in every preceding year, when I come to the last column of the season, I come to a problem.

My contract with the makers of Marlboro calls for me to write a humor column and, truly, I do the best I can—all things considered, I am not, I should explain, a jolly man by nature. Why should I be? First of all, I am shorter than everybody. Second, there are moths in my cashmere jacket. Third, I work in television.

All the same, when it comes time to write this column, I light a good Marlboro Cigarette, put aside my trauma, and try with all the strength in my tiny body to make some jokes. Sometimes it works better than others, but on the last column of the year, it just flatly doesn't work at all.

Even in the very beginning this was true—and that, you will recall, was eight years ago when I was relatively young and strong and had not yet developed that nasty knock in my transmission. Well do I remember sitting down to write the final column of my first year. Day followed barren day, and not a yock, not a boff, not a zinger did I produce. I was about to give up humor and take a job selling mechanical dogs when all of a sudden, in a blinding flash, I realized why I couldn't think of any jokes!

I leapt up from my typewriter and ran as fast as my little fat legs would carry me to the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and I tugged my forelock, and I said, "Sirs, I am well aware that you have engaged me to write a humor column, but today, as I approach the final column of the season, I am far too misty to be funny, for the final column of the season is, after all, a leave-taking, and when I think of saying goodbye to my audience—the swellest audience any columnist ever had—the college students of America—wonderful human beings, every man and wise but kindly—astute but compassionate woman of them—wise but kindly—astute but compassionate—perspicacious but forbearing—when, sirs, I think of saying goodbye to such an audience, I am too shook up even to consider levity, and so I ask you, sirs, to let me, in the final column of the year, forego humor and instead write a simple, dignified, straightforward farewell."

Then I took out my bandanna, wiped my eyes, ears, nose, and throat and waited for a reply from the makers of Marlboro.

They sat around the polished beard room table, the makers, their handsome brows knit in concentration, puffing thoughtfully on the Marlboros in their tattooed hands. At length they spoke. "Yes," they said simply.

I never doubted they would say yes. People who make a cigarette as good as Marlboro must themselves be good. People who lavish such care on blending tobaccos so mild and flavorful, on devising a filter so clean and white, on boxing a flip-top box so flip-top, on packing a soft pack so soft—people like that are one hundred percent with me!

And so from that day forward, the final column of the year—including the one you are, I devoutly hope, now reading—makes no attempt to be funny, but is instead a simple thank you and au revoir.

Thank you and au revoir, makers of Marlboro. The memory of our eight years together will remain ever fresh in my heart, and I would like to state for all the world to hear that if you want me back again next year, I shall expect a substantial raise in salary.

Thank you and au revoir, college students of America. May good luck attend all your ventures. Stay well. Stay happy. Stay loose.

'University And Its Meaning' Contest Won By Senior Fred Anderson

into the field until they composed a vast rainbow of colored tassels, a plethora of scholastic differentiations, an army of instructors which would have terrified the medieval student.

Further examination revealed a number of faces I recognized as those of men given entirely to the organization of papers and documents and the handling of vast sums of money, functions alien for the most part to the Medieval and, to a lesser extent, European universities.

From this moment of doubt it was a simple matter to recall that this situation could never have occurred in the Paris of 1200, since Paris had no physical plant at all at the time, not to speak of tuition, fees and room rental necessary to justify the existence of these "extras." Moreover, it is not necessary to point out that the colored gowns and ribbons were symbolic of more than grammar, rhetoric, logic; arithmetic, astronomy, music and geometry. It was hard to feel a part of a society of teachers and scholars on that twentieth century American morning.

One may always hope, however, if only for the sake of simplicity of definition, that appearances do not betray an underlying reality and that subsequently we would be able still to discover in the structure of the vast modern American university the strong, clear, unambiguous characteristics of the medieval and modern European universities. Unfortunately, this is not the case, as we well know. The American university is a hydra of purposes which attempts to educate (a synonym for prepare) the television cameraman, the nurse, the historian, the recreational supervisor, the mathematician, the businessman and the professionals.

But here we are concerned for the present at least with a simple definition. I would volunteer this one: the American university is an extensive conglomeration of special partitions of learning loosely united by an administrative hierarchy empowered with the authority to grant degrees for adequate performance in any one of the given areas. In most cases it has a multanimity of purposes.

* * *

This definition is not meant to be prejudicial in any way; that it is inexact and incomplete is my fault entirely, but then recall that I am a product of an American university. Our next step, however, does lead us into the controversial matter of evaluation, for this new university must be examined and some judgment passhed upon it, or else I stray from my purpose.

From the mass of material with which three years of life in a modern American university have supplied me, not less than six generalizations seem necessary to characterize its purposes. In the first two years the university serves as a graduate school for American secondary education. Its purpose is to conclude what the high school has not finished.

Secondly, the university tacitly accepts the maxim "knowledge is power" and tries to equip a portion of its students with a trade, a way of making a living. In this sense, however, the university is still medieval, since it partially fulfills the function of the craft guild.

Thirdly, the university with its practical classroom techniques and extracurriculars attempts to provide a model of the real world in which the prospective citizen may develop the necessary responses before setting out in adult life.

In the fourth place the university strives to educate the new voter into a responsible citizen, fulfilling a patriotic duty.

Fifthly, the university tries to give some of its students a body of knowledge which will enable them to pursue highly specialized work in a particular area of academic inquiry, if they so wish. Lastly, the university still professes, albeit less often, to produce the "liberally educated man."

* * *

Now let us see what these values are worth. Somehow the university tries to do what the high school is charged with doing, and it succeeds remarkably well, at the expense of one or two of the four years it has at its disposal with each undergraduate. It seems that this problem is largely the result of trying to achieve universal higher education where it is neither wanted nor possible.

Not all students have the desire or ability to attempt the heavy fare of a university education; they want, and according to the democratic principles of this nation, should receive, the education they desire, as equals. The state of California has realized that this situation exists and has provided "terminal colleges" in which students may receive a mixture of general education and semi-professional training.

The existence of these schools by no means implies inferiority or incompetency on the part of those who attend; instead, it does imply the unfairness of the impractical and eventually impossible education "college" students receive when forced to become "university" students, a distinction made by Christopher Jencks in an article in Harper's magazine, October, 1961. Europe has realized this democratic truth and has provided through her technical and trade schools an example worthy of emulation.

This discussion clearly dissolves the second goal of the university, to give a man a trade, insofar as trades are taught in universities, for with the skills and crafts shifted to schools truly competent in this area the university may remove one more confusiing objective.

* * *

The third purpose discerned along the spectrum of purposes of the modern university was the miniaturization of society in the form of a university which educates by recreating the real world under semi-controlled conditions. One suspects that this is the result of that maverick breed of education which slipped such imposing terms as "Anglicized Pestalozzianism" and "Emilism" into American educators' vocabularies, along with a multitude of terms and concepts associated with the "progressive education" of Dewey's disciples, but this is not the case. This controlled environment revolves for the most part around extracurriculars, which are the only truly inter-disciplinary activities in which a student can engage. Here he acquires the over-all view, as poor and undisciplined as it is, of his society and its values, as well as a vocabulary for dealing with it.

Here no psychologist, historian, economist, theologian, anthropologist, sociologist or political scientist can impose his necessarily strict and particularized vocabulary upon him; the stops are out, and the student may or may not learn to communicate with his world. But more on this topic later, when we leave evaluation and turn to what SHOULD be.

The American university assumes at least part of the task of educating the citizen in the political virtues of a responsible democracy. We have in our national educational system, as the partition of knowledge known as "education" would be quick to acknowledge, a strong tradition of patriotic instruction in the structure and assumptions of American civil life.

In this day of ideological struggle, the study of institutions, both domestic and foreign, becomes a patriotic necessity upon which the survival of our nation may well depend. This is, of course, nothing new, since Alex de Toqueville, a Frenchman, recognized it a century ago, not to mention the less exact ideas of our "founding fathers" on the same subject. Yet the university in its multanimity cannot provide the rude, fundamental, intellectual care of political concepts from which popular discussions on political questions spring.

The result is what Paul Tillich calls the Idol of Security and what I would call the modern Stoicism of the American educated classes, which is characterized on the social level by the withdrawal of the citizen into the simple and noncontroversial ABRI of the family and on the political level by the new conservatism. During the symposium James Reston spoke reproachfully of the guy who gives up, goes home, and has seven children. There must have been a Roman with a trace of republican virtue left who said the same thing during the emperorship of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus.

* * *

Only a word is necessary concerning the fifth goal the university seems to have, which is the supply of PAX it provides for the diligent student which prepares him for advanced, precise work in a given small area. The university must always in a sense be a reservoir of accurate, objective knowledge, readily accessible to the trained researcher and ever present to temper his imagination with particles of fact. It should never, however, degenerate into a stale collection of catalogues one of which must be chosen and duly assimilated for a degree in a "specialty."

Something else must come before the student turns to mastering a given small body of knowledge and trying to contribute to it, and to this "something else" we now turn as the last goal characteristic of the modern university, that of providing the student with a "liberal education." Obviously, since it is the only one left, I must be planning a defense and a demonstration of how it is a sufficient

Cavaliers, Deacons Tie For First Place

By LOU ROSENTHAL

The South Carolina Gamecocks, blasted by Virginia in the first game of a doubleheader, 13-0, came back to dim the Cavaliers' chances of winning the ACC baseball title, by defeating the Virginians, 8-4 in the second game, played at Emerson Stadium yesterday.

The split throws Virginia into a first-place tie with Wake Forest, and ACC Commissioner Jim Weaver will decide whether to hold a playoff game, and when and where it will be played.

Spencer Tough

Virginia mound ace Bill Spencer pitched the seven-inning opener, shutting out the Gamecocks on just four singles. The right-hander struck out six in taking his sixth win against two losses. Both of the losses came in non-conference affairs. Spencer ran his scoreless inning attack to 42 innings.

South Carolina countered in the nightcap with Ed Holler, who shut out the Cavaliers for six and two-thirds innings. Holler allowed only five hits, and retired 14 men in order from the third to the seventh inning.

Bob Fox led the Virginians in the first game, getting a triple and two singles, driving in four runs. Spencer had a double and knocked in three runs, as did his batterymate, George Farson. Chris Tisdale slammed a 340-foot homer in the third inning. His round-tripper was the first hit off Gamecock hurler John Coleman.

Big Seventh

The Cavaliers got single runs in the second, third and fourth innings, and added two more in the sixth. Then in the seventh, they unloaded their bats for eight runs. They only got eight hits, but nine walks, and three Gamecock errors helped the Virginians along to their 11th win against 10 losses.

But the second contest was a different matter, as the South Carolinians built an eight-run lead and staved off a last-inning rally to win.

The Gamecocks started off with two runs in the first, and added single tallies in the third and fifth. The sixth and seventh saw two runs go up for the Gamecocks in each inning, to end their scoring.

Rally Fails

Virginia tried to come back, as Farson walked and Carter Scott drove him in in the seventh with a double. In the ninth, Tisdale got to second on an error, and moved to third on Farson's single. Scott then tripled both runners home and later scored when Bruce Rentch was safe on an error.

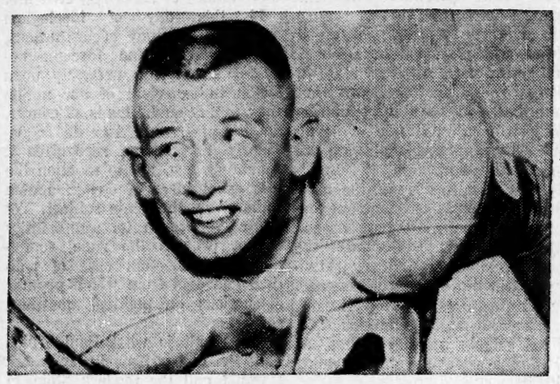
However, it was a case of too little, too late, as the Gamecocks forced the ACC championship into a tie.

Bobby Robinson led the South game, as he pounded a single, double and triple, and two RBI's. Jim Lanford had a double and a single in four at-bats, and Holler rapped two singles and drove in two Gamecock runs. Jack McCathern also had two singles.

The Gamecocks knocked thirteen hits in the second game, five for extra bases, while Virginia only managed five hits, though three were for extra bases.

Coleman absorbed the loss in the first tilt, his record standing at 4-4. Henry Massie was the loser for Virginia, and now stands 2-4.

The Conference title will probably be decided by a playoff game. Just when and where will be decided by Commissioner Weaver. Exams start for Virginia Thursday, and about the same time for Wake Forest. The NCAA District playoffs are scheduled to begin May 31.



JIM LECOMPTE, senior co-captain and first team All-ACC guard, was one of the toughest lineman in the conference for 1961.

Gilchrist Set Wrestling Scoring Mark

By ED DUPREE

Pete Gilchrist could well qualify as the top winter sports athlete of the year at UNC. The dignified senior wrestler set an all-time UNC scoring record on Coach Sam Barnes' team by scoring 36 points.

Pete was chiefly responsible for the team's rebound from five straight losses which saw the Tar Heels enter the ACC wrestling finals as a definite threat to take the championship from defending titleholder Maryland.

Now a lean six-footer, he began his eight years of wrestling as a 103-pound matman at Woodbury. Each year he advanced a weight class and by his senior year he competed in the 127-pound division.

Perrin Henderson, a senior at Woodbury when Pete was a freshman, taught Pete how to wrestle. "Perrin is the best wrestler I've ever seen," Gilchrist said.

When Pete entered UNC as a freshman in 1958, Perrin was again a senior at the same school. Just as they had in high school, the two wrestled each other frequently. During the 1958-59 season Perrin set a new UNC scoring mark of 30 points in a season. Three seasons later, the pupil broke the teacher's record.

The next year, his first on the varsity, Pete posted a 5-3 record, but he points out that two of the matches he lost were in the 147-pound division. Pete termed them signed to Gilchrist to give ..... "suicide missions," mainly assigned to Gilchrist to give him experience against heavier men. His normal wrestling weight has been 130 since entering college.

Scholastic probation kept Pete from wrestling during his junior year, and possibly from becoming the top three-year scorer in the school's history.

But this does not mean that Pete, a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, shuns studies. After graduation he plans to enter law school.

As for his performances this year Pete says, "It just seemed like things fell into place. I was always up for the right match."

Gilchrist's wrestling philosophy is: "keep shooting at him and he can't shoot back at me." This aggressive bit of wrestling resulted in his pinning six opposing wrestlers, five of them in a row.

Pete lost only two matches in the 1961-62 season—to Bill Montgomery of Washington and Lee and to Mike Grandstaff of VPI. Grandstaff made the quarterfinals of the NCAA championships.

Green Was All-American Golfer For UNC

By Curry Kirkpatrick

Peter Green, a 22-year-old senior from Franklin, Mich., is possibly the one man who, in the past three years, has done more to spread the name of the University of North Carolina to the far reaches of the United States than any other athlete.

A husky blond, Green does his UNC good-will spreading as a fine, and at times, spectacular golfer.

Green came to Chapel Hill as a freshman in the fall of 1958 and proceeded to go undefeated in ten frosh dual matches. Chuck Erickson, present athletic director here, but then the Carolina golf coach, welcomed the links flash to his varsity team in the spring of 1960 and watched him continue his unbeaten string through all of the Tar Heels' 13 meets.

In addition to rolling up a fine record of collegiate successes in his sophomore year, the UNC star also found time to compete in the fabled North-South Amateur Golf Tournament at Pinehurst, N. C. Shocking the amateur golf world, Green rampaged into the quarter-finals where he defeated Dale Morey in a 20-hole duel. Pete went on to win a stirring one-up decision over Dr. Edward Updegraff in the semifinals to further send his own and his school's stock soaring.

Green was finally stopped in the 36-hole finals by Gastonia's season-ed campaigner, Charlie Smith. He beat Pete by 5 and 3.

A few weeks later, the Carolina stalwart led his older mates to the ACC Championship at Durham. Green, with a 73-73—146, finished second to Maryland's Deane Beman (present National Amateur Champ) in the race for individual honors.

Last spring (his junior year) Pete took up right where he had left off. The Michigan native was medalist in the first five Carolina matches and again went unbeaten the remainder of the year. Pete, however, was not so fortunate in the North-South tourney. This time Morey beat his old nemesis, two-up in a third-round match.

Pete climaxed his junior year by shooting a 69-73—142 to share the ACC Championship individual medal with Maryland's Paul Quinn. For his fine record, Green was named a college All-American.

Last summer, Pete further spread the name of UNC golf as he placed second in the 72-hole Porter Cup Amateur Tournament at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

UNC Frosh Win Baseball Title

The UNC freshman baseball team successfully defended its "Little Big Four" title as it edged the N. C. State frosh by one full game. The Tar Babies had a 9-3 slate for a .750 percentage. State also had the same percentage, with a 6-2 record.

The freshmen were led by Ken Willard and Frank Gallagher at the plate, and by Bill Dannelmann, Jerry Davis, and Walton Ward on the mound.

DUPREE'S

Sportscope

Curiosity sent your "sports ed" to the library recently and it didn't take long to find out that space has always been a problem with Daily Tar Heel sports writers.

Even in 1937, twenty-five years ago, Ray Howe had the problem. His usually lengthy sports column entitled "With Leave To Print . . ." read like this:

"The time has come to be weakly sentimental with sugary reviews of the enjoyments of chronicling the athletic triumphs of this our alma mater, but, being a slave to space as always, we forego sentiment."

The sports page of that last issue, May 30, was over 75 per cent ads and, as a result, contained very little sports. If Ray had had more room he could have chronicled the athletic achievements of some tremendous teams.

The football team, led by All-American Andy Bershak and coached by Raymond "Bear" Wolf, rolled up an 8-2 record, losing only to Duke and Tulane.

Ever hear of the "White Phantoms"? The Tar Heel basketball team of that year picked up the unusual name for a UNC team and registered a 17-5 record. Pete Mullis and Earl Ruth were two of the "Phantoms" who led the team to a second place finish in the old Southern Conference tournament.

Duke met Carolina on May 18 of that year on the golf course at Durham. The Blue Devils, on the basis of a win over strong LSU, were considered the best golf team in the nation, but Horace Hamilton shot a sizzling 66 and defeated Duke's Bill Dupree, as the Tar Heels upset the Dukes, 10-8.

Ramsay Potts and Eddie Fuller were the big guns as Carolina's tennis team walked to the national championship. Potts was the Southern Conference singles champion, Fuller was runner-up. The pair combined for the doubles title.

But, regardless of arguments to the contrary, Grantland Rice couldn't have been more truthful when he said: "It matters not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game."

SENIOR DEDICATION

With this in mind, these final sports pages of 1961-62 are dedicated to the senior athletes who played the games for three years in Carolina uniforms. Ray Farris, the president of the senior class, was featured earlier this week. Other senior standouts are featured today.

The UNC football team won five and lost five—a mediocre season. But who could ever forget the thrilling last-second 22-21 win over Tennessee?

Dean Smith's first year as head basketball coach was a disappointing season, record-wise, but it was a re-building year and those are always the toughest ones. Next year the Tar Heels will be strengthened by one of the best freshman teams in the nation. The future will be rosier.

Early season losses hurt the UNC baseball team and the low team morale was the prime factor in their eighth place finish. Here also a strong 1962 frosh team will help next year's team considerably.

But there were Carolina teams that fared quite well. Dale Ranson's cross-country team won the ACC championship, and Ranson's indoor and outdoor track teams finished second in the conference.

The greatest achievement, of course, was that of Don Skakle's tennis team which went undefeated until the last match of the year against Miami. Winning the ACC championship was hardly a challenge for these men—and there were no seniors in the top six.

Ed Kenney's golfers finished a close second to Duke in the ACC finals and Sam Barnes wrestlers did the same in the wrestling championships. Marvin Allen's soccer team finished third.

Pat Earey's swimmers won the ACC swimming tournament, but their third place regular season finish pulled them down to second overall. They finished seventh in the Eastern Intercollegiates and Thompson Mann alone scored enough points in the Nationals to give UNC 14th place in the nation.

These Carolina teams didn't all win, they didn't all lose, but they played the game . . . they played it hard. Carolina fans cheered them in victory and were saddened when they were defeated, but they were proud of their Tar Heel teams, regardless. Our senior athletes will be missed, to say the least.

Trio Of Seniors Were Big Men On Track Team

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Distance man Rett Everett, broad jumper John O'Bannon and pole vaulter Barrie Tiedemann were the outstanding senior track performers for 1961-62.

Everett, from Greenville, N. C., has been one of Coach Dale Ranson's number one runners for three seasons, specifically as a valuable member of UNC cross country teams. A diligent and conscientious worker, Everett set several harrier records in his junior year, which have since been broken by Duke's army veteran, Jerry Nourse.

Everett has the distinction of being one of the few athletes to have participated in collegiate sports competition in all three seasons of the school year.

After his distance-running duties were finished, Everett made the fall to winter transition and went inside to run the mile and two-mile for the UNC indoor track team. In the spring, Rett was outside for the outdoor track season in which he again ran the mile and two-mile for Ranson.

Vaulter Barrie Tiedemann, a Norfolk, Va. native has been a standout member of UNC cinder teams for three years and this past season, performed as the captain of both the indoor and outdoor squads.

Tiedemann, in the spring of 1961—his junior year—set a school pole vault record of 14 feet ¾ inches. That mark has since been broken by Heath Whittle but Tiedemann, in his last year, has consistently been up around the 14-foot mark on all of his vaults.

Thet auburn-haired trackman put on a dazzling exhibition at the 1962 ACC Indoor Games when het battled Maryland's champion vaulter John Belitza down to the wire before dropping out at the 14-foot level. Belitza won the event at 15 feet.

John O'Bannon, Marshall Va.'s contribution to the Tar Heel track squad has come through with some fine efforts in his three years here but the topper came last week in O'Bannon's final track meet as a UNC undergraduate.

In the preliminaries of the ACC Track Championships at Columbia, S. C., O'Bannon leaped 23 feet 6¾ inches to set a new conference broad jump record.

— University And Its Meaning —

objective in itself without the support of the purposes I have just attacked above.

Now this would mean that I am preparing to restate an ancient, venerated, highly unoriginal, and overworked plea for the liberally educated man which so many abler persons have done before me. Unhappily, this is the case, for I can supply no original panacea of my own.

* * *

Let us return for a mome nt to our medieval and European university, the one labeled here traditional. Somehow through the ages a strong white thread of clear purpose has united men of learning on the attitude to be assumed as a student of the world, whatever be the diverse points to which they have applied themselves.

This purpose has managed to remain at the core of western learning and hence at the heart of the university since its inception. Returning to Newman, his "idea" of a university is the proposition that all knowledge forms a whole, as a circle forms a whole, from which arcs are abstracted and called branches of learning. The awareness of this unity, of the circumference of the circle, is the end or "idea" of a university and is practically synonymous with the liberal ideal, which may be defined as a knowledge of first principles and relationships.

But Newman does not let this bloodless abstraction suffice, for he plunges on to speak of a "spirit" which surrounds the quest for knowledge among masters and students. It is the subjective enthusiasm for knowledge which makes of the university "a place of concourse, whither students come from every quarter for every kind of knowledge," and, a very telling phrase, "an Alma Mater, knowing her children one by one, not a foundry, or a mint, or a treadmill."

Two common misconceptions normally accompany the idea that one man can come to know the entire circuference of the circle, that is, come to know the first principles and relationships of most knowledge. The first is the feeling that an educated person should make a "Renaissance effort" and devour all learning. This fashioning of man into what Rabelais called an "abyss of knowledge" is we all know a practical impossibility today. However, this is not what the liberal tradition demands. It is the relative value and interrelationships of the various segments of learning which liberal education seeks. But will this not result in dilettantism? In one sense of the word, yes, for ALL knowledge is indeed beyond man's reach; he can only assimilate a portion of it. But a large part of truth and value consists in the study of first principles and relationships; hence, the liberally educated man, while not coming to know all the ramifications of truth within every discipline—the only true way to escape dilettantism—at least gets under the surface of appearances and comes to understand reality with a minimum of error.

* * *

Somehow, in the effort to raise a nation, we have passed by the iron ring of liberal knowledge. The utilitarian multiplication of the goals of education necessary to this effort has poured cement into our intellectual veins. The clear, direction-giving stream liberal education is in history has run out into a marshland of scarcely moving, dark waters.

At some point in this essay the point needs to be made that the sciences are but arcs in the ring of knowledge and are necessary areas of study for the student of first principles and relations. As Newman fought to get theology included in the ring, persons such as C. P. Snow must fight to get science included in a rong now being subverted by the students of the humanities. Of course, whether a person not specializing in science can understand its principles is still an open question. Is the liberal education ultimately possible only to scientists?

Yet another question must be quickly disposed of before we move to the value of liberal education for our times, and that is the matter of its applicability to the recent world, to the Post-Modern world, as Dr. Huston Smith put it during the symposium. Has the liberal tradition run out in this late world, has its philosophical underpinning any real value in the new world?

An essential characteristic of the liberal tradition is its amoral nature which permits it to be applied to any situation with its original elan, for it rests on man's essential, knotty, inalienable energy which goads him on to find what IS and to create what SHOULD BE, within limits, of course.

* * *

Hence, we come naturally and finally to an evaluation of this worthy goal for the university, having scarcely begun to extoll its virtues. The test of any concept comes in its application to the problem which it was designed to combat, or renovated to combat, which in this case is the multanimity characteristic of the values of the American university.

How would liberal education serve as the best purpose, or focus of meaning, for the American university today? The study of the same bare kernels of essential thought, using the same vocabulary, would condition the minds of educated Americans to precision, while rendering them supple and capable of handling the several world-systems current in the highly complex "pluriverse" we live in today. Politically, that which you would defeat you must know; hence, in the most political way, this learning is a patriotic necessity. With a common bare base of knowledge within which a considerable number of persons are siderable number of persons are one has called us would disappear in the common context of life. We would begin to collect tools with which to fight or at least to condition our modern Stoicism and hopefully would begin to anticipate involvement.

Perhaps most important of all, with this more exacting and highly reliable comprehension, we would begin to set more demanding standards for public acclaim and achievement and would require more from our contemporaries. With this common base, a higher degree of informed public discussions would carry the work of the university beyond its doors and into the discussions of the educated citizens.

In a society which is said to value individuality, no goal could encouraged it more. The individual escapes the web of transient destiny by being able to think out of his time, thereby transcending the spontaneous and ingenuous reactions he has when bound to a given place and moment. This lesson is at the heart of the autonomy of the judicious nature of the liberally educated men.

This consideration ends my highly traditional and unoriginal plea for the revitalization of the liberal tradition. Its personal nature is only a device, for it seems that the worth of the tradition is highly personal and hence understandable only when brought to bear on the individual. I have dealt with it here in its practical ramifications, but only to encourage personal ones. Is this scheme utopian? Today's student might well test his own university by asking what steps it has taken to encourage him at least to aim at the realization of what Newman called the "idea" of a university.
